SIMPLY fascinating, the way these new Whiting & Davis enameled Costume Bags deftly repeat a color note with several different costumes, or give a flick of contrast to a simple two-tone gown. One is tempted even to flaunt them a bit, color is such a feature of the mode this year. The costume jewelry departments are showing them now...frames in gold or silver finish...for day or evening.

The Profession speaks its mind on troubles of the gums...

Soft food is the cause of soft gums...

Dentists say... Ipana and massage the logical remedies

If you go to your dentist for a few moments' advice upon gum troubles, he will gladly sum up for you the latest findings of the profession.

He could show you lectures, papers and clinical reports by the hundred—the fruit of years of research by distinguished men. But probably he will give you the gist of it all in some such terms as these:

"Gum troubles start right in your dining-room at home. For the food you eat is to blame!"

"Before we began to refine our foods to make them delicious, people didn't have much trouble with their gums. The coarse fibre and the natural roughage made plenty of work for the oral apparatus. Mastication kept the blood supply within the gums in lively circulation. Gums were nourished—they remained in normal tone and vigor—firm, sound and healthy.

How soft food impairs gum health

"But what happens today? If you eat something that needs a little real chewing, you only criticize the cook. You demand tender meats, peeled fruits, soft vegetables, flaky pastries and fluffy puddings. Your gums are robbed of work. Their circulation falters. The tissues grow congested—soft, inflamed and tender."

"Soon you may notice a tinge of 'pink' on your toothbrush. That is a signal of danger near at hand—a warning that your gums need immediate care. The logical way to correct or prevent the trouble is to stimulate the gums twice a day through massage. You can do it easily in just a few moments at the time you brush your teeth. Simply brush your gums, too, gently but thoroughly, every square inch of them, inside and out. Stir up their sluggish circulation, and they'll soon improve—in color, in firmness and in health."

(Summary taken from hundreds of excerpts from authoritative dental papers, lectures and texts.)

And there are thousands of good dentists—among them very possibly your own—who will add:

"The massage alone is good, but massage with Ipana Tooth Paste is better. Use it for the massage as well as for the regular cleaning of your teeth. If at first your gums are tender to the brush, rub them gently with a little Ipana spread upon your finger tips after you finish brushing your teeth."

For Ipana contains ziratol, a stimulating and healing hemostatic. For years specialists have used ziratol in treating gums. Its presence gives Ipana the power to aid in building your gums to sound and sturdy health—the first step in preserving the natural lustre and beauty of your teeth.

Ipana is worth a 30 days' trial

There is a coupon in the corner. It offers you a ten-day trial tube. Use it if you wish. Certainly this tube will prove to you Ipana's delicious taste and remarkable cleaning power.

But ten days can hardly show you Ipana's good effect on your gums. One month is a far fairer trial both to you and to Ipana. Stop at the next drug store you pass and get a full-size tube (about 120 brushings). Use it to the last squeeze! Then will you know all Ipana can do to improve the health and beauty of your mouth.

As a service to its readers, Photoplay Magazine presents brief critical comments on all photoplays of the preceding six months. By consulting this valuable guide, you can determine at a glance whether or not your promised evening's entertainment is worth while. Photoplay's reviews have always been the most authoritative published. And its tabloid reviews show you accurately and concisely how to save your motion picture time and money. The month at the end of each review indicates the issue of Photoplay in which the original review appeared.

Indicates that photoplay was named as one of the six best upon its month of review

ABIE'S IRISH ROSE—Paramount.—The great and original Irish-Jewish comedy, played by likeable cast. [April]

ACROSS TO SINGAPORE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—A lively and fast-moving story, beautifully filmed. [April]

ACTRESS, THE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Adapted from "Treacle of the World," one of the most delightful of stage stories. After a series of peripatetic modern stories, it is good to see Norma Shearer return to her old-fashioned charm. [June]

ADORABLE CHEAT, THE—Chesapeake.—Nickelodeon fare. Life looks as bright as ever and she's the only bright spot in the film. [June]

AFTER THE STORM—Columbia.—Thrilling sea story with good human situations. Robert Montgomery makes a worth-while performance. [June]

ALICE DOWNEE GREAT—FBO.—The funny adventure of a country boy who comes to New York to "press" his pants with the Flitton building. With "Skeets" Gallagher. [May]

ALMOST HUMAN—Pathe-De Mille.—Original twist in this film is the human beings, told by three dogs. Entertaining and different. [June]

APACHE RAIDER, THE—Pathe.—Lee Mahoney gets all hot and bothered about a few screwy cows. worth, Charles Delaney and Eugene Gilbert head cast. [June]

AVENGERING SHADOW, THE—Pathe.—Introducing a new dog star, Kandila. Kandila has looks, brains and it. [June]

BALL OF PARADISE—Tiffany-Stahl.—A somewhat rowdy comedy-drama with a little old-fashioned pie-throwing and an invigorating prize-fight. [June]

BARE KNEES—Gotham.—Proving that the flappers are not as bad as their big sisters. With Virginia Lee Corson and Jean Winton. [May]

BATTLES OF CORONEL AND FALKLAND ISLANDS, THE—Universal.—An authentic record of two big naval engagements between Germany and England. The picture tries to be a "Potemkin" but misses. [May]

BEAU BROADWAY—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Allan Frinque and Sue Carol fight for the affections of Leon toped Gay, inconsequential comedy. [May]

BEAU SABREUR—Paramount.—Not another "beau sabreur"-a thrilling and picturesque tale, nevertheless. [June]

BELLEMY TRIAL, THE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—The audience is admitted to the court room of the most thrilling murder mystery of the year. [April]

BEYOND THE SIERRAS—Tiffany.—A Tim McCoy Western that will put the kids to sleep. [July]

BIG CITY—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Leon Chaney and Betty Compson re-united in a crook story in which Leon proves that he needs no trick make-up to make him a fascinating person. [March]

BIG KILLING, THE—Paramount.—Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton become all tangled up in a Kentucky feud. [August]

BIG NOISE, THE—First National.—Concerning a city election. And just about as interesting. [May]

BLACK FEATHER, THE—Wm. Pizer.—Very old mystery drama with what is known as a "looky backer" in it. Site of the old movie seen a little dented. [May]

BLONDE FOR A NIGHT, A—Pathe-De Mille.—A light domestic force made agreeable by the charming presence of Margaret Slezak, Harrison Ford and T. O'Brien. [April]

BODY PUNCHI, THE—Universal.—Al the makings of a good picture and some fine stuff that will go big with the men. You'll like it. [May]

BRANDED MAN, THE—Rayart.—The best part of this domestic epic is the titles. Why not do your reading at home? [August]

BRONCO STOMPER, THE—Pathe.—It is Don Coleman's turn to outwit the villains in this Western. Some good pictures of a rodeo. [May]

BURNING DAYLIGHT—First National.—An exciting tale of gold rush days that makes splendid entertainment. You'll like Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon. [April]

BURNING GOLD—Elfe.—A story of dirty deeds in the oil fields. [August]

BURNING UP BROADWAY—Sterling.—The pictures of the bootleggers and such, maybe a bit dull. Not worth the talents of Helene Costello and Sam Hartford. [July]

BUSHRANGER, THE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Tim McCoy goes to Australia and plays some roasting times of bushwhacking. [August]

BUTTER AND EGG MAN, THE—First National.—The famous pictures of a country lad (Jack Mulhall) who becomes an "angel" on Broadway. [August]

CAME THE DAWN—Hal Roach-M.G.M.—Max Davidson and Polly Moran have some bad moments in a haunted house. A short comedy, but funny. [May]

CANYON OF ADVENTURE, THE—First National.—Ken Maynard sets the western scenario afire again. One good scene. [June]

CHEAR IN THE STREET, THE—Warner.—The plot gets lost in the fog, too. [August]

CERTAIN YOUNG MAN, A—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Romantic two-reeler in Art Nouveau London society. A bit hulking but well played by Ramon Novarro, even if he isn't precisely the perfect Anglo-Saxon. [July]

CHASER, THE—First National.—Harry Langdon gets lost if compared to him too rough to be in good taste. Don't try if you miss it. [April]

CHEER LEADER, THE—Gotham.—This time the cheer leader rushes in and wins the game for dear old Alma Mater. All right, if you still have a taste for collegetoons. [March]

CHICAGO AFTER MIDNIGHT, FBO.——Ralph Ince in a vigorous melodrama built around the sufferings of another of those innocent crooks. [March]

CHICKEN A LA KING—Fox.—More lessons in gold-digging. Funny but rough in spots. With Nancy Carroll and Ford Sterling. [August]

CHINATOWN CHARLIE—First National.—Johnny Hines cuts down on the gags and builds up the plot, and the result is one of his best pictures. [May]

CHRYSUS KID, THE—Gotham.—Goody but amusing story of chorus girl, played by Virginia Brown Faire. [June]

CIRCUS ROOKIES—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Reviewed under the title of "Monkey Business," with Karl Dane, George K. Arthur, and a comedy gorilla. Good slapstick. [March]

CLOTHES MAKE THE WOMAN—Tiffany-Stahl.—Help! The Care's daughter is with us again, this time played by Eve Southern. The picture has its good moments. [July]

COUNS AND KELLYS IN PARIS, THE—Universal.—It was funny the first time, but not so good in repetition. Time to call a halt. [April]

COWARDS, THE—First National.—A good story of the World War The story of a brave boy who plays the game of cowardly one. With Helene Costello, Gareth Hughes and Donald Keith. [March]

COP, THE—Pathe-De Mille.—Once more the war-fetes between the cops and crooks. Some good melodrama well acted by William Boyd, Alan Hale and Jacqueline Logan. [July]

Greatest of his line

The greatest artist of the long line of the Lupino family that has made every generation laugh since the fifteenth century—Lupino Lane is also greatest of another line. He is the outstanding star making short screen comedies today. Lane's satirical comedies such as "Sword Points," "Fandango" and "Roaming Romeo" have taken picture fans, and the picture industry, by storm. To miss any of them is to miss a rare treat. Ask your theatre manager when the next Lupino Lane Comedy will be shown. See it. You'll enjoy a good, hearty laugh that will be better than a tonic. And you'll understand why Educational Pictures have dominated the field of short comedies and novelties for so many years. Educational Pictures always make a good show better.

ONCE more a wave of protest against the craze for favoring European players instead of encouraging American talent. Photoplay's story, "Two More Imported Love Birds," brought a lot of brickbats. The readers of this magazine want to know if there aren't young players as good as Walter Ilyn and Lily Damita right out in Hollywood.

Foreign stars of proved ability are seldom panned. Emil Jannings gets a flock of bouquets, although "The Street of Sin" is looked upon as a mis-step. Nils Asther is winning his way to the front. Richard Arlen is getting as many bouquets as "Buddy" Rogers—and that's a heap. And John Gilbert's Life Story in Photoplay is widely praised.

Since the release of "Sadie Thompson" Gloria Swanson has once more jumped into the ranks of the first favorites, along with Clara Bow and Greta Garbo. "Sorrell and Son," "The Crowd," "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" and "The Legion of the Condemned" are the most popular of the current pictures.

This department is your open forum. Step right up and make your speech.

Here is a little story that I think you may consider a corksing good argument for the movies:

One day recently the ten-year-old son of a prominent physician of our town fell into the river. He went down in fourteen feet of water and came up under a barge. His head struck the barge, knocking him senseless for a few seconds. As soon as he regained his faculties, according to his version of the affair, he remembered having seen Douglas Fairbanks in a picture when, in a similar close place, he began to fight the water with both hands. This the child did and soon reached a wire cable which was tied to the barge. By climbing the wire cable, hand over hand as he had seen Fairbanks do, he soon came to the surface of the water and was drawn up on the barge, little the worse for his experience.

In no field has the use of motion pictures been developed as it has in the educational field. I am a junior at the University of California and its extensive use in all classes has been brought forcibly to my attention during my two years of college work.

Our dramatic professor often assigned reviews of the latest photoplays containing the best dramatic artists. I am working my way through school, so I had little time or money. It was here that Photoplay became an integral part of my existence. I read the Shadow Stage up and down until I knew it by heart and then wrote my reviews. The Prof. was wise to those of us that did this little trick, but I imagine he realized the necessity and the ultimate value of the practice, because he never said anything about it.

The climax in the use of photoplays in class work came the week before final examinations. My professor of Folk Customs and Costumes suddenly made the bewildering announcement that there would be included in the final examinations, questions concerning certain photoplays he had recommended during the year which contained authentic folk customs and folk costumes. For the next week I spent every spare moment tearing around to movie houses with a copy of Photoplay containing the review of the picture in question in one hand and a note book in the other hand, seeing pictures I should have seen weeks before. Was I glad I had saved back numbers of Photoplay?

Mina Rudd.

Too much attention is being paid to whether or not an actor or actress will screen well. The question "Can they act?" comes as an after-thought—if it at all. Personally I am tired of witnessing blank-faced beauties and collar ads romp through what the producers laughingly call a play. What do we care for cross-feet, a wart on the neck or a tooth out of alignment? We, the patient, plodding, ponderous public, all have 'em and it's just a matter of getting used to it. Let us drop the threat of a new starlet or dandy and go straight on with the show! Perhaps that is the reason Chaney is so popular. With all his various annexes, amputation or appendances, as the case may be, we forget about them in his glorious acting.

If the film companies would spend as much time and money in developing and encouraging the talent they already have in Hollywood and vicinity as they do in conducting screen tests and inane popularity contests among the primary schools in the country, we might look forward to an evening's entertainment. For such precious few pictures as "The Big Parade," "The King of Kings," "Sorrell and Son," "The Patent Leather Kid," and "The Crowd," there are countless asinine excuses. The Wee Pups kids are cute, but they lack poise and the appeal that the older actors and actresses have.

Jane Adams.

He Wrote Every Word of It

Chicago, Ill.

I must congratulate Photoplay and John Gilbert on Jack's life story. It is both amusing and interesting, and really sounds as though it were written by Gilbert. It is far superior to the stories of Clara Bow and Greta Garbo. There is a slight suspicion in my mind that this may be due to the fact that Gilbert is so much more interesting than either of those two.

V. Keith Sutton.

Presenting....

in the blindfold cigarette test

MR. CHAPLIN was asked to smoke each of the four leading brands, clearing his taste with coffee between smokes. Only one question was asked: "Which one do you like the best?" He chose OLD GOLD.

Famous star selects OLD GOLD

"ONE cigarette of the four I smoked in the blindfold test was like shooting a scene successfully after a whole series of failures. It just 'clicked' and I named it as my choice. It was OLD GOLD. Which clears up a mystery, for the supply of OLD GOLDS in my Beverly Hills home is constantly being depleted. It seems that Strongheart and Rin-tin-tin are the only motion picture stars who don't smoke them."

Charlie Chaplin

How does OLD GOLD do it?

The answer is very simple. Only heart-leaf tobacco is used in OLD GOLDS. No coarse top-leaves of the tobacco plant... no withered ground-leaves. That's why OLD GOLDS are so smooth... why you can pick them in the dark.

SMOOTHER AND BETTER—"NOT A COUGH IN A CARLOAD"

REPORTS have it that John Barrymore is returning to Warners and the Vitaphone. He may do his Hamlet for the sound film. Meanwhile, he has one more United Artists production. It will be the story of an Alpine mountaineer and it will be directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

WILSON MIZER sold a story of three ocean gamblers on the ill-fated Titanic to Caddo Productions. He received $50,000. Now Caddo has decided to shelve the story because of its "lack of love interest." That's the way it goes.

DOUG FAIRBANKS' next, a sequel to "The Three Musketeers," will be called "The Man in the Iron Mask" or "For All Eternity." Doug announces that he will not insert any talking sequences.

RALPH SPENCE lays claim to being the highest paid title writer. He gets $10,000 per picture. And generally he's worth it.

UNIVERSAL is to make an all-talkie of "The Shannons of Broadway," the stage hit. By the terms of the contract, filming can not start until February, 1929.

THEDA BARA is to try a come back, under the management of S. George Ullman, Valentino's faithful manager.

REPORTS that Pola Negri is contemplating a divorce are denied. Pola and Serge Diavani are still happy, they insist. Pola says she has signed a contract to make two films for a British company for $200,000. She further declares that she has given up her American contracts. We didn't know she had any. From Deauville comes the news that Serge has just had two large rubies set in the eyes of the serpent-shaped horn on his Rolls Royce.

BAYARD VEILLY has been in Hollywood to supervise the plans for Metro-Goldwyn's all-talking production of his stage hit, "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Norma Shearer will be starred and production starts in September.

MRS. TOM MIX and little Thumas have departed for Paris on their annual Summer jaunt. Mrs. Mix issued the regular divorce denials.

NOW Pathé is filming the adventures of Uncle Sam's detachment of Marines with the rebels down in Nicaragua. It will be called "The Leathernecks," and the title roles will be done by Bill Boyd, Alan Hale and Bob Armstrong.

THEY'RE putting "Abie's Irish Rose," which bids fair to make box office records, through the studio paces again. The original cast has been re-assembled and a talkie addition is being made. Incidentally, you'll hear Budde Rogers' voice in the new sound version.

WILLIAM FARNUM, the veteran actor, has been made defendant in a suit for separate maintenance filed in Los Angeles by his wife, Olive Ann Farnum.

D. W. GRIFFITH has added Jetta Goudal to the cast of "The Love Song."

THE Princeton play, co-starring Charlie Rogers and Mary Brian, has been given a new title. It was called "Sophomore." Now it's titled "Variety." The Rogers-Brian team will be kept together for another picture, to be called "Just Twenty-One," Frank Tuttle will direct again.

CECIL DE MILLE is signing with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

HERBERT BRENON fell from a stage scaffolding during the filming of a scene of Ronald Colman's "The Rescue" and broke his right ankle.

HAVING recovered from an operation for appendicitis, Rod La Rocque is going to desert films for the stage temporarily.

Oh, those talkies! Wallace Beery sings in "Beggars of Life!" for the first time since his musical comedy days of long ago.

FLORENCE VIDOR is to return from Europe to play opposite Richard Dix in "Unconquered." Dix spent the greater part of August in northern Arizona doing exteriors of "Redskin."

EDWIN CAREWE, Dolores Del Rio, Miss Del Rio's mother, and the Carewe staff were to sail for Europe late in August. They planned to return in December.

W. S. VAN DYKE, the director who completed "White Shadows," is sailing for Capetown, South Africa, with a completely equipped company to do "Trader Horn" in the African interior.

BIG AS THE OF HUMANITY

IT'S an amazingly interesting picture, this latest production by the man who made "Mother Machree," "Hangman's House," "3 Bad Men" and "The Iron Horse." Interesting in that the director has in one picture made a world celebrity of an unknown—an extra girl repulsed and rebuffed for ten years in Hollywood.

They're calling Margaret Mann a sixty-year-old Cinderella. Patiently she worked and waited since 1917 for her big chance.

Opportunity knocked just once—and you should see the old lady grab the ball and run for a touchdown!
Hers is the one outstanding performance of the year! You'll love Margaret Mann.

CONTINUING PAGE

Cossacks, The — Metro-Goldwyn-May. — Love, sport and murder among the cowboys of Russia. (April.)

Count of Ten, The — Universal. — Something different in the way of a prize-fight story, with James Cagney. (April.)

Cram of the Earth — Universal. — A contemporary story of a butterfly and a shy college youth, beautifully acted by Marion Nixon andClaudia Callison. (April.)

Crimson City, The — Warners. — Drama between a couple ofucht in love; Low and Loretta Young — and you'll like Myrna Loy. (March.)

Crooks Can't Win — FBO. — Good celluloid good guys. Will someone please stop the film crime wave? (April.)

Cupid's Knockout — Hercules. — Just a fair-to-good comedy stage mirror which will give nothing better to do. (April.)

Zaa! Ivan the Terrible — Sov. — A realistic picture, made in Russia that, in acting and technical excellence, never has been surpassed. A marvellous performance by Yuli. If this comes your way, don't miss it. (April.)

Danger Patrol, The — Rayart. — A big whistling, fresh air drama of the Northwest with three rousing murders. (July.)

Danger Rider, The — Universal. — There's a saving dash of originality in the plot of this Hoot Gibson Western. (July.)

Dead End — Warner's. — An English production that gives a fair and impartial presentation of the Edith Cavel case. (April.)

Dead End Kids — Columbia. — Betty Compson, as a Parisian beauty, raises havoc in the Foreign Legion. (April.)

Detectives — Metro-Goldwyn-May. — Filled with the usual cap-tat-strap of the orthodox Western but made bearable by a plot with some originality and the charming presence of little Frankie Darro. (May.)

Devil's Cage, The — Chadwick. — No use bothering with this picture since there are no incriminating situations of a plot like this. (June.)

Devil's Skipper, The — Tiffany-Stahl. — Lots of blood, a fine chase, plenty of action, and the mutiny and revenge. Also a remarkable performance by Belle Bennett. (May.)

Diamond Handcuffs — Metro-Goldwyn-May. — A weird story, in three episodes, about the course of a diamond, probably written about the supposed curse of the famous Hope diamond. Some fine acting by Eleanor Boardman, Lena Malene and Cora Witherspoon. (May.)

Divine Woman, The — Metro-Goldwyn-May. — How an unly downhill becomes a great success, the grease marks. (April.)

Dixie Prince — Universal. — Bebe Daniels is terribly annoyed by William Powell and his rung bag. But Richard Arlen comes to her rescue. Fairly amusing up to the time that Bebe talks him into a marriage. (April.)

Fifty-Fifty Girl, The — Paramount. — Bebe Daniels inherits a girl and eventually turns out to be a gold mine of laughs. That James Hall is her leading Turk. Recommended to your kind attention. (July.)

Fire and Steel — Columbia. — Flaming steel furnace, with the young inventor, the jealous foreman and the girl. Ho-hum! (June.)

Fordyce — Paramount. — Florence Vidor's sympathetic and intelligent portrayal of a farm woman who tries to escape drudgery marks your attention. (April.)

Dock — United Artists. — Norma Talmadge is starred by a fine triumph, but the nagging script! An exciting stage play becomes a rather languid movie. (April.)

Dead — Paramount. — Vivid and swiftly moving underworld story with Gale Acton, Robert Young, Edward Arnold, John Litel and Wesley Bar. Recommended. (April.)

Drums of Love — United Artists. — D. W. Griffiths tells the Paolo and Francesca legend, but spoils it by changing the locale and by overlooking it with pagantry. Mary Philbin brings out with lots of IT and Don Alvarado goes a good performance. (April.)

Easy Come, Easy Go — Paramount. — Richard Dix stars in a version of the stage 'The Man From Nowhere.' A brightly, fast-moving comedy and Richard's best in months. (June.)

Escape, The — Fox. — An ancient melodrama that should have been allowed to rest in peace. With Virginia Weidler, Patric Knowles and Eric Wool. (May.)

Excess Baggage — Metro-Goldwyn-May. — Vivid and realistic picture of stage life. See it. (April.)

Faithless Lover, The — Kelbra. — The dam bursts again. But aside from that, just a lot of melodrama. (June.)

Falled Angels — Universal. — Norman Kerry tries through some goony doings in the role of a man who must play dead. Interesting but hardly cheerful. (May.)

Fandango — Educational. — Logano Zane in a hilarious brand of Spanish comedy pictures ever produced. (June.)

Fangs of Justice — Bischoff. — A regular old homely week for the poor cameraman. (May.)

Fasion Madness — Columbia. — Once more the profession of trivolousness is brought out by the hoi-poi hero. Claire Windsor is the girl this time. (June.)

Fazil — Fox. — Proving the sleaze makes bad husbands. Torrid deck in the desert. Not for the kindergarten class. (April.)

Feel My Pulse — Paramount. — Bebe Daniels is terribly annoyed by William Powell and his rung bag. But Richard Arlen comes to her rescue. Fairly amusing up to the time that Bebe talks him into a marriage. (April.)

Fire and Steel — Columbia. — Flaming steel furnace, with the young inventor, the jealous foreman and the girl. Ho-hum! (June.)

Five — AND — Ten Cent Annie — Warners. — This one starts good but goes goofy. However, Louise Catterson is the lass who gave up phony love for art. And Renee Adoree is in it. You'd like this one. (July.)

Forbidden Hour, The — Metro-Goldwyn-May. — Ramen Norvarro is at his best as the prince- charming. One of the story of art and love. And Renee Adoree is in it. You'd like this one. (July.)

Foreign Legion, The — Universal. — A follow-up on the popularity of "Beau Geste." If you are just frantic for Legion stories, this is your entertainment. With Norman Kerry. (April.)

Fortune Hunter, The — Warners. — Syd Chaplin messes up a good comedy. Why people stay home. (March.)

Free Leps — First Division. — Virtue triumphant in a night club. Just another one of those pictures. With June Marlowe. (July.)

Freedom of the Press, The — Universal. — Reviewed under the title of "The Prince of Peanuts," wherein a newspaper reporter, bless his little heart, tries to clean up the big city dailies. Interesting performances by Henry B. Walthall and Lewis Stone. (April.)

Frenzied Flames — Elbee. — For the boys — a movie of the kind that like to catch fire. (July.)

Fresh Every Hour — Universal. — Reviewed under the title of "The Prince of Peanuts." Nutty Nico and Glenn Tryon are a good pair. (July.)

Gateway of the Moon — Fox — Dolores Del Rio gets coy in a South Sea Island picture. This show will keep her close to the spotlight. (July.)

Girl He Didn't Buy, The — Peerless. — Light story of a Broadway love affair with an original twist to the plot. (July.)

Girl in Every Port, A — Fox. — The romantic adventures of a deep sea sailor, played by Victor McLaglen. And very enjoyable. (July.)

Give and Take — Universal. — A silly story but made into good entertainment by the expert comedy performances of Joan Hershey and George Sidney. (July.)

Glorious Betsy — Warners. — The romantic sagacity of Eric Blore and Betsy Patterson of Baltimore. Tricked up with a happy but unhistoric ending. Mildly charming, and decked out with Vitaphonic outburst. Dolores Costello starred. (July.)

Godless Girl, The — Pathe-De Mille. — A vivacious and exciting story told with all the force and power Cecil B. De Mille could give it. Inclu- sive in every respect. It is a real picture with splendid acting by Marie Prevost, George Duryea, Noah Beery and Lina Basquette. (July.)

Golden Cowl, The — Nordisk-Pathe. — Even Denmark has its share of the foreign drama. An exciting picture with an international flavor that shows the girl can take the gun with the big boys. (July.)

Gondola of Shang Ti — Warner's. — You can't see the picture for the shots. (April.)

Golf Widows — Columbia. — A comedy drama built on one of the terrible consequences of country club life. With Harrison Ford and Vera Reynolds. (July.)
GOOD-BYE KISS, THE—Mack Sennett.—The daddy of screen comedy fights the war in his own way. And do you think he hasn’t been funny? Sure he has! But there’s the real reason there’s entertainment in this here picture. (Aug.)

GYPSY OF THE NORTH—Raystatt.—A better than usual melodrama of the Northern mining camps. (Aug.)

HANGMAN’S HOUSE—Fox.—A good drama of Ireland, with some splendid backgrounds, a fine horse race and a fine performance by Victor McLaglen. (Aug.)

HAPPINESS AHEAD—First National.—What might have been a rather dull story is turned into fine entertainment by the splendid acting of Colleen Moore, Edmund Lowe and Lyman泰man. (Aug.)

HAROLD TEEN—First National.—All your old friends of the comic strip come to life on the screen. A small scale picture but a rather nice surprise to the fans. (Aug.)

HORIZON, THE—Fox.—The best Western in months. New plot, new situations, new gags and Bob Steele. (July.)

HEARTS AND HORSES GIRL, THE—First National.—A humorous and back-eyed story of stage life, which even Bille Dove cannot save. (May.)

HEART OF BROADWAY, THE—Rayart.—Color melodrama, but only fair. Pauline Garon, Robert Agnew and Wheeler Oakman head the cast. (May.)

HELLO, CHEYENNE—Fox.—That distinguished littérateur, Mr. Tom Mix, in a Western that is peppered with some of his own jokes. (July.)

HELL SHIP-BRONSON.—Gotham.—Noah Beery does some of his best acting as a rip-roaring old sea dog who dies of a heart attack. You’ll be sorry when virtue triumphs. Swell entertainment. (July.)

GREAT ADVENTURE—A. G. Steen, Inc.—What a stenographer does with one thousand dollars. Below par. (July.)

HER SUMMER HERO—FBO.—Why movie theaters need good prologues. (March.)

HIS COUNTRY—Pathe—De Mille.—Excellent heart interest story, with Pauline Garon, beautifully played by Rudolph Schlafkraft and Louise Dresser. Sincere drama. (April.)

HOLD ‘EM YALE—Pathe—De Mille.—Rud LaRocque enters a staking contest and why he can be critical about a picture so full of laughs? (May.)

HONEYMOON FLATS—Universal.—A clever little comedy of a married life, with George Lewis and Dorothy Gulliver. (April.)

HONOR BOUND—Fox.—Realistic but repellant story of a man who goes to a prison mining camp to protect a wild boy who has spoiled his career. With Britton and Estelle Taylor. Too much grief. (June.)

HORSEMAN OF THE PLAINS, THE—Fox.—A man who plays the same horse over and over again. A two week horse gets used up. (July.)

HOT STEEL—Fox.—In this picture the boy grows. He goes butter-and-egging for a kick mohcud show, Glen Tryon and Patry Ruth Miller are a good team. (May.)

HOUND OF SILVER CREEK, THE—Universal.—Dynamite, the new dog star, boasts an interior story to suit any audience. This film is no fluff. (April.)

HOUSE OF SCANDAL, THE—Tiffany-Stahl.—If you are not sick of cops, crooks and the inevitable girl who wins, it’s your own fault. (June.)

HUSBANDS FOR RENT—Warner.—Owen Moore and Kathlyn Ferry in a bedroom farce that will get by with only the less bright members of the audience. (April.)

I TOLD YOU SO—Leigh Jason.—This picture—only a re-teller—cost merely one thousand dollars. But what a story! It is shown only on account of a contract for himself on the strength of a pre-view showing. (March.)

JUDGMENT OF THE HILLS—FBO.—An interesting and human story of life in the Kentucky mountains. So strong it’s off to Frank Darro, a fine boy actor. (March.)

LADIES’ NIGHT IN A TURKISH BATH—First National.—There are lots of hoots in this adaptation of Metin and Zeki Suleyman of the same name. With Dorothy Mackail and Jack Mulhall. (March.)

LADY OF THE NIGHT CLUB—Tiffany.—Stuffy clown and a large number of affectionate of a cabaret girl. Synthetic heart interest. (April.)

LADY BE GOOD—First National.—How Dorothy Mackail can dance! And what a snappy performance that is! Dorothy Fields is featured with her. A neat little show. (May.)

LADY OF VICTORIES, THE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—The routine story of a gypsy, gorgeously presented in Technicolor. Only two reels, but a bunch with a lot of variety. (May.)

LADY RUFFLES—Columbia.—A mystery melodrama with a really—of all things! And some good work by Estelle Taylor and Lilian Tashman. (July.)

LAW OF FEAR, THE—FBO.—The best part of this picture is in the review of the private life of Ranger, the dog. (June.)

LAW OF THE RANGE, THE—Metro-Goldwyn— Mayer.—Tim McCoy in a thriller that has heart and brains. A nice performance by Bessie Love. (July)

LEOPARD LADY, THE—Pathe—De Mille.—A story with a new slant and a surprising end. It all happens in a day. (June.)

LET’S GET THE FRUIT, AND BANANA COME—First National.—Re-released in New York under title of “The Statue of Courage.”—An appealing favorite well acted by Robert Bartlett and Julia Bradshaw. (June.)

LEOPARD LADY, THE—Metro-Goldwyn— Mayer.—Nicely done story of a really disreputable girl. That ought to be sent to see it. (March.)

LEAVE ‘EM LAUGHING!—Hal Roach—M-G-M. It is the funniest of two. The first one was good. (July.)

LITTLE SPOH—Fox.—Surely the most naive romantic drama with enough sentiment to lift it above the run of war plays. (August.)

LITTLE MICKIE—FBO.—A sweet and sappy story, which Frankie Darrow and J ohn Kelton cannot help much. (May.)

LITTLE PHILIP—FBO.—The Shepherd comes— First National.—Released in New York under title of “The Statue of Courage.”—An exploit favorite well acted by Robert Bartlett and Julia Bradshaw. (June.)

MADE TO ORDER—Paramount.—A fine picture of two young people dreading to be married. (June.)

MAD MADAM—Paramount.—In Japan not a mere innocent love affair of a chorus girl. Lois Moran and Don Gray steal the cost, but Marjorie Beebe steals the picture in a comic role. (July.)

GRAY AND THE MURDER—FBO.—An awfully fine stunt about nothing at all. (August.)

LOVESLEY—Universal.—Barbara Kent and Glenn Morris have the best human interest story of young love in modern background. The girl has had more work but, on the whole, worthy your while. (July.)

LOVE LIFE AND LADY LOVE—De Mille.—Estelle Kelton keeps Papa and Mama from getting a divorce. Smart, light comedy. (March.)

LOYAL FOR A DAY—Fox.—A very poor genre—more a sincere love affair of a chorus girl. Lois Moran and Bob Baker. (March.)

LUCIE ADAMS—M-G-M.—Dorothy Gish and Conrad Nagle are the stars of this first Garbo picture. (April.)

LYLE, THE—Fox.—A beautiful story of a chance encounter and the bonding of Florence Vidor put this picture across. (August.)

MAD LOW—First National.—Elinor Glynn presides over a none too convincing story on the follies of being a movie screen beauty. (June.)

MAN IN THE ROUGH, THE—FBO.—Not a good one. Just a few scenes of a old man, tomboy daughter—and Our Hero! (July.)

MAN-MADE WOMEN—Pathe—De Mille.—Moderately good story, but not much. Good as a flirtation and love story, Estelle Taylor and Patsy Ruth Miller. (July.)

MAN WHO LAUGHS—The—Universal.—Drisy version of a classic that may interest the Americanafi. Vidor’s acting is the high spot of the film. (May.)

MATINEE IDOL—The—Columbus.—Bessie Love in the role of a girl who is forced by Johnny Walker. And you’ll love Bessie. (June.)

MICHIGAN KID, THE—Universal.—Thrilling melodrama of a hospital nurse and a horrid Alsee plot. With Conrad Nagel and Renee Adoree. (July.)

MIDNIGHT ADVENTURE, A—Rayart.—Something very nifty and baffling in the way of a murder. (July.)
For the new season Pathé has cornered the market on Youth and Beauty—players with color, dash, beauty, personality! Pathé's stars and players are youthful-comers—typifying today.

There's Lina Basquete, Jeanette Loff, Lili Damita, Nena Quartaro, Sue Carol, Phyllis Haver, Leatrice Joy, Marie Prevost, Jacqueline Logan.

PIONEER SCOUT, THE—Paramount—Fred Thomson and Silver King in a Western that strives for variety by having Thompson play a dual role. (May)

PLAY GIRL, THE—Fox—Madel Belamy in a gold-digging farce. Reasonably amusing. (May)

POWDER MY BACK—Warners—Irène Rich in an improbable but sophisticated comedy. It has a talented cast. (May)

Routine. Temptations of a chorus girl, with virtuoso performance. (May)

RACKET, THE—Caddo-Paramount—Thomas
Melanin, as a lone cop, cleans up a gang of racketeers, headed by Louis Lumet. (May)

Thrilling reproduction of the most spectacular sea exploits of the War. (May)

RAMONA—United Artists. A pictorially lovely version of Helen Hunt Jackson's novel of early California. Dolores Del Rio is excellent as the Indian girl. (March)

RED DANCE—Fox—More Russian revolution, produced and directed by Roy Rowland, with Yul Brynner, Ivan Limow and Dolores Del Rio head an exceptional cast. The picture is a real thriller. (July)

RED HAIR—Paramount—Clara Bow's hair in natural colors! Also an Elinor Glyn story of a gold digger who gives up all for love. For the Bow fans.
(May)

REFORM—Chadwick—Wherein a mused-headed psychiatrist reformer, played by Thomas O'Sullivan, with a bit of a crook by teaching her to eat with a fork.
(July)

RIDERS OF THE DARK—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—Tim McCoy in another Four. Roy D'Arcy's teeth in the foreground. (May)

RIDING TO FAME—Elbe—Does the villainous book—sucked in by its own ambition—get the

RINTY OF THE DESERT—Warners. An appealing and unusual dog story with the one and only Rint-Tin-Tin. (July)

ROAD TO RUIN, THE—Cliff Broughstrom.
—Spurred by the John Robie story, this film should only be shown to selected audiences. A sensational portrayal of a deplorable social evil, with nothing left undone to drive home this sort of thing.
(May)

ROSE—Marie—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—
Adapted from the musical comedy. Exciting doings and hot romance among the fur traders of Canada.
With Joan Crawford and James Murray. (March)

RUSH HOUR, THE—Pathe-De Mille—Conventional stuff, ornamented by Marie Prevost and Sewan Owen. Oh, dear, these cute triplets are working out very well. (June)

SADDLE MATES—Pathe—Wally Wales indulges in a lot of rough and tumble fighting. You've guess it's another '101 Dalmatians.' (June)

SADIE THOMPSON—United Artists. Gloria Swanson triumphs over the censors. A race, ironic and dramatic, produced and directed by Lloyd Bacon and Gloria's finest acting to date. Not for children or timidity, but just the sort of stuff for persons of normal, healthy mentalities. (April)

SAILOR'S WIVES—First National, A—fumigated sequel to "Flaming Youth." A couple of submarine officers have a fling, but it is mostly sound.
Mary Astor does her darest to act wild. (July)

SALLY OF THE SCANDALS—FBO—Bessie Love puts life into a backstage story that might have developed more. (August)

SAN FRANCISCO NIGHTS—Goetham—Mae
Busch, as a cabaret girl, rescues Percy Marmon from life in the underworld. Miss's a good trooper.
(May)

SAND AND THE WOMAN—Excellent. Shew-ing how a narrow-minded small town can be mean to a pretty girl like Claire Windsor. Lie on them! (April)

SCARLET DOVE, THE—Tiffany-Stahl—Military life in Carolinia. Mostly bedroom scenes.
Lowe Sherman—A most convincing young woman who looks as many gauzy uniforms as a Roxy usher. (July)

SCARLET YOUTH—S. Millward—Supposed to have a civil war novel moral basis; not really such a film that plays to "men only" and "women only" audi-cences. It doesn't let them know it's a good film and it features Tom Tyler and Little Frankie Darro. (April)

PHANTOM OF THE RANGE—FBO—Not the kitchen range, Gerdaline, but the wide open spaces.
It's a very good picture, however. It's a rather silent film and it features Tom Tyler and Little Frankie Darro. (April)

PHANTOM OF THE TURF—Warners—This time Rex Lease rides in and wins the race and saves the family estate. (June)

PHYLIS OF THE FOLLIES—Universal—In which Edwin Tinsman and Alice Day, as two chorus girls, scramble a butcher-and-egg man. Foolish but funny, (June)

PINTO, KID, THE—FBO—Buster Keaton's stunts will please the kids. That's all. (June)

They take the Guesswork out of "Going to the Movies"
Whatever you do, says Miss Van Wyck, learn to listen intelligently

DEAR CAROLYN VAN WYCK:

Just at this season of the year I always seem all "wrong." My clothes are faded and shabby and lack smartness. My hair seems faded, too—probably from the high, hot sun, for I spend many of the summer days on the beach. And my skin has been tanned so much (and I must admit that the aforementioned sun adds freckles to my every other trouble!) that I look horrid in evening frocks, and stupid in street clothes.

Does every girl, I wonder, have as much trouble as I at this "between" season? Just now—when summer is past and winter hasn't yet begun—is the most trying time of all, I think. And it is in this time that a great many nice things are starting—dances and parties and house party plans. Oh, I often think that a girl's whole winter depends upon how she looks at the beginning of autumn. If she is dowdy she's left out. And if she looks well, she's included.

What is the best way to go about the matter of a general making over? I'd like to know—for I want to be ready for a gay winter, and, I'm afraid, it won't be a gay winter, at all, unless I do something.

ELEANORA.

YOU are a wise girl, Eleanor, to recognize the advisability of a personal house-cleaning during the early autumn months. Although the violet rays of the sun are extremely beneficial to one's health—the violent rays can harm both the hair and the skin. And it is a clever young woman who takes steps in time to repair that harm. I have seen pillar girls, who must needs be in the sun all day, look old at thirty!

First of all, the skin. It should be treated to the best of bleaching, tissue building and astringent creams upon the market. The bleach will take care, gently, of the tan and freckles. The tissue builder will create firm, new surfaces, and the astringent will give freshness to the whole complexion. Choose a slightly lighter shade of powder, for autumn wear, than that which you used during the summer.

And, then, your hair. It should be brushed nightly, with a good tonic. And the rays of the summer sun often dry the hair—in that case use an oil tonic twice a week. And once every ten days, at least, shampoo the hair with a hot oil shampoo. And put a bit of lemon into the rinsing water.

About the clothes. Of course, Eleanor, the wardrobe would seem shabby by the coming of autumn. And rightly so. And, equally of course, it should be replenished.

One woman—a great author, almost as famous for her perfect grooming as for her fine books—gives up two weeks, every fall, to getting her frocks ready for the winter.

First of all, pack away the still good summery things. They will come in very nicely, next year! The faded ones, perhaps, can be dipped in one of the splendid quick tinting preparations—the shabby ones can be made over. If, however, some things are too shabby or faded for further wear, dispose of them. Hoarding useless garments is a miserly habit.

Next, after the clothing has been packed away, get out those things which were left from last winter. You will see, at a glance, which ones are worthy of salvaging. A fresh vestee, a bit of fur, a smart belt or flower will often work wonders. Go over the possibilities carefully, and pass on to the best part of the whole thing—the new garments.

Personally, Eleanor, I think that it is always best to make a list of what you really need. So many street frocks? A coat? An evening dress? You'll be able to tell at once. And then plan, with utter fairness, just how much money and time you can afford to spend for them.

A few months ago—in July—I wrote an article on "Choosing Your Type." Did you read it? I hope so, for that reading will help you now. It is quite necessary to know one's type before one buys. A good way to know what your type should wear is to look through the lists of the motion picture stars, for the one most like your own self. Then go conscientiously to the pictures in which that star appears and get, for yourself, the same sort of dresses in which she is prettiest. Motion picture women are the most chic women in the world, I think. You will do well to follow their lead.

DON'T be afraid of the unusual fashion—if it suits you. Only know where to draw the line between the original and the bizarre. And, if you can afford to buy only a few clothes, it is a good plan to choose them in different tones of the same color. In this way you can economize on hats and shoes and accessories. But if your wardrobe need not be limited, go as far as you like in color range.

In going to the shops, remember that you are a person. And that the money you have to spend is your money. Remember that you need not be awed by clever sales talk. Buy what you want when you want it. Be firm when you do not want a thing.

Do not buy the first frock that meets with your semi-approval. A half-hearted choice is usually wrong. When the question of clothes is involved. You are always happiest in the things that are utterly right. And you will know, instinctively, when they are right.

Just a hint—and I add this trifle of advice although you did not ask for it, Eleanor—remember that not only skin and hair and clothing are shabby at the autumn season.

On the screen Greta Garbo is a fragile, helpless siren in flowing chiffons. Off the screen she is an excellent tennis player in flannels and a sweater. Miss Garbo is the originator of the most popular current bob, with the hair worn long and loose at the sides and touching the shoulders.
A NOTHER shoulder length bob, worn by Olive Borden. Olive’s hair once was long and heavy, but she sacrificed it to play in “Gang War,” an underworld melodrama. Olive wears her hair off her ears and caught in a cluster at the back of the neck. She calls it a “compromise bob.” Who says that short hair is a thing of the past? Never have so many distinguished tresses fallen under the scissors.
Can a rich girl afford to be a movie star? Consider the case of Sue Carol. Sue's salary is $250 a week. Douglas MacLean, to whom she is under contract, receives $1,500 a week for her services. All of Sue's small share, plus her personal income, must be spent for the incidental expenses that go with screen popularity. So although Sue is one of the best of the newcomers, she never has cleared any money from her screen work.
THE reincarnation of Romney's Emma Hamilton. In "The Divine Lady" First National has given Corinne Griffith the greatest picture of her career. As Lady Hamilton she will play a woman whose beauty and spirit changed the course of English history. Corinne's resemblance to Lord Nelson's "dear Emma" is remarkable. "The Divine Lady" will be one of the most interesting of the new Fall productions.
A TERRIBLE injustice has been done to Eva von Berne. Upon Eva's arrival from Vienna, the report went 'round that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had promised to furnish Eva with free beer. What Eva really receives is free champagne. These foreigners have a way with them. The American stars, no matter how beautiful, popular or gifted, can't even persuade the producers to keep them in ginger-ale or soda pop.
JACK MULHALL—just a local boy from Wappingers Falls, N. Y., who has made good. Mr. Mulhall’s light comedies, with Dorothy Mackaill as his attractive co-star, have been among the most consistently popular of the year. Readers have complained that PHOTOLAY has neglected their Jack. Here, with apologies and with pleasure, is the very new est photograph of Mr. Mulhall.
AND The Gossard Line of Beauty answers it with the new Cunning-form brassiere. This exquisite little garment cups the bust to uplifted lines—the modern fashion dictate. Diagonal draw strings placed in the center front permit each individual to adjust it to her figure—and the narrow elastic insert at the back, where it hooks, holds it comfortably to the body. Following the natural lines of the body, it emphasizes and supports their beauty. Simply ask to see the new Gossard Cunning-form brassieres—they come in crepe de chine, georgette lined with net, silk tricot, and net.

Model 955 is shown here, made of crepe de chine. The shaped garter belt, made of satin and trimmed with lace, is model 59, $2.00.
Famous Beauty Schools choose Lux suds as gentlest to the hands • advise Lux for dishes

A lesson in "the perfect manicure" as given with Lux at the famous Schools of Cosmeticians in 12 cities*

Try this beauty treatment in your own kitchen! In washing dishes, use the pure, rich suds these famous beauty schools choose as most gentle to the hands.

RECENTLY, different soaps were experimented with by the National Schools of Cosmeticians to find the very best for use in manicuring.

As a result of these tests, Lux was officially chosen—because its sparkling, gentle suds were found most soothing to the hands!

Mrs. Pearl Ecker Hubbell, Dean of these Schools and famous beauty expert, said, after these tests—"I have issued instructions to our 12 schools that they are to begin at once to use Lux in manicuring and to let it be known to all of the students and all of the patrons who come into the schools.

"In caring for the hands, there is great danger in using soaps irritating to the sensitive skin of the hands.

"Lux suds cleanse so gently that they soothe the skin and keep the hands beautifully white and smooth."

A Beauty Hint to Wives

"For women in their homes, who must protect their hands in doing housework and dishes," Mrs. Hubbell adds, "I can think of no better beauty aid than the use of Lux.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots

By James R. Quirk

MAY I presume, as an ardent picture fan, to utter a word of warning to producers and directors in connection with sound pictures: that they do not permit themselves to get the impression that ear entertainment, in motion picture houses, is as essential as eye entertainment—yet.

With all due credit to the sound and talking pictures already made it cannot be denied that as motion picture productions they are of inferior quality.

THIS is not criticism. Every year the technique of motion pictures brings new developments. The two-year-old picture, while it may retain its full emotional value, is technically as belated as women’s fashions of equal age.

It would be regrettable indeed if, in the effort to perfect the technique of sound, there should be any retardation of the motion picture art.

THE sound picture is mechanically well advanced. It will come into its own just as the motion picture has, with time, and study and experimentation. If the producing companies rush pell-mell into it, in a frantic effort to apply sound to every picture they produce, it may result in a surfeit of mediocrity.

THE motion picture itself will always be the foundation of this form of entertainment. Sound effects, music and voice should be added only as fast as technicians are developed to handle them skilfully and discriminately.

Good cooks do not dump the ingredients of a fine cake into the bowl all at once. They stir each one in separately to avoid curdling and lumping.

PLEASE do not give us a curdle of sight and sound. We are getting along fairly well with the silent screen and will be patient.

But, if all the producers become panic-stricken through fear of competition and rush desperately into production of talking pictures, some of them are going to have as much chance as babies in a milling mob.

TO expect even a good director of motion pictures to make fine sound pictures today is like asking the first violinist of an orchestra to play his own instrument with one hand and the drums and traps with the other.

A DOLPH ZUKOR, the wise little man who built the big company, sat back and said nothing during a conference of his executives in which plans for talking picture production were being discussed. He said nothing, but he missed not a single word.

Finally, one of the more enthusiastic members of his organization turned to him for an expression of opinion.

Zukor took a puff of his cigar and a long look out over the golf course.
"Well," he said slowly, "none of us knows much about it yet. But that was a great fable about the hare and the tortoise."

JUST for the benefit of historians, I want to record the first talking picture gag. They are saying that a certain producer ordered a re-take of a dialogue scene because he couldn't hear the "k" in "swimming."

The pioneer joke of the silent drama was told of the Stern Brothers who are said to have indignantly exclaimed, "Our comedies are not to be laughed at!"

SEVERAL readers have written me to ask if Jack Gilbert was really the author of the life story which has been running in Photoplay under his name and which is concluded in this issue.

Gilbert wrote every word of it. There was no "ghost" writer. No one helped him. He needed no assistance.

THIS editorial note, however, is not injected here to emphasize the authenticity of Jack's authorship. It is to call attention to his literary ability.

Probably you have noted Gilbert's shrewd selection and handling of his material, his flowing style of expression. That marks him as a good workman in words.

It is interesting to note that Gilbert's ambition is to be a writer. He realizes that a star's career is short-lived—two or more years—with luck, five. With oblivion, perhaps, lurking just beyond.

I would not be at all surprised if in ten years he would turn out to be a successful novelist, his closeups long forgotten.

Stranger things have happened.

CHARLES CHAPLIN brings the old tramp costume up to date. This, in fact, is a hobo's Suppressed Desire as revealed by a dream sequence in "City Lights." And it is Mr. Chaplin's satirical reminder that the tramp and the ornamental officer are both members of the Loafers' Club.
The bob that created a new personality for Mary Pickford. Her hair is left rather long at the back of the neck. To Mary her bob means a new beginning in pictures, an adventure into unknown fields. Because Mary stood at the crossing of the artistic roads, she sacrificed the symbol of her little girl past, to be free to progress as a mature artist.
Why Mary Pickford Bobbed Her Hair

A Remarkable Insight into the Love that Existed Between Mary and Her Mother

By

ADELA ROGERS ST. JOHNS

MARY PICKFORD has bobbed her hair. Behind that newspaper headline lies a great romantic drama. It is the story of a mother love so great that it turned to gold everything it touched. Of a daughter's love so utter that it dominated completely the greatest career in screen history.

Of the founding by two women of an American tradition. And now it has become the story of a woman's determination to surmount her own stupendous personal popularity and become truly great.

The last act is still to be written. As long as her mother lived, Mary Pickford would not bob her hair. It wasn't only that Mary's mother loved those curls as every mother loves the golden curls of her baby. That for many years she never allowed any hand but her own to comb and roll them and prepare their beauty.

To Charlotte Pickford, those curls were the symbol of the wonderful child and artistic genius she had given to the world. They represented Mary's greatness. They were the actual crown of the Pickford sovereignty over all the peoples of the earth who love motion pictures.

How nearly right she was is proven by the fact that there is now talk of placing them in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C., along with Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" and other national prizes.

So, though she knew that she had outgrown her curls, though she knew that the world had passed by the time "America's sweetheart" wore curls, though she knew that her progress as an artist was blocked and her development as a star hindered, Mary Pickford went on wearing her curls.

She would have worn them until they turned gray rather than cause her mother one moment's unhappiness or regret during the last years of her life.

It wasn't fear of her public that kept Mary from taking this drastic step.

Mary Pickford is too courageous for that, she has too deep a belief in the power of the fine thing. Mary Pickford is an artist. As an artist, she would have been willing to gamble on the public's understanding, their appreciation, their love for her. Even from the standpoint of the box office, and Mary Pickford has keen box office judgment, she must have seen the inevitability of the result—that if she went on too far and too long with the outgrown curls and the outgrown Pickford tradition the public would continue to love her, but would cease to go and see her pictures.

No, it was love of her mother and care for that mother's happiness and the habit of bowing to her judgment in everything connected with her work that stayed Mary's hand and that made her attempts to at least do up her curls if she couldn't cut them, half hearted and feeble and therefore doomed to failure.

And, tragically enough, Charlotte Pickford's intense mother love blinded her usually shrewd eyes.

She wanted to keep her wonder child and so she held Mary back, held her to the things that had made her famous instead of lending her the strength and wisdom and vision to make the break from little girl parts into grown-up parts.

If, when Mary was past thirty, when an entirely new generation had evolved an entirely new type of girl, when Mary herself had grown beyond playing children and the world at large found such parts and such a personality as

As long as her mother lived, Mary Pickford kept her golden curls. To Charlotte Pickford they represented Mary's greatness. Now, with her bobbed hair she will portray a new "sweetheart"

Every ambitious girl who is struggling for success against odds should read this story of Joan Crawford's brave fight.

"To any woman, if she be honest with herself and her Creator, Life is a series of men—men who have influenced her growth, her career, her ambitions. Whatever we feel toward the man of the moment, it is he who is our very life and soul!"

WRITE my Life Story?

But how can any woman write her Life Story?

A woman's life is not a matter of "I was born here" or "I was educated there!" It is a matter of thoughts, longings, temptations succumbed to, or temptations repudiated. It is a series of sorrows which have carried her to the depths of woeful despair; it is a series of joys which have wafted her to such heights that the very clouds in their mystic, colorful glories have seemed to float in the heavens beneath her!

And to any woman, if she be honest with herself and her Creator, Life is a series of men—men who have influenced her growth, her career, her ambitions. Men! We may hate them; we may love them. But whatever we feel toward the man of the moment, it is he who is the very life and soul of a woman during that period when he dwells in her thoughts with her.

How, then, are we to write the Life of Woman?

There is only one Life Story I know which has been written honestly, without apology, by a woman. That is by Isadora Duncan. And it was not printed until after she was buried. After we are dead, what does it matter?

Photoplay has asked for my Life Story? It is an honor and I appreciate it. They wish me to write it in the first person. I have argued, I have said "No," I have tried half-way measures. So now I say to you, who are to read it, I have succumbed after weeks of meditation. I have consented to write it as I have felt it, for to me life is feeling. But with Joan Crawford, at the age of nine, with her mother. At this early age, Joan was waiting on tables and washing dishes to help pay for her meager schooling.

certain reservations. Everything that you will read in these pages is the truth as far as I know; but not all of the truth is printed.

Why should I camouflage about it?

There are certain memories buried deep within woman that she cannot drag out even though she wills it. The innermost corner of a woman's soul is a dark, dank, secret prison. Sometimes in the night she may awaken and feel a ray of light penetrating the walls of that prison. A memory awakens! She turns over, writhes in torture at the suggestion of it. She arises, turns on the light, gets a book, a bit of sewing. Anything to shut out that light which, through her subconsciousness, has penetrated her memory-prison. She pushes it back, refuses to listen; finally eradicates all thought of it!

Why should she listen? She is living; she is happy. Why should buried secrets be allowed to stalk, like ghosts, beside the road of Life with her? To every woman I say: Never allow the past to molest the present. Your life is your own: Live it.

I do not remember anything about being born. That was an event into which I was not taken into consideration. I am glad that it happened, although there have been many times when I wished it had not happened. I know nothing about my first father. I say first because I do remember a father. He was not my own but I did not know it.

My earliest memories circle around this man whom I thought was my father. At this time I was called Lucille Cassin. His name was Henry Cassin. He owned a theater in Lawton, Oklahoma.

It is to this theater as much as to my innate nature that I owe the birth of my desire to become a dancer. Night after night, I would slip down to the show with my father and stand in the wings watching... [CONTINUED ON PAGE 122]
Beauty is More

You may have a beautiful face and figure, says this authority on beauty, but you're a shell without personality and common sense than a bean. And beauty!—really, it's pathetic how they confuse prettiness with beauty, these dozen-a-block dazzlers. I tried to put her off easily...

"Have you ever done any modeling?" I asked.

"Well, no—but I've worked in the pictures," she said.

"I'm awfully busy just now," I started.

She interrupted:

"But please, Mister Clive, won't you give me a chance? Maybe if you'd let me take my hat off—fix up my hair—isn't there some place...?"

SAYS HENRY CLIVE:

"Beauty means not only superficial beauty, not only beauty that is evident on just a glance at face and form, but also beauty of mind, beauty of voice, beauty of character. It means, too, beauty of carriage, bearing, poise.

"There isn't a voice that can't be modulated and bettered. Liquor won't do any voice much good, either.

"Since time dawned, men have admired the curves of the feminine figure. Logic would be for women to retain those curves. But do they? They do NOT. They try to make their figures as un-female as possible.

"Nature did a beautiful job on woman's face—but woman seems to think Nature was a piker! There are too many girls who hide their beauty under too much make-up."

Henry Clive is a famous artist and one of America's experts on beauty. His father was Dr. Henry O'Hara, a foremost surgeon in Australia. Clive's magazine covers are popular throughout the world.

Henry Clive really needs no introduction to Photoplay readers. His magazine covers have made him famous throughout America.

Mr. Clive went to Hollywood to select a "Golden Girl" for Flo Ziegfeld's Folies. He has remained a long time in Hollywood, studying the celebrated beauties and working with Chaplin as art director. His reactions to beauty, as it is interpreted in 1928, will be of tremendous interest to women everywhere.

Mr. Clive is at present doing the covers of Smart Set.

HERE was a knock on my apartment door—my studio apartment in the heart of Hollywood.

I was alone; it was late afternoon, and I was just putting the finishing touches on one of those pretty-girl heads that you see on Smart Set's covers, when that knock sounded...

"Come in!" I called.

I heard the door open—and close again. I didn't look up; thought it was probably the Filipino boy, with another sheaf of letters from those girls who wanted to be models. I was wrong, for after a moment's silence, there came a soft feminine voice—

"Please—are YOU Henry Clive, the artist?..."

She was a pretty little thing—blonde and blue-eyed. You see hundreds of her on Hollywood Boulevard in a few blocks' walk. She didn't wait for me to answer.

"I know you're looking for a beautiful blonde," she rattled, "and I think—that is, I wish you'd pick me. I read in the papers that you're out here to find what you call the Golden Girl and...".

She was pretty, certainly, but she had no more distinction...

I motioned her to the dressing room, supposing that the quickest way out of it would be to humor her, and then make it plain to her that she just wasn’t the type I could use.

So she stepped into the dressing room and I went back to my easel.

In a few moments there was a hesitant little cough.

“Er—will you look now, please...?” I looked. And there she stood without a stitch of clothing, save for a little pair of black patent-leather pumps on her feet!

“Now don’t you think I’m beautiful?” she begged.

It wasn’t easy for me to break the child’s heart. I could see that at that moment her supreme ambition was for me to accept her as a model. But I could also see that as a model she’d never, never do—any more than the thousands of others like her. And that the very best thing I could do for her would be not to “stall her along” and try to let her down easily, but to tell her the truth.

And so, although I really felt like laughing, I mustered all my sternness and ordered her to get back into her clothes quicker than she had gotten out of them. And when she had, I told her things.

I told her the things I am now going to tell you; the things I want to tell every one of these “modern” girls who have gotten off the true trail in women’s ages-old quest for beauty and who have become all bogged down in a morass of false ideas and ideals.

Feminine beauty is my stock in trade. I am constantly on the quest for it. In that quest I have observed literally thousands of girls—tall girls and small girls; blondes, brunettes, redheads; girls of every complexion and type. Many of them were professional models. Many of them were girls of the stage and screen. But by far the majority of them were just girls from shops, from business, from factories or from home—girls who honestly believed they had the beauty of face and form that would qualify them to pose as artists’ models.

Now I’ll tell you something: I looked at those girls not alone with the eyes of an artist in quest of beauty, but also with the eyes of a trained anatomist looking for physical perfection. Many people know me as the artist; few people know that in my youth I was educated to be a surgeon. My father was Dr. Henry O’Hara, one of the foremost surgeons in Australia. He wanted me to follow in his footsteps and until I was a young man all my studies were bent. (continued on page 118)
Just as this article was going to press, Dick Hyland wired to say that he had given up the debate: Pictures versus Football, and that he conceded the victory to Miss Daniels. Bebe had just been back in the hospital again, this time suffering from a sudden attack of influenza due to overwork in bad weather. She's well again now, but Dick Hyland declares she wins her argument. When you read this article you will concede her victory, too.

HOLLYWOOD for the last few weeks has been listening in on an argument. It's still going on. Bebe Daniels, the screen's greatest girl athlete, and I got into a row about whether it was more dangerous to play football or act in motion pictures? In which could you collect the greatest amount of honorable injuries? Bebe has been doing stunts in pictures since 1914. I played my first game of football in 1914. We started even when fourteen years old.

And the argument came about when I called on Bebe in the hospital after her last smash-up. "Shush! No, you can't come in. She's asleep." The severe white-uniformed nurse was adamant. "You will disturb her. Cause a relapse."

"I will not. You couldn't kill her with an axe."

"What's all that talking in the hall?" Miss Daniels herself joined the conversation. It became more interesting. "Come on in here and let me in on it."

We went in and I raised the nurse five behind her back. She was a mean looking nurse.

"Hello, Bebe! How long are you in the hospital for this time?"

"Hello, Dick. Dunno. The doc says two weeks. They caught me with my back turned this time."

"Come to think of it, Bebe," I said, "this is happening too often. You take as much of a beating in pictures as I do in football."

Bebe Daniels has encountered more accidents than most of the other stars. Her fractures and sprains prove that a movie favorite's life is not the easy career it is painted so frequently. Concussions are always just around the corner.
Which is the Most DANGEROUS to LIFE or LIMB?

"As much!" she scoffed. "More!"

Now it wasn't what she said as much as the way she said it. She got the idea across to me that she considered football a cream-puff affair compared to the movies. No one likes to have their pet sport disparaged. But to have football brought in the same thought with cream-puffs was too much.

"BEBE," I said, "this last accident is more serious than I at first thought. Your mind is affected. Has a psychiatrist seen you yet?"

She attempted to sit up in bed and couldn't make it.

"Psychi—say, you never did get over that Alabama game and this proves it. Why—"

"Miss Daniels," the ogre of a nurse interrupted. "I really must exercise my professional rights." And so on and so forth. I left.

A month later I saw Bebe at her summer home at Santa Monica beach.

She had been partially correct on her two weeks guess. They let her out at the end of a fortnight but made her return to the hospital for a week after that and sleep there. Worked on pictures during the days—slept in the hospital during the nights.

"And did you ever do that in football?" she asked.

"Well, no," I was forced to answer. "But you see coaches are not as bossy by the box office as producers are."

"How are we going to compare smashes?" Bebe asked.

"You tell one and then I'll tell one," I answered.

"Well," she replied, "almost my first accident was when I worked for what was then known as Bison pictures. I splintered my leg. Nice little broken leg to start with."

"Pooh!" I said. "I've had one too."

"Yeh? Well, I'll bet mine had more splinters than yours. Did you ever have a dog bite your face while playing football? I did and here's the scar." She showed me a white line on her upper lip.

"WHEN Harold Lloyd and I were making fifty-two pictures a year, before either of us were very well known, I was in trouble all the time. They put me on a buggie horse one time and he threw me higher than a kite. I landed on the pavement on my chin. Score one fractured jaw for me. They had to take eight stitches on the inside of my mouth and they did it with a local anesthetic. One hour and thirty-five minutes on the operating table."

"That's pretty good," I was forced to admit, "but while you got a fractured jaw some southern gentleman mistook my head for the football in the Stanford-Alabama game and you can score one fractured skull and one concussion of the brain for me."

"Just one?" Bebe inquired politely. "I've had two so I'm ahead of you there also." I was beginning to feel that the game was being won by the home team and we were playing in the Daniels' back yard.

ONE of them was in 'Brewster's Millions,'" she continued. "I was riding a bicycle behind a big motor truck the camera was mounted on. The truck driver had a heavy foot and speeded up. I yelled at him to slow down as I could not pump that fast. He did. With all four brakes, I crashed into the rear of the big thing and everyone had a holiday for a couple of weeks.

"Another one was in New York. I was practicing some stunts on a horse for a picture. They put the wrong bit in my horse's mouth and he started tearing up Central Park. He left me and the Park about the same time and I did as nice a dive onto the pavement as Aileen Riggin ever did into the water. One concussion, muscles in back torn, two vertebrae in spine hurt, all scored for pictures. When I came to in the hospital I found another man still there who had been hurt by the same horse."

"Pretty good," I admitted, "but three tacklers hit me from three different directions at the same time in a Rugby game once and you can score five cracked ribs, three vertebrae knocked out of place, and a dislocated shoulder for football."

"Pooh!" Bebe said, "and tish! [continued on page 109]

Jack Gilbert Writes
His Own Story
By Jack Gilbert

Reel Four—Our hero is “discovered” by Elinor Glyn and the long awaited success comes

My first opportunity to realize my pictures came when Associated Producers was formed. Thomas H. Ince, George Loane Tucker, Allan Dwan, Mack Sennett, Marshall Neilan and Maurice Tourneur allied to make their own productions. Tourneur agreed to supply twelve pictures a year to the new organization, four of which he was to direct himself. Clarence Brown was to make four and the remaining number were assigned to me.

Brown and I were receiving the same salary—two hundred and fifty dollars a week. Under the new arrangement, both of us were to be raised to four hundred a week, with an additional ten per cent of the profits from all twelve pictures. I decided that a personality would not only add a glamour to my own productions, but dollars to my percentage. I searched for a girl whom I could develop and star. From among the extras on “The White Circle” set I found an eager child named Violet Rose. I gave her a test which Tourneur saw and approved, so we signed her up for two years and I changed her name to Barbara Bedford. Then I set about looking for a story.

I was a very happy man. Not only because my future seemed secure, but another and more important promise had been made. Leatrice had consented to be my wife as soon as I could gain my freedom.

From the East came Jules Brulatour and his fiancée, Hope Hampton. Brulatour was a multi-millionaire, the distributor of Eastman film and the financial backer of Tourneur. He was unhappy because the French director was leaving and urged him to remain, prophesying the downfall of Associated Producers. Maurice was adamant in his decision to produce independently.

He did consent, however, to direct one picture starring Hope Hampton, if Brulatour would obtain his release from Paramount for two other films which were contracted for. Jules agreed. I wrote the scenario, and directed the picture. It was called “The Bait.”

Jack Gilbert Analyzes His Pictures

“The Big Parade” concluded my career in pictures. I never expect such an experience to occur to me again.

“Other efforts have followed—

‘La Boheme.’ Artistic but never believable.

‘Bardelys the Magnificent.’ Applesauce, with Gilbert contributing most of the sauce.

‘Flesh and the Devil.’ Important for me because of my meeting with a glamorous person named Garbo.

‘The Show.’ Nothing to be proud of.

‘Love.’ A cheap interpretation of Tolstoy’s story.

‘Man, Woman and Sin.’ What a title! Could have been great but wasn’t.”
"I want to destroy forever the ac-acting was something to be improved upon. She was self-con-cious and had no knowledge of timing, but such were my efforts that after two weeks had gone by, Brulatour was bidding for my future services. I laughed at his offers. Nothing could persuade me to leave Tourneur.

Brulatour's reputation was that he got what he wanted.
He offered me five hundred a week to direct for him. I was grateful, but refused. His next offer was seven hundred and fifty. My head began to swim. I sought advice from Leatrice. We were anxious to be together and we knew that my acceptance meant working in New York. Besides, I did not particularly care to direct a star, so once more I turned the proposition down.
This touched Brulatour's pride.
His mind was made up. Within a week I had capitulated. A conference with Tourneur resulted in my release from his contract, and a new six year agreement with Brulatour was drawn up and signed.

My salary was one thousand dollars a week with ten per cent of the profits of my pictures the first year; and for the next five years, fifteen hundred a week and fifty per cent—one-half of the profits.

Two pictures were to be made starring Hope Hampton; then I was to have my own producing organization. Need I describe my emotions? No director in motion pictures had ever possessed such a contract. Bad luck seemed to have shaken my shoulders. I was twenty-three years old and
"the world was my oyster!"

Before I left Tourneur, I adapted, at his request, the scenario of Cooper's "East of the Mohicans." When I handed him the completed script he accepted it without a word and abruptly turned away. He never forgave me for leaving him. We did not say goodbye. The next day I started East.

What a picture I made! It was unbelievably horrible.
The story was awful. I wrote it! I was responsible for the direction. It was ghastly! The cutting was incalculably bewildering. I did it! It is inconceivable that the thing could have been so bad. There were many reasons. First and foremost among them—I was in love. Terribly in love and lonely. Second—Brulatour was in love. Agonizingly in love and not lonely. Rather I should say he was suspicious.
Third—I had no more right at that time to undertake the making of a motion picture than I now have of assuming charge of the Standard Oil Company. With Tourneur to run it for advice I was a thoroughly capable director. Alone, I was a mess.

I longed for Leatrice and California and begged Brulatour to give me a vacation, but that old fox said, "No, we must start another picture immediately."

My loneliness became unendurable. I had collected sixteen weeks salary which left a balance of thirty-six thousand dollars due on my first year. I offered to sell my contract to Jules for twenty-five thousand. He refused, and insisted that I prepare another story.

A few miserable days dragged by, and I again confronted Brulatour with a proposition offering my agreement for twenty thousand dollars. I was furious when he refused and stormed out of his office. What a lamb I was. I knew nothing of the fact that my boss was just as anxious to be rid of me as I was to leave him. I arrived at a decision. To hell with this town and to hell with this thousand dollars a week. I tore the contract to pieces and scattered it all over Brulatour's office. Then I boarded the Twentieth Century Limited for California. At last I was free! Brulatour might offer me a million dollars to remain, but I would follow my heart.
He might sue me, but let him sue. What could he get?

Some time later, I discovered that on the very afternoon which I had chosen to tear up my contract, Brulatour had accepted character of the film hero

Before his untimely death, I was with Rudolph Valentino on many parties. Rudy possessed a quality which I nor any other star will ever attain. Valentino seemed born to the purple. He was a prince of gallantry, and a gift of royal bearing made him the hero lover of all time.

I accepted a part at the Fox Studios in a picture called "Shame," which Emmett Flynn directed. When the picture was finished, I was offered a three year starring contract by the same studio. After much deliberation I accepted. And—I was an actor once more.

Of my two and a half years with Fox I have little to relate—except that I was unhappy most of the time. My pictures were cheaply made and badly done. When I begged for such stories as the "Seventh Heaven" and "The Sea Hawk" I was adjudged insane and temperamental.

"Cameo Kirby" was the only fine thing I was associated with at the studio. The management was not at fault particularly, but their policy at that time was to make as many pictures in as short a time as possible and profit on the quantity. But such a condition was not conducive to happiness nor to intensity of purpose.

I drank much more than was good for me and was convinced that all opportunities for a brilliant or even mildly successful career were gone. Leatrice Joy was becoming more and more successful while I seemed slipping into oblivion.

Then some good friends began to supply the ambition and courage which I had lost.

Kenneth Hawks, now, curiously enough, a supervisor at Fox, cornered me and said things that sent me home in a different mood than I had known in months. He had just seen "Cameo Kirby" and was almost angry in his admonition of my remaining longer where I was.

Then Howard Hawks, Ken's brother, took me to task. I was as good as "so-and-so" and better than "such-and-such," and the thing to do was get out and grasp the success which was awaiting me.

Even this encouragement did not cheer me to any great extent. I accepted it all gratefully with a "grain of salt." Praise of my efforts could not convince me that the future held any great reward for my acting.

Paul Bern urged me to get with an organization which could further my career, and told me that he had heard Irving Thalberg, then a producer [continued on page 101]

Howard Greer designs for Lilyan

For luncheon at the beach or the country club, what could be better than this sports ensemble? The quilted coat is of pink kasha. Its trimming of white ermine gives it a touch of elegance not usually associated with sports clothes. The coat is worn over a dress of pink crepe and kasha. This costume is called the Schuyler Road and it is a de luxe model only to be worn when one is merely an ornamental onlooker at sport events.

Half the secret of success is to start the day right. Any gown will look its best if worn over this fitted combination suit of white antique filet and hand embroidery. Mr. Greer of Hollywood makes clothes for American women. Notice, please, the trim, snug lines so hard to find in French lingerie, even though you may be willing to pay a breath-taking price.

For the afternoon, Miss Tashman literally puts on the Ritz. That is the name of this black satin street dress. It is set off by a double King Fox scarf. And, incidentally, single fox scarfs are now an indication either of indifference to fashion or bleak, grim poverty. With Paris going frantic on sports clothes, Mr. Greer pauses to design a street dress that doesn't look as though its owner had just walked off the golf links.
What to wear with the evening gown? Miss Tashman finds the answer in "Dorothy," a rose taffeta wrap. It has a shirred bodice and shoulders, caterpillar effect. Half concealed in the neck ruff are pearled camellias. The skirt is wide and flaring with a narrow fringed hem. When Miss Tashman steps out to a Hollywood film premiere in this costume, the crowd in front of the theater sets up a loud hurrah.

"And so to bed," in a negligee-nightgown made of black lace. The nightgown is worn with a matching coat of chiffon. But one doesn’t sleep in the coat, even on the coldest nights. This boudoir costume represents Mr. Greer’s revolt against the pajama suit which, he believes, is lacking in feminine charm.

Any woman who couldn’t be happy in this evening gown is just an old crosspatch. Mr. Greer calls it "Laco di Como," which means Lake Como. It (the gown, not the lake) is made of three shades of rose chiffon and is embroidered in silver and pearl. The skirt dips in the back almost touching the floor. The gown is one of the many reasons why Lilyan Tashman is known as the best dressed woman in Hollywood—and why she gets those ritzy rôles.
ALWAYS we see them—the stars that never were. And, almost always, we wonder about them. The extras who show the unexpected flash of high genius. The members of the mob—who never seem to rise above the mob.

Often we wonder why they do not ascend to the heights, these extras. For some of them have in their grasp the thing called "IT." Some of them have that intense—and intensive—magnetism that goes into the making of success upon the screen—that is, almost, the keynote of success and its symbol!

Some of them, also, have the true flair for acting. Unmistakable, breath-taking. And, recognizing it, we watch through picture after picture—half expecting to see again a face that we have only glimpsed before. To see again some face in its proper setting—to watch some spirit unleashed and given its real chance.

THAT woman, for instance, who moves like a jungle creature through a tiny section of one flaring reel. That slim, amazingly lovely girl, with the mouth that is half sullen and half wistful. Of whom does she remind you? And that boy whose eyes are sad—the one who limps, ever so slightly. Can't you see him cast as the hero of the post-war novel that set the book lovers of a nation to talking? And—speaking of post-war novels. Of pre-war novels. And of the war, itself...

We are tired of the war—yet. That is what the magazine editors, and the critics, and the directors tell us when we come to them with stories or with plays laid in those turbulent years between 1914 and 1918. We are tired of the war—bored with it. We don't want to hear of it again, ever! And yet—when some epic of the war does appear upon the printed page, when some battle scene flares across the silver sheet, we read it avidly—we watch it with eager eyes. And those of us who toiled through the mud of the Argonne draw shaking hands across damp foreheads. And those of us who knew sorrow-drenched Paris try to brush away the mist that will obstruct our view...
In the ranks of Hollywood's extras may be found the real drama of the movies. Here is the story of a Central American refugee who faced a mimic firing squad and seared his bit into celluloid. Fame was his—but he never knew Pasquale was quite unconscious of the grinding of a camera. Was quite deaf to the calling voice of the man who directed the scene. He took his place, against the wall, in a way that was utterly mechanical. Remember the peasant who was the second from the left? The gaunt, dark little man? The director shouted an order. And it was then that Pasquale made his great dramatic appeal. It was then that he had his great moment the doors of a casting office. His English was too meagre—his need was too great. His explanation would, at best, have read like fiction—like a story out of O. Henry's "Cabbages and Kings."

Only this—he had come. Winding a tortuous way along a trail that might end, anywhere, in disaster. By pack mule and motor car—a tramp steamer and in freight train—he had made the journey. A man looking wistfully ahead to a land that was not a land of promise. A man afraid to look back into a past that held only the agony of broken hopes!

He had been snatched—inarticulate, bewildered, almost ill—from a little prison. Infested with rats and rumors, with fever and with fear. The next dawn had been set for his execution—for he was a rebel and only a successful rebel is hailed as a hero! He was making his peace with God—what he thought to be his final peace—in the dark of the midnight when a creaking at his cell door, a whispered summons, gave him liberty. Almost before he knew it he was out upon the street—a blanket muffled about his face, his feet scarcely daring to hurry.

"If they catch you—no matter how far you may travel—" so his deliverer told him—"it will be death. But that—you know. . . We will carry you across the border—and you will be given whatever money we have, and our prayers will follow you. But that is all. You must—" the voice was rife with warning—"you must seek your own safety!"

And so it had gone. Silently, surely, Pasquale was smuggled across a barrier. Money—not much!—was pressed into his thin hand. A blessing was breathed into his ear. And he was on his way to—God knows where.

A man who might have been called, had his patriotism flourished, his country's saviour. A man who, now, would only be known as an exile.

He started out. Upon a journey that might have ended at any door—in any city. The

After all, it takes Mae Murray to put over a swift one on Hollywood, and the rest of the world, too.

In the case of the Mystery Baby it was David Mdivani who let the cat out of the bag or, rather, the child out of the crib.

Mdivani announced that Mae was the mother of a sixteen-months-old son, born in Los Angeles during the first part of 1927. The advent of the heir was kept a secret because “it might interfere with Mae’s career and because in Europe,” again according to Mdivani, “we do not publish such things to the world.”

Live and learn.

In my dumb way I always thought Europeans, from royalty down, boasted of such achievements; and that the “babies interfere with a career” legend went out with bustles and side-combs.

Mae was en route from New York to Los Angeles on the day that her husband broke the delicate news and when reporters met her upon her arrival, she politely intimated that it was none of anybody’s business. And she refused to give any further information as to the place and date of the boy’s birth.

The baby lives in Mae’s home, guarded by a Japanese nurse. Mamma will shortly embark on a vaudeville tour, leaving Hollywood to unravel the best mystery story of the year.

And what, oh what, does Auntie Pola think of all this?

When Doug and Mary left Europe for America, they sailed from Naples, Doug bringing along the usual hangers-on and derelicts he picks up in Europe. As Frank Case, that famous Algonquinist, once remarked upon seeing Doug show a group of visitors through the studio: “There goes Doug with a string of empty.”

It’s a job to keep up with these Hollywood heart affairs. Now Ben Lyon is giving Lupe Velez the grand rush. And rush is a mild word for the man who would keep up with Lupe.

However, Marion Nixon, who has been seen with Ben Lyon at the various places-to-go for nearly a year, doesn’t look heartbroken. She always has her pick of the boys.

And there’s “Skeets” Gallagher and Pauline Garon. You saw “Skeets” in “The Racket.” Now that they approach the “we’re engaged” stage, Pauline starts working on a vaudeville sketch which will take her all over the country. This coupling of romance and careers is no joking proposition!

The day after Alice White finally broke her engagement to aviator Dick Grace and announced that she had renounced men in favor of her career, she turned her attention to Walter Byron, Vilma Banky’s new leading man.

Poor Michael Curtiz, the director, is in wrong with his bosses. Michael was foolish enough to boast that “Noah’s Ark” would cost only $500,000 but would look like a million. The Warner Brothers rose to proclaim that the picture would cost at least a million and a half.

It’s sad but true that in this business many producers would rather have a picture cost a million and look like thirty cents than cost thirty cents and look like a million.
A MYSTERIOUS stranger called upon Richard Arlen the other night.

“I have information about you,” he began in a threatening tone. “It should be worth a lot of money to you to keep it quiet. YOU ARE THE FATHER OF A CHILD!”

Dick laughed.

“Sure I am! A little girl, seven, by a former marriage. Not more than four hundred thousand people beside yourself know this startling fact. I am mighty proud of this little daughter and often take her to the studio. But I tell you what I’ll do. If you can get any reputable paper to carry the story of this amazing discovery of yours—I’ll pay you fifty dollars!”

Then he bowed the stranger out.

Screen actors are frequently prey to this sort of attack, but, unfortunately, not all of them meet it with such aplomb.

A PUBLICITY man stopped Greta Garbo as she came off the set.

“Certainly.”

And when he had finished, “Thank you, Miss Garbo.”

LITTLE Harry Perry, Jr., has been raised on film phrases. His father is the film’s famous air cinematographer, having presided over the shooting of “Wings,” and for the last eight or ten months acted as camera genius of “Hell’s Angels.”

The boy was watching the goldfish in the Beverly Hills park recently.

“Daddy, I know what a goldfish is.”

“A sardine in greasepaint.”

A SERIO-COMIC incident following a tragic event. A Hollywood physician asked a woman for a small payment on her bill.

“I’d be glad to, doctor, but I can’t on account of Rudolph Valentino.”

The doctor was mystified, and said so.

“Well, it’s this way,” replied the woman. “I bought the lot adorning his in Forest Lawn Cemetery, thinking I could sell it at a profit.

“And then, when he died, he was buried in the Hollywood Cemetery.”

For the first time in four years, Lottie Pickford looks into a motion picture camera. Lottie returned from Honolulu about the time that Mary arrived in Hollywood from Europe. Lottie, who is divorced from Allan Forrest, has retired from the screen.

The old-fashioned hair ribbon—of all things!—is brought up to date. Anita Page wears a ribbon to hide the fact that her hair is growing out. It covers up those annoying stray hairs at the back of her head.

“I thank you,” she answered.

Fifteen extras who had been holding their breath gasped.

They had read again and again that Miss Garbo would not take still pictures, that her temperament would not allow her to be stopped.

That she never thanked anybody!

Which is all you can believe about what is said of these “temperamental” artists.

GRETA NISSEN has never met Greta Garbo! Two countrywomen who have stared at each other across the Montmartre tables with homesick longing without once having someone offer to introduce them.

And they say there are no conventions in the Film City!
Ronald Colman tells this one:
An author had written and sold to motion pictures a brilliant story called "The Optimist."
"Yeh, it's a damned good story," said the producer, "but we gotta change the title."
"I thought it was a fine title," demurred the writer.
"'Snot that. It's the public. Of course, you and me would know that an 'optimist' was a fellow where you go to have your eyes tested, but the public don't."

A BIT of humor overheard on the broad estate of Estelle Taylor:
Franc Dillon, one of the fond parents of the Beverly Hills Little Theater movement, is talking to Kenneth Harlan:
"Will you appear in one of our plays, Kenneth?"
"Sure," he answers, largely. And, as an afterthought, "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll put on my act for you!"
He had just been signed to do a talkie sketch for Vitaphone.
Marie Prevost, at his side, turns in time to hear Kenneth's proposal:
"Which act?"

Talking with Doug, Jr., the other day:
"Is there any way to kill that rumor that Helene Costello and I are going back together?" he queried. "I am all wrapped up in Billie and I want the world to know it."
And "Billie" is what he calls Joan Crawford.

Merna Kennedy is ambitious. She says she will not marry until she is sure that her man will be known as "the husband of Merna Kennedy!"
Probably this is her revenge toward men in general for having been publicized as "the leading lady for Charlie Chaplin!"
But we wonder what Jimmy Hall, the boy-friend, thinks of this ultimatum.

Charlie Chaplin was giving a dinner party at the Russian Eagle in honor of Lily Damita. Seven gentlemen and Lily were present.

The Grand Old Man of the Movies visits the Paramount Studio and is welcomed by Richard Arlen. Photoplay is glad to say that Theodore Roberts, for two years crippled by rheumatism, is well again.

Suddenly smoke filled the room. The restaurant was burning. Someone grabbed Lily and rushed her through an open window.
Now the argument is: Which man really saved Lily Damita? Those claiming the honor include: Charlie Chaplin, Harry D'Arrast, John Monk Saunders, Harry Crocker, the Marquis De Falaise and Count Jean Dilibur.
Evidently Lily has her own ideas on the matter. Anyway, she has been seen most frequently since the fire escorted by Harry D'Arrast. And every lady favors a hero.

When American people try to air their French on Lily Damita, she looks innocent and answers, "Oh, talk to mamma. She speaks only ze French; I speak only ze En-geelsh in deez country." Friends tell us that "dammit" and "what to Hell" are two of her favorite English expressions.

Low bow to King Vidor who returned from Europe without dragging a big foreign "discovery" in his wake. In fact, King says that there is plenty of talent in Hollywood and there is no need to import stars with fancy names and accents.
King and Eleanor Boardman Vidor went to Europe solely for fun and a vacation. Their little daughter, who had the tentative title of Joyce, is now called Antonia.

In spite of the much publicized trip of Dolores Del Rio and Edwin Carewe around the world, a little bird from within the studio whispers that, for the first few days they worked on "Revenge," the director and his leading lady were not speaking!
Talking of these two, no one seems to be able to find out whether the United States government is going to recognize the Carewe or Del Rio Mexican divorces. Not that it matters.

Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan decided they couldn't live together. Marie secured an interlocutory decree. Now they are being seen everywhere together and it is doubtful if the final papers will ever be signed.
Stealing the cop's stuff by concealing cigarettes in the hat. John Mack Brown holds the package in place with an elastic band. A bulky cigarette case can spoil the lines of a snappy suit.

Viola Dana and “Lefty” Flynn severed their matrimonial knot about the same time as Marie and Kenneth. Now, they, too, are domiciling under the same roof.

Doris Dean and Roscoe Arbuckle tried living apart, but all indications point to their re-union.

Billy Joy, brother of Beatrice, told us last month of the Scotchman who wouldn't let his boy go to school because he had to pay attention.

Now he informs us about the Scotchman who quit going to his lodge because he had to give the password.

The popular place for the movie-ites to vacation these days is Honolulu. Alan Dwan started the vogue in the dear old bygone days. Then Colleen Moore and John McCormick rejuvenated it early this season. Esther Ralston followed their lead and also Chester Conkin, whose drooping mustache was mistaken for a grass skirt on the beach at Waikiki. Others who answered the irresistible call of Ukedelaland include Laura La Plante, Eddie Soman, Helene Costello, Kenneth Harlan and Clyde Cook. Buster Collier is at present harking to the call, as is Louise Fazenda.

The latest to leave the celluloid shore were Norma Talmadge and Gilbert Roland. Mother Talmadge also went along, and a hitherto unheard-of uncle. Zest was added to their departure by the naive announcement in a Los Angeles paper which set forth specifically—and why, Hollywood wants to know,—that Mr. Roland would occupy a stateroom with the uncle.

Next November, Lita Gray Chaplin and Roy D'Arcy are making the trip to Honolulu, accompanied by Mrs. Chaplin's mother, so we are told. We are also informed that Roy and Lita are not announcing impending nuptials for the very good reason that one of the prospects is not free.

Gary Cooper paid New York a short visit and as a result a beautiful blonde from a night club has given up her job and has gone to Hollywood to get into the movies. She is leaving behind her a rich boy friend who got the gate when Gary appeared on this scene.

And just to prove that Gary cares in a big way, the blonde is showing the following telegram to all her friends:

“I shall hope to see you in Hollywood. There are things I can never forget and which I know you won’t forget. Yours, Gary.”

What could be more to the point? And wonder what Evelyn Brent thinks about these days.

A well-known director stood outside the hospital door which separated him from his equally well-known motion picture star wife.

Finally, after endless hours of perspiration and floor-walking, a doctor appeared from within the sanctum sanctorum.

“What is it, doc?” the director managed to stutter.

“A fine girl. She—”

“Thank God!” The director wiped his brow. “Thank God, doc. She’ll never have to go through this!”

Eva von Berne, the seventeen year old girl whom Norma Shearer discovered in Vienna, is a lovely youngster with a face of rare wistfulness. But her first job in movie-land is to lose ten pounds from the adolescent, roly-poly figure. Which reminds us of Vilma Banky when she first arrived in this country.

And this bit of information about Fraulein von Berne is passed on to you more as a scientific fact than as gossip. When Eva left New York for Los Angeles she carried with her a pair of black silk stockings. For why? Because Eva’s legs are a trifle plump and black silk stockings are slenderizing. Eva was instructed to don the dark stockings just before she faced the photographers at the train in Los Angeles.

Louise Brooks is famous in Hollywood as a gal who must have her sleep. Twelve hours a day keeps the doctor away, is her motto.

Recently Louise was sojourning in a hotel room in Jacumba, California, which opened upon the dancing pavilion. On location for “Beggars of Life,” not for pleasure.

It was the first night and the band played mercilessly—while the natives danced. [Continued on page 86]
C ELEBRITIES are not sell-outs in the cinema. No hero from another field of endeavor has proved a successful star in motion pictures. Few of these celebrities have made money out of the movies and none of them has established a permanent niche in filmland.

Even such operatic stars as Mary Garden, Geraldine Farrar and Lina Cavalieri; great idols and famous beauties, could not become permanent picture heroines, though they entered into films with a tremendous following. With pulchritude and ability to recommend them and countless thousands of fans to boost them, it seems incredible that they should have been surpassed by unknown girls of mediocre and unproved worth. Yet such was the case. Some may say the reason they did not succeed was because they were singers and their voices were lost on the screen, so that those who had loved them in opera and concert work were not interested when they could see but could not hear them. This sounds like a plausible theory. But it cannot account for the similar failure of Dempsey, Tunney and Leonard; of Ruth and Tilden and Grange; of Ederle and Kahanamoku. The public had the opportunity to watch these celebrities do on the screen what they had been doing before limited audiences. It was also possible to make boxing, baseball, tennis, football and swimming far more dramatic in pictures than in real life. Yet again the public was not interested.

Fay Lanphier, winner of Atlantic City's national beauty contest, thought she was to star in "The American Venus." But two players then comparatively unknown—Esther Ralston and Louise Brooks—ran away with the film.

Charley Paddock with Babe Ruth. The Sultan of Swat managed to get more money out of pictures than any other athlete. And he did it with a picture, "Babe Comes Home," that never made money for anyone except Babe. He got $30,000, thanks to his shrewd manager.

Douglas Fairbanks seemed to answer the whole problem of the celebrity when he asked a college boy, "Are you indispensable to motion pictures?"

Fairbanks has taken many young college graduates into his corporation "on probation." They have come to him asking for a job, their only recommendation a college diploma. Douglas has patiently talked to them about pictures, painted the glorious future for artists of the screen and has pointed out to them that there are many fields connected with the art besides the business of acting. He has offered them a job for three months at fair pay and has told them in that length of time to study the industry and his own particular plant and to find a position for themselves where they could prove indispensable.

"For," Fairbanks says to them, "there are many loopholes in this new business, loopholes where money is lost and art is sacrificed. Stop those holes, save that art. Make yourself indispensable!"*

At the end of three months, if the college man has failed, Douglas shakes hands with him and they part as friends. But it is surprising the number of young men who have succeeded in making themselves "indispensable."

It seems to me that each celebrity could well ask that question, "Are you indispensable to motion pictures?" And if they were honest with themselves, the answer would be a negative one.

For pictures is a business like any other, which has to be studied and mastered. Acting is an art and not a heaven-born gift that comes without labor. People go to the theater to be entertained, to laugh and to cry and those who make them do it are bound to be masters of their profession, just as the celebrities have proved conquerors in their fields of endeavor.

FOR many months following the summer of 1926 the most famous woman in the world was not Mary Pickford or Mary Garden. The honors were unquestionably the property of Gertrude Ederle, the greatest swimmer in all the world, the conqueror of the English Channel. "Trudie" had won an undying place in the affections of the American people. The day after she had set a new world's record, making faster time than any man who had preceded her and when she stood out as the only woman who had been successful in that supreme test, the world and all that was in it was hers. She could have named her own terms in vaudeville.

"Trudie" went to Germany instead. Days passed and weeks. Her record was broken by first a German and then a Frenchman. Another woman swam the channel. Still Trudie received a tremendous ovation when she reached New York and she signed a worth while vaudeville contract. She went on the "road."

Bebe Daniels was about to make a swim-mong picture for Paramount. It was to be the story of a little girl in college who won her man by swimming and, in the course of college events, got herself entangled in a channel race which she thought she had won. The executives, together with Miss Daniels, decided that the picture could be greatly strengthened by adding Gertrude Ederle to the cast. She would not be the star, nor even the second woman lead. But she would have an opportunity to show her swimming stroke and she would get a marvelous "break" in publicity.

THERE was no saying what the latter would lead to. Miss Ederle might screen well. Her part might be a stepping stone to cinema greatness. This was her chance. "Trudie" seized it. She left her vaudeville tour. All told she spent at least two months on the trip to Hollywood. Her actual work lasted less than a week. Her footage in the picture, aside from her swimming scenes, did not occupy much more space than that of a glorified extra. Her name was all that was wanted. For that name Gertrude Ederle received, after her expenses were deducted, in the neighborhood of $2500, or about $200 a week for the time she had consumed. Less money than a talented dressmaker or a fairly successful bond salesman. Yet she was the most famous woman in the world, and the greatest feminine swimmer of all time.

Like most champions Gertrude Ederle gambled when she accepted that proposition, gambled with the future. She hoped that this might lead to stardom, for it appeared that she would have a running start from the boost her name would give her.

Yet this was not the case. The public was interested in Gertrude Ederle the swimmer and not in Gertrude Ederle the actress. Miss Ederle

THE best of the season's crop of underworld offerings.

Bill Nigh, with a nifty piece of directing, harks back to "Humoresque" without becoming a carbon-copy. He gives a Jewish gangster a four-year "stretch," brings him back, lets him win his crook maiden and sends 'em both straight, after nearly crashing 'em into the pen again. For getting down to earth with the practical sort of love-making that folks like, our hat is off to John Gilbert and Joan Crawford. John certainly takes that gel in hand, and, boy, how she likes to be taken! Vera Gordon serves a brand of mother-interest that will hit home because she never becomes super-sentimental or maudlin. And let's not forget Carmel Meyers. Carmel slicks her hair back and gives us a person so plain that we have to look twice to recognize her.

IF THEY would give us more pictures like this, the silent drama would not have to fear the competition of the "talkies." However, "The Barker" is now having some incidental sound applied. You will hear Milton Sills' haly-hoo and persuasive call of the midway.

"The Barker" has a simple story which encompasses all of the elemental emotions in the everyday struggles of a colorful, intensely human group of carnival troupers.

Nifty Miller is a Barker who crowds 'em in to see his sweetheart-hula dancer. His passion for her is second only to his love for his boy. When that lad jumps his law studies to troupe with his father, her jealousy starts a miniature revolution among the seasoned old-timers. The complications which result blend pathos and humor in a masterful manner.

You will see as perfect a set of trouper as any circus ever boasted. Milton Sills, as the Barker; Betty Compson, as his temperamental sweetheart; Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as the son and Dorothy Mackaill as the boy's sweetheart fit their parts as naturally as though they had been carnival followers for years. There is no choice for a "best performance."

Director George Fitzmaurice was called to New York to talk "new contract" when the First National powers-that-be saw the picture. No wonder! He has created a picture of human-life rather than circus-life. You cannot afford to miss the humanness and the humor of this production.

THE WOMAN DISPUTED—United Artists

A DYNAMIC drama in which Norma Talmadge exalts a Magdalen to the level of a patriotic saint. She gives a picturesque, yet powerful characterization of a demi-mondaine; it is undoubtedly Miss Talmadge's greatest contribution to the screen. She plays with subtlety, delicacy, and restraint in a part which could so easily be morbid and maudlin.

One Mary Ann Wagner, an Austrian girl, is unjustly accused of murder. Two fashionable young army officers, a Russian and an Austrian, befriend her. She drops the life she has been forced into, and eagerly accepts the work they find for her. Both officers fall in love with the girl, and their life-long friendship turns to bitter hate. Russia declares war on Austria, and the three part.

The men go to their respective regiments, and Mary Ann to the fields with her countrywomen. She is regenerated through her love for the Austrian officer and her country. When the Russians seize Lemberg, her home, the unsuccessful lover, commanding the invading army, demands her embraces for the lives of many Austrians sentenced to death. The ensuing climax and denouement is drama of the greatest poignancy, powerfully handled by Miss Talmadge.

Arnold Kent gives a magnificent characterization of Nikolai Tourgenov, the Russian, and Gilbert Roland, as Paul von Hartmann, the Austrian, registers another personal conquest. A gorgeous production, smoothly directed—and a distinct triumph for every member of the cast.

FORGOTTEN FACES—Paramount

If this picture is a sample of Paramount's all-star program we are willing to take the full serving. A great array of talent is shown in this: Clive Brook, Mary Brian, William Powell, Baclanova, Fred Kohler and Jack Luden.

Yes, it's underworld. But an entirely different type of story, dealing with the sacrifice and regeneration of a lifetime to save his daughter from ruin.

If you enjoyed Clive Brook as Rolls Royce of "Underworld," you will love his superb performance in this as Heliotrope Harry, when he is everything from the dapper crook to butler in his own daughter's home. Slightly less important is Baclanova, the "furry blonde Russian." If you like fast-moving drama, with startling denouement, watch for "Forgotten Faces."

Craig's Wife—Pathé

William de Mille gives a brilliant picturization of a Broadway success, completely avoiding spectacular melodrama and forced situations. It starts quietly enough, but with a sure, smooth tempo, builds to a tense dramatic finish. The director has surpassed himself in his unique power to portray the intrinsic drama of the ordinary human frailties.

Irene Rich, as a woman who married wisely, but too well, has a rare opportunity to show her gift for intimate characterization.

Warner Baxter plays the rôle of the politely henpecked gentleman with marvelous sympathy and restraint. A simple story, yet its handling makes it drama of the highest order.
PHOTOPLAY Inaugurates Its New Special

HEART TO HEART—First National

This is one of those rare comedies. It is the last co-starring picture of Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes for First National. Louise Fazenda and Lucien Littlefield draw honors for the rib-ticklers. The scene is one of those little towns where an angular spinster matches her tongue against the weekly newspaper. A real princess comes to visit! But—more of the story would spoil the treat in store for you. Don’t miss it.

THE WHIP—First National

The first reel lays on the Garbo slinking sinuousness with lavish hand. She will win no lady friends with that! And men don’t want their “It” served so obviously, either. Otherwise the picture is okay. Fred Niblo gives us a gripping story of war intrigue. Garbo is a great spy as well as a great lover, and Conrad Nagel proves Madame Glyn was right when she said he had IT. So see it.

LADIES OF THE MOB—Paramount

The IT girl turns dramatic. Clara Bow steps right into a stark melodrama with a fistful of firearms and proves by her fine handling of this tense rôle that she has been “holding out” on us. The author of this story is a life termer in a California prison, and creates a vivid picture of gunmen and their “molls”—not cheerful but strangely sympathetic. You will scold yourself a long time if you fail to see Clara in this.

THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES—United Artists

A light-heavyweight drama, not as belligerent as the title implies, but human, sophisticated and worth while. Jean Hersholt as a business mogul greatly distresses a happy family by becoming entangled with a gold-digging blonde, Phyllis Haver. Don Alberto is good as the power behind the blonde, and Belle Bennett adds suspense to suicide as the distraught wife. Worth your while.

DOROTHY MACKAII’S first independent starring vehicle is a beautiful production depicting the sportsman-life of the English gentleman. But, despite the beauty of fox hunts, the excitement of Ascot races and a thrilling battle between Ralph Forbes and Lowell Sherman, it misses being a big picture through slow movement and jerky interludes. However, it is worth seeing.

A CATCH-ME-IF-YOU-CAN stateroom farce, from Ann Nichols’ play, beautifully acted, directed, and titled. It concerns the pre and post marital complications of six young things aboard a transatlantic liner, and they certainly do rock the boat. Ruth Taylor is pleasing enough as a synthetic heroine, but James Hall has turned out to be a super-comedian. Sophisticated comedy with the lid off.
Department Devoted to Sound Film Reviews

NOW and then Lon Chaney tosses his make-up kit over the fence and acts like a human being. He appears "as is" in this picture, which shows crook stuff at its highest tempo, dwarfing "The Big City" to the size of a newsreel, and proving that an occasional straight rôle is fine balance for big character actors. He gives a remarkable characterization of a tough dick. A well-knit story, exceptionally cast and directed.

 ANOTHER mystery-comedy, which Rod La Rocque plays with such seriousness that it is uproariously funny. Jeanette Loff is again his leading woman. The picture is filled with comedy business, much of which is provided by Tom Kennedy, who plays a dumb but persistent detective. Some of the situations are excruciatingly funny and the entire picture is splendid entertainment.

THIS picture is the wow of the talkies and the most talked about release of the season. It is the first time that Bernard Shaw ever has talked directly and face to face with the American public. What a voice and what a face! Although over seventy years old, Shaw is built like an athlete. He moves as gracefully as Jack Dempsey. And he has so much sex appeal that he leaves the gals limp.

The all-too-short reel opens in Shaw's garden with birds singing—tweet, tweet—in the distance. Then Shaw appears and you hear his footsteps—scrunch, scrunch—on the path. He walks close to the camera and goes into his monologue. The high spot is his imitation of Mussolini. Be sure to see this reel, even if you have to travel to the next town to do it.

THIS old Charles Klein melodrama is spotted with dialogue. It is not an all-talkie, since it preceded "Lights of New York" from the Warner Vitaphonic plant.

The story is old-fashioned, reeking of another dramatic day. Ready Money Rider, the powerful plutocrat, wrecks an honest judge because of a judicial decision. The story deals with the romance between the son and daughter of these two enemies. The dialogue, since it was lifted from the creaky old play, reeks of mothballs. However, Alec Francis, as the judge, and Lionel Barrymore, as the millionaire, do excellently with their lines, particularly Mr. Francis. May McAvoy and Willie Collier, Jr., come out of the affair with far less honors. You will probably find it highly interesting.

THIS is the first picture done all in Movietone, with dialogue, squawking children and all the bedlam of modern life. The story—if any—tells the adventure of a terrible family out for a horrible picnic. As a pleasure jaunt, it is just one long agony. And you laugh because you remember some such ghastly party. The reel proves that natural lines, without any attempt to be literary or dramatic, are effective just because they are natural. And ordinary noises—a stalled engine or the honking of horns—are funny because they are so completely true to life.

So see this picture, just as a novelty and just to find out what Movietone can do.

In the light that lies in a woman's eyes is the principal charm of the face, according to Preston Duncan. In this futuristic portrait of Myrna Loy, the photographer has subordinated her other features by lines and shadows to bring out the beauty of her eyes. And, incidentally, if Myrna were the wage-slave of a company which would give her better stories, she'd be recognized as one of the most seductive actresses on the screen.
DEAR JIM:

Here I am all set to hop off for Mexico from the same field Lindy started from. I'm going to see if I can get a job in pictures down there. No chance for an American up here; all they want is Mexicans in Hollywood. I've always heard of Mexico's vast natural resources, but I didn't know what these consisted of until I met Dolores, Lupe, Raquel and the other sparklers.

I'm always more at home among foreigners anyhow. Possibly because as a child I was stolen by gypsies. You have to like foreigners to get along in Hollywood. After residing there off and on for the past eight years I've all but forgotten my native tongue, as some of my faithful readers have noted.

Next to Italians I think I prefer Russians. The latter don't need to feel hurt for being rated second. I never lived in Russia, whereas I lived long enough in Italy and Sicily to be made an honorary member of the Black Hand. That was before Mussolini chased them all over to Chicago. I've never been back since. There are things I don't like about Mussolini; he goes too far.

When the Russian Eagle opened in Hollywood I went cossacking out to dip borsch with General Lodijensky. The General and his wife came to this country as refugees and made a fortune with their Russian Eagle restaurant in New York. Recently the General has been doing fine work in pictures. "The Last Command," in which he appeared, is the story of his life. He calls Gloria Swanson "Mammy" and tells you what Joe Schenck eats.

Corinne Griffith was there in a party with consort Walter Morosco, Antonio Moreno and Daisy, Marie Dressler and others. Corinne smiled and I moved into the party. Bill Haines happened to be in line with the smile and also moved in. People criticize Corinne because she seldom smiles in her pictures. She has to train herself not to.

JUST a glance from Corinne and a gentleman forgets himself; a smile and he recalls that Nietzsche said the secret of a joyful life is to live dangerously—and he moves right over.

Corinne started scolding me again because I don't write books and plays like everyone else does who has learned the touch system. So on Mother's Day I sent her flowers.

The Russians know how to be informal without being noisy: soft lights, soft carpets and soft music. The orchestra played "La Marsellaise" and Count Segurola, the opera singer who was dining at a nearby table, burst into song. The Count is making good in pictures, too. He is able to sing and keep a monacle in his eye at the same time, and this calls for facial control. When he had finished, Marie Dressler, Walter Morosco and I sang, "Here's to Good Old Yale, Drink Her Down, Drink Her Down," and we did not do badly at all considering that none of us had ever been to Yale for more than a semester, unless it be Marie. 2. In four issues (the June, July, August and September numbers) Photoplay Magazine is publishing cut puzzle pictures of the well-known motion picture actors and actresses. Eight complete cut puzzle pictures appear in each issue. Each cut puzzle picture will consist of the lower face and shoulders of one player, the nose and eyes of another, and the upper face of a third. When cut apart and properly assembled, eight complete portraits may be produced. $5,000.00 in prizes, as specified in rule No. 1, will be paid to the persons sending in the nearest correctly named and most neatly arranged set of thirty-two portraits.

3. Do not submit any solutions or answers until after the fourth set of cut puzzle pictures has appeared in the September issue. Assembled puzzle pictures must be submitted in sets of thirty-two only. Identifying names should be written or typewritten below each assembled portrait. At the conclusion of the contest all pictures should be sent to Cut Picture Puzzle Editors, Photoplay Magazine, 750 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Be sure that your full name and complete address is attached.

4. Contestants can obtain help in solving the cut puzzle pictures by carefully studying the poems appearing below the pictures in each issue. Each eight-line verse refers to the two sets of cut puzzle pictures appearing directly above it. The six-line verse applies generally to the four sets on that page. Bear in mind that it costs absolutely nothing to enter this contest. Indeed, the contest is purely an amusement. You do not need to be a subscriber or reader of Photoplay Magazine to compete. You do not have to buy a single issue. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals in Photoplay Magazine and assemble the pictures from the copies. Copies of Photoplay Magazine may be examined at the New York and Chicago offices of the publication, or at public libraries, free of charge.

5. Aside from accuracy in assembling and identifying cut puzzle pictures, neatness in contestants' methods of submitting solutions will be considered in awarding prizes. The thirty-two cut puzzle pictures or their drawn duplicates, must be cut apart, assembled and pasted or pinned together, with the name of the player written or typewritten below.

6. The judges will be a committee of members of Photoplay Magazine's staff. Their decision will be final. No relatives or members of the household of any one connected with this publication can submit solutions. Otherwise, the contest is open to everyone everywhere.

7. In the case of ties for any of the first five prizes, the full award will be given to each tying contestant.

8. The contest will close at midnight on September 20th. All solutions received from the time the fourth set of pictures appears to the moment of midnight on September 20th will be considered by the judges. No responsibility in the matter of mail delays or losses will rest with Photoplay Magazine. Send your answers as soon as possible after the last set of cut puzzle pictures appears in the September issue, which will appear on the newsstands on or about August 15th. The prize winners will be announced in the January, 1929, issue of Photoplay.

Cut Puzzle Pictures Are on Second and Third Pages Following This Announcement

Suggestions

Just to aid you in getting your solutions under way, Photoplay will tell you the name of one of the players in the first set of cut-face pictures, which appeared in the June issue. This player is Harry Crocker. Since this actor has appeared but rarely in films, Photoplay feels that his inclusion may have been a little unfair to contestants. All the others included in the contest are well known players.

Contestants should study the poems appearing in connection with the cut puzzle pictures. These are the indicators for identifying the contest puzzle pictures and winning prizes. Contestants will note that identifying numbers appear at the margin of the cut puzzle pictures.

These numbers may be copied upon the cut portraits, with pencil or pen, so that, in pasting or pinning the completed portrait, it will be possible to show the way the cut pieces originally appeared.
AN interesting informal photograph of the real Lillian Gish. Miss Gish is now in Austria working under the tutelage of Max Reinhardt. Like other far-seeing stars, she is studying voice culture under European specialists, with a view to making a talking picture. Technically one of the screen's best pantomimists, all of Lillian's childhood training was on the speaking stage.
The hair went to school in two great foreign towns,
The eyes with "Don Juan" walked away;
The mouth has a father who acted so well
He was king of the screen's yesterday.
The hair to a fighter is happily wed,
The eye have a sister who acts;
The mouth charmed the star of the greatest war film—
Can you put together these facts?

The hair was superb in a Barrymore film,
The eyes knew the midnight sun's gleam—
The mouth has a mind that is brilliant and fine,
And she's lovely as any man's dream!
The hair is light brown—it is tinted with gold,
The eyes were an Englishman's wife.
The mouth—though she's been on the screen for some time—
Now does the best work of her life.

RESUME
Two of them are married, two dodge Cupid's wiles,
Three of them were born in the States,
And one of them starred in a famous Glyn play
Which dealt with a changing of mates.
Two of them are fair—and two much more brunette.
"And this is the end—have you got them right yet?"
The hair, of dark brown, in Atlanta was born,
The eyes have a daughter and wife;
The mouth, too, has married a lovely blonde girl,
We hope that he's settled for life.
The hair was a star for the old Vitagraph,
The eyes are a native of Spain;
The mouth weighs one-sixty—he's quite six feet tall—
He's a chap that they call 'right as rain!'
The hair has known footlights since he was a tot,
The eyes are a native of Spain;

On the opposite page you will find Richard Barthelmess' Plea for Privacy. Dick thinks that the public's interest in a movie personality should end with his shadow self. He doesn't believe that stars should be on public view for twenty-four hours like a six-day bicycle racer or a marathon dancer. Read the Anti-Publicity Plank of Mr. Barthelmess' platform.
A Plea for Privacy

Richard Barthelmess tells why he wants to keep his domestic life separated from his professional career

WHEN Richard Barthelmess and Mary Hay had been divorced only a short time, Dick, in some bitterness, made these predictions:

1. That if he ever married again it would be a woman outside of the profession.
2. That if he married again, he would keep his domestic life completely separated from his professional existence.
3. That the public should never be allowed to interfere with his private affairs.

The first prediction came true recently when Dick married Mrs. Jessica Sargent, a New York society woman. Now Dick is in the process of trying to keep his other promises to himself.

He met Mrs. Sargent on a trip to Paris. But it was not until he met her again in Hollywood at a party given by John Colton that they became engaged. Dick's little daughter, Mary Hay Barthelmess, was about to return to her mother for six months and Dick had planned a vacation trip to Honolulu.

Wedding plans were quickly made. The pair were married in Reno, and Dick's vacation trip became a honeymoon. Now for the second prediction.

Dick was a lonely figure before his marriage. He is one of the anomalies of the industry. It is one of fate's freaks when an aloof, withdrawn lad, a young man of inherent reticence, is thrust, by fluke of circumstance and accident of ability, into a flood of limelight which really frightens him.

Fame is considered one of the rewards of accomplishment. To Barthelmess it is one of the greatest penalties. And he fears, from experience, the things it can do to him.

"It isn't as if we were really important," he told me. "Nothing will ever convince me that I am actually important to anyone in the world outside of my dependents and the few people besides who are fond of me. We aren't celebrities. We are curiosities.

"Well then—since we are not important—is it fair that this thing—this artificial sort of prominence—should be allowed to interfere with our lives outside the studio?"

"I am a wage earner. As such I have a duty to my customers. If my product is satisfactory I succeed in this duty. If it is not—I'll soon find it out!

"But I insist that my life outside the studio should be my own affair!"

I gather that Dick feels that marriage between two members of the profession is almost doomed at the outset because of the constant surveillance to which they are subjected. There are the old problems of two careers in one family, of course. But I think it is outside interference that he fears the most.

"If both members of a family are engaged in public careers, there is no escape for them," he has said.

"If they would not make as public figures—but they do. We become symbols of something or other and people demand that we set examples. I maintain that it is not a part of our job.

"The thing makes prisoners of us. We cannot go to public places without attracting attention. We must be constantly on our guard to avoid offending somebody. Our homes, then, become sanctuaries—the only places where we can be ourselves. I will not have my home invaded by the glare of publicity!"

HE means it. He will not allow any pictures to be made of himself and his bride for publication. He will give out no interviews about his marriage. Few people in the picture colony have met Mrs. Barthelmess. And it is certain that the pair will not appear at any public functions where she will be, as it were, on display. Dick is trying to make his predictions come true.

"The thing comes from the fact that the public confuses us with our products," he explains. "It is funny. No one confuses a watch-maker with the watches he makes. Nor an artist with the pictures he paints. Nor even a novelist with the characters he creates.

"But people do confuse a screen actor with the characters he portrays upon the screen. They imbue him with the attributes of the people he seems to be, from time to time, in pictures.

"It is not Barthelmess in whom they are interested. It is the man he seemed to be when they saw him in a picture.

"They liked the character. He was surrounded with glamour. For all they know, the real Barthelmess might be a man who would beat little children for fun. But they don't consider that. They think I am the man they saw in the theater upon the screen.

"I have never approved of personal publicity accounts of a screen actor's private life—an attempt to make a colorful, glamorous character of the man. That is the thing [continued on page 121]

When Dick Barthelmess married Mrs. Jessica Sargent he made a vow that his home would never be invaded by publicity. "Two people," he says, "cannot live in the public eye constantly and keep their perspective on life."
How real are those screen love scenes? How sincere are movie kisses? Read this amusing short story about two “Great Lovers”—and an ex-wife.

A studio waitress is not in the habit of expressing amazement. She usually looks like an actor with the other expression. Therefore, the waitress who received this order simply allowed her pencil to hesitate for the fraction of a second above the yellow slip.

When the order arrived the beautiful, blonde star pushed the sandwich and the salad away in a disinterested manner and drew the plate of onions to her. Her little white teeth bit into them and she munched them down to the bright green stems. Her eyes looked as radiant as if she had been sipping champagne. She ate them all, even the smallest, most dejected looking one on the plate, called for her check and paid her bill with the air of one whose day had been a complete success.

She arrived on the set a few minutes later and, opening the large make-up case that never left her side, powdered her nose and smoothed the rouge on her lips.

A man, whom you could recognize at once as a director, because he did not wear puttees nor carry a megaphone, came over to her and pulled up a chair beside hers.

"Now, Felicite, as soon as Andy gets here . . ."
She glanced at her watch. "Not here yet?" And then—complacently—"I'm on time."

The director did not answer, but went right on. If you did not already know that he was a director, this habit would indicate it.

"We are going to do the big love scenes. He comes into the room and you've been waiting for him. Gee, but you're glad to see him!"
"I am, am I?"
"And you say, 'Darling, I knew you'd come back.'"
A gay voice from the other side of the set echoed across the stage. "Here I am," the voice chirped.

The director jumped from his chair. "All right, Andy, you and Felicite on the set!"

The action was rehearsed. The cameras cranked.

Felicite sat beneath the lights with her lovely hands folded.
He clasped her in his arms. Arms about each other, he helped her to the couch. They sank down on it together and he kissed her little mouth with passion and tenderness. "Oh, how beautiful," murmured the visitor from Iowa. "That was fine," said the director.

Felicite opened her blue eyes as wide as the lids would permit. "Why, what is the matter, Andy?" she asked softly, "You little wench!"

"Quiet, dear," she said sweetly, "visitors on the set."

"Oh, hell!" muttered Andy, and with just provocation.

That was just the trouble with these co-starring teams. You always had to have half the team a woman, and women always took too many advantages. Onions in a love scene! Of all the dirty tricks! Couldn't she have eaten onions when she was between pictures? Onions in a love scene! As if trying to steal all his good scenes wasn't enough. Why, she upstaged him so that when they began a piece of action in the middle of the room they both had their backs to the wall by the time it was finished. And then the joint interviews! She always wormed her way into the writer's good graces and made supposedly subtle but all too obvious remarks about him. She told everyone he was a lovely fellow and then turned around and said something nasty. She just wanted to annoy him. For no good reason, either. He had always been nice to her. It was just because they were co-starred that she hated him so much.

She sat chatting with a newspaper man. He could hear her low, insincere voice.

"Oh, I adore working with Mr. Wheaton," she said. "He's so generous in scenes. Gives the other fellow the break, you know. He excels in comedy situations because he's naturally so funny, but there is something not quite sincere about his love scenes. That, I imagine, is due to the fact that he's such a great, big strong man that he seems timid in front of the camera."

Andrew Wheaton timid in front of the camera! He'd be damned if he'd sit by and let her say it. He walked over to the pair with these stinging words on the tip of his tongue, "Timid in front of the camera, hell! Who could make love to a woman who ate onions?"

But she didn't let him say it. Instead, she smiled that insincere smile and said, "Oh, Andy, dear, I want you to meet Mr. Haines of The Call."

"Pleased to meet you," he mumbled. He had to protect his interests.

She couldn't grab all the newspaper space, so he drew up a chair and sat down.

"I'd like to tell you something about the picture, Haines. I've a minute between scenes. Won't you come over in my dressing room for a drink?"

He'd show her. Could always get a newspaper man on your side in that way.

Her eyes flashed fire.

"Don't leave me, Andy, dear," she said softly. "Don't take him away, Mr. Haines. I can't bear to have him leave me because . . . because . . ."

He could actually see her thinking of something mean to say about him, something that would keep them both there so that he couldn't be alone with the reporter and "sell" himself.

"It's because we're engaged to be married!"

New Amateur

Second film competition starts
October 1—Russell Ervin, winner in first contest, gets five-year contract with William Fox

IN announcing the inauguration of its second amateur movie contest, Photoplay is happy to tell its readers of the real climax of its first contest. Russell T. Ervin, Jr., winner of the 35-millimeter division prize of the contest, has just been given a five-year contract by the William Fox Company. Thus Mr. Ervin, an enthusiastic amateur for fifteen years, has become an important worker in the professional field, with all the unlimited possibilities of Hollywood ahead of him.

Four prizes of $500 were offered in Photoplay’s first amateur movie contest, Mr. Ervin, who made his film with the co-operation of the Motion Picture Club of the Oranges, capturing the award for the best picture submitted in standard film measurement. Mr. Ervin’s contribution was “And How!” a one-reel drama told expertly, ably, and plus a remarkable economy.

The signing of Mr. Ervin came as a result of a showing of the prize film at the home of James R. Quirk, publisher and editor of Photoplay. The production was presented “cold” to a large and distinguished gathering of motion picture and literary folk. Among Mr. Quirk’s guests were George Jean Nathan, the famous critic; Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Company; Walter Wanger, general production manager of Paramount-Famous-Lasky; Richard Rowland, general manager of First National Pictures; Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Monta Bell, the director; Roy Howard, president and publisher of The New York Telegram, and Donald Ogden Stewart, the humorist.

MR. ERVIN’S film proved to be the surprise of the evening. Everyone was enthusiastic about it, Mr. Rowland, Mr. Wanger and Mr. Sheehan being moved to the point of wanting to engage the amateur prize winner. Mr. Sheehan acted quickest, however, and two days later Mr. Ervin was signed to a five-year contract. He left for the Fox coast studios on July 11th and will have an important position in the Fox Movietone department under Ben Jackson.

Mr. Ervin is thirty years old and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. He holds an electrical engineering degree and has been interested in amateur movies since 1913. In the intervening years he has built three cameras, two projectors and a number of lights in order to carry on his amateur experiments. That the Motion Picture Club of the Oranges has attracted so much attention in the amateur field has been largely due to Mr. Ervin’s enthusiasm and his ability to organize.

Meanwhile, since amateur movie making is, after all, not very remunerative, Mr. Ervin advanced to the post of assistant to the consulting engineer of the Servel Company in New York City. He resigned this position to accept the Fox contract. Mr. Ervin has made his home at 104 Harrison Street, East Orange, N. J.

Mr. Ervin wrote the story and continuity of the prize film “And How!” directed and photographed the production and edited it. The production was sponsored by the Motion Picture Club of the Oranges, the leading rôles being played by Alfred Fontana, Beatrice Traendly, and Margaret Ervin, Mr. Ervin’s sister. Mr. Ervin used a De Brie, a De Vry and an Eyemo during the course of the prize production.

“And How!” has received other honors. One was a special presentation as a feature of the program shown under the auspices of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures in the auditorium of the Engineering Society in New York City on July 10.

King Vidor and his wife, Eleanor Boardman, have returned from Europe after filming France and Italy with their Eyemo. Vidor is building an experimental studio where he will make his own home movies.
Movie Contest

By Frederick James Smith

The winning films in Photoplay’s second contest will be shown to all the foremost motion picture executives in New York and Los Angeles following the final decision of the board of judges. This means that one or more lucky amateurs will follow Mr. Ervin’s footsteps into the realm of professional picture making.

Such authorities as Henry Mencken, Robert Flaherty and George Jean Nathan believe that the motion picture of the future will evolve from the amateur movie enthusiast of today. There is no question but that the professional photoplay must call upon the amateur. The great difficulty has been to provide a bridge to span the gap between the amateur movie experimenter and the professional studio. Photoplay’s contest is that bridge.

When Photoplay announced its first contest, there was no way to ascertain or to measure the enthusiasm of the movie amateur. There was no definite way to feel out the reaction of the professional movie producer to the maker of home or club movies. Photoplay’s contest was a pioneer adventure.

Whatever doubts Photoplay had in regard to its contest were dispelled by the nation-wide interest in the competition. Today Photoplay feels that its first amateur movie contest—the first conducted by any publication anywhere in the world—is the greatest and most far-reaching thing it has sponsored in its whole history.

Photoplay is now assured of the interest of the Hollywood and New York motion picture executives in the makers of amateur movies. All of the professional film leaders will view the principal contest films of Photoplay’s new competition. So a substantial reward, fame and the key to Hollywood await you.

You have heard of beauty and personality contests. There never has been a practical way for the earnest technical worker to get a chance in motion pictures. Photoplay’s contest provides the open sesame. And, in providing the opportunities for worthy amateurs, Photoplay feels that it is doing a big thing for motion pictures.

Thus, in launching its second contest, Photoplay has high hopes.

The contest will open on October 1st and will close at midnight of March 31st. This will allow amateurs six whole months to shoot, edit and submit their contest films.

This year, the rules will differ radically from those of last year. In conducting its first contest, Photoplay has weighed carefully the many problems of such a contest. This year Photoplay feels that it will have an almost perfect set of rules, fair to every amateur, whether an independent worker or a member of an organization, whether the owner of a small outfit or the possessor of elaborate equipment.

These rules will be announced in detail in the October issue of Photoplay, on all news-stands on September 15th.

There will be a distinguished jury of judges to pass upon the contest films and Photoplay—again will have the co-operation of the Amateur Cinema League in its conduct of the competition. The full list of judges will be announced in an early issue of Photoplay.

Paris Fashions in Movie Theaters

Some hot doings in the French Cinema Houses reported to PHOTOPLAY

by Ken Chamberlain

The adjectives are French, but the spirit is Broadway. Monsieur, the owner, waits complacently knowing that the "debauche de luxe" will pack 'em in, in Paris as well as Iowa. Madame, his wife, is the cashier. Try to fool her!

The neighborhood movie, where the audience visits, smokes and makes love. Disapproval of the film is shown by kissing the back of the hand; violent dislike, by stamping. Eskimo pies are called "Nanooks".

Big deluxe stage show. No prologues, no jazz bands, no dancers. But the audience can be lifted to the heights of delight by a good, rousing operatic selection.
Fathering a Film Star

Keeping up with a movie daughter is a job for a consulting engineer and a Hercules

By

Tom J. Geraghty

TIME was when quite a few folks knew me and cordially addressed me as "Tom." That was when I rode in the back seat of our family car. But now I am generally introduced to strangers as "Carmelita's father."

I don't mind it a bit; in fact, I love it. But I don't quite fancy being a hundred per cent movie father.

I can't keep up with Carmelita any more than a rabbit . . . or keep track of her, either. I can't realize she has grown up and that she is a young lady. (I guess all fathers pull this alibi.)

But, honestly, she was always more like "a movie mother" to me than a daughter. That is, she told me where to head in and where to get off.

This understanding between us started when she was four years old. We were living in Rushville, Indiana, and Carmelita was cast for the part of Mrs. Tom Thumb in a "Tom Thumb Wedding" at a church Christmas entertainment.

She was dressed at home with decollete shoulders and a long dress. (She has never worn so long a dress since.) Her hair was done up like an adult's and she looked terribly cute and old-fashioned. I drove her to the church with a horse and sleigh, bundled up in a buffalo robe.

Placing her in the dressing room of the church hall, I kissed her and told her I knew she was going to be wonderful and that I would go out front to applaud her, and everything.

Instead of thanking me, she burst right out with a big temperamental number, stamped her foot, and declared if I went into the hall "she wouldn't play." I insisted that this wasn't nice and scolded her a little; then she began to purse up her lips and sob.

So I compromised with her . . . I didn't go in. I sat in the sleigh, half frozen to death.

While I waited, I found some solace recalling an incident when we had a run-in some three years before. Carmelita was about one then. My wife played the pipe organ in a church (got ten dollars a month, too), and Friday nights I was always elected to stay home and take care of the baby.

Besides being employed then as a packer in a cigar factory, I was at work on the Great American Dams, which I called, "Murder Is Awful." Carmelita was a very orderly and quiet baby, nearly always, except when her mother would leave; then she would start howling like an orphan coyote with a broken leg.

I had about four Friday nights of this before I learned how to quiet her. Necessity is the mother of invention, so, right there I originated my first "gag." I scraped some "stickum" off a piece of fly paper and put it on the tips of Carmelita's tiny fingers. I then got a small feather from a pillow and handed her the feather. She would pick the feather off one hand and then back on the other. Over and over again, she repeated this performance, while I returned to my writing. She finally wore herself out and, tilting over on the pillow, fell asleep.

I drowsed off, too.

When my wife returned, she found us both asleep and found the feather sticking on the end of Carmelita's nose.

It was then and there that my wife invented the Movietone with the high-powered amplifier.

IN New York, where I was a reporter on the New York Herald, I often took Carmelita on assignments. When she was ten years old, she had "covered" several murder trials . . . a dozen big fires and catastrophes . . . the opening of innumerable plays . . . etc., etc., and carried a police card to get her through "all lines." We got along very well during this period and had very few serious misunderstandings. However, she always won her point.

LATER, when I had gone into motion pictures and Carmelita was graduated from the Hollywood High School, and subsequently from a private school, she wanted to work in a studio. We had then moved back to New York, after six years in California.

I didn't approve of this at all, and more especially because I held an executive position in the studio. I won this argument, at least for the time being.

Two days later, I was walking through the studio and stopped on the Elise Ferguson set, where John S. Robertson was directing. I saw Carmelita sitting there as big as life in a chair, upon which her name was painted.

I asked her: "How come?" and she said:

"Oh, I'm not working in pictures . . . I'm just the script girl for Mr. Robertson."

She continued at this work for nearly a year . . . and that was that.

Papa Lloyd's birthday gift to little Gloria is a country estate in miniature, with everything but a golf course and polo field.

The little house, with its thatched roof and carved timber, jumped straight from an English fairy story. Inside is a bedroom, a living room and a kitchen, all furnished. There is an electric stove that will cook lamb chops and spinach and a chimney large enough to accommodate the ample figure of Santa Claus.

Gloria and her wishing well. There is real water in the well and a real old oaken bucket. And what has Gloria to wish for? She probably wishes she were out in a nice dirty gutter, making mud pies. And with plenty of other kids to play with.

The watch tower and the slide, constructed of wood and concrete. Nearby is a sandpile of the whitest sand. And there is also a stable for Gloria's pony and cart. The playground is part of Harold Lloyd's estate in Beverly Hills and it is completely separated from the rest of the property by a stone wall.
To be secretary to Madame Elinor Glyn—the world-famed novelist, scenario writer and idol of love-lorn youth—is quite—oh! quite a different matter from being just a secretary.

Madame is famous. Madame is powerful. Madame is sought after. And for this reason there is a horde of predatory tradespeople seeking in devious ways to "arrive” through Madame Glyn—to obtain profits and publicity from her patronage.

Here is where I, as Madame Glyn’s Confidential Secretary, find my most important job—acting as Cerberus to guard her from the hundreds who come bearing gifts to me as bait for the trap they are setting to catch Madame Glyn’s business. I am the despised go-between who says, “No, no!” to the mob clamoring outside for a slice of the famous author who is my beloved chief.

I have been offered fur coats, automobiles, radios, diamonds, imported frocks, exquisite lingerie, opportunities of being done in oil, done in clay, done in marble and done in general, et al., ad lib. I’ve had "propositions" involving hotel suites, Oriental rugs, patent vibrating machines, check protectors, calculating and transcribing machines and even a yacht!—WITH STRINGS!

I have been tempted, baited and lured as few women have. Men of all types are continually setting traps for me—waiting to ensnare me—trying to compromise me.

I have been informed in harmlessly honeyed tones and in threatening blackmail manner that every woman has her price; that if one particular article did not "hit me between the eyes" another would; that one day I would fall and fall hard. Yet, in spite of having player pianos, Chinese gardens, emerald miniatures, jade lamps and aeroplanes dangling in never ending succession before my frankly admiring and longing eyes, the apparatus within me commonly termed "conscience" remains clear.

To preserve Madame for the public which, out of love, curiosity and desire, would unwittingly destroy her, it is necessary to refuse a large portion of those who crave, beg, demand and insist on interviews for various reasons. I write "NO!” to little girls all over the country who are saving their pennies to journey to New York just for the privilege of five minutes with Madame Glyn, the one and only motion picture godmother whose word they will take as final on screen subjects.

People swarm around a vivid personality as moths seek a flame. Not a day passes but Madame Glyn receives a mail heavily laden with requests. I have yet to hear her personally refuse a worthy one, if it is [CONTINUED ON PAGE 130]

N eastern visitor was making a tour of the studios recently. "I read in the magazines that these stars really have their domestic moments," she remarked. "But I can't quite believe that. With all the money they make and all the pleasures that are open to them, I can't see how they can give a moment to such things."

Now I wasn't so foolish as to try to tell the doubting tourist that all stars are incurably domestic; that all the beautiful girls rush home from the studio in time to peel the potatoes for dinner. But I did remind her that, after all, Hollywood is a rich and socially active small town. And wherever you find a group of young and social women, you also find beautiful homes and a keen, good-natured rivalry in giving attractive dinner and luncheon parties.

In Photoplay's Cook Book you will find one hundred and fifty recipes that have contributed to the success of these parties. Some of the recipes for informal luncheon and supper dishes are the concoctions of the stars themselves; others were furnished by their cooks. But all of them were selected and arranged with thought and genuine interest.

Some of the younger girls who make no special claims to being domestic have their cooking hobbies. Thelma Todd, for instance, likes to bake cakes. And because she found that icing a cake was a messy business she bought herself a cake standard which makes the job much easier. A cake, too, has a dressed up air when served on a standard.

Miss Todd comes from Massachusetts and she makes one cake that has a New England conscience. It is called Scripture Cake and you must have a Bible at hand if you want to follow the recipe. Here it is:

Use 4½ cups of 1 Kings, 4th chapter, 22nd verse; one cup of Judges, 5th chapter, 25th verse; two cups of Jeremiah, 6th chapter, 20th verse; two cups I Samuel, 30th chapter, 12th verse; two cups of Nahum, 3rd chapter, 12th verse; two cups of Numbers, 17th chapter, 8th verse; two tablespoons of I Samuel, 14th chapter, 25th verse; a pinch of Leviticus, 2nd chapter, 13th verse; six Jeremiah, 17th chapter, 11th verse; two teaspoons of Amos, 4th chapter, 5th verse. Season to taste, with II Chronicles, 9th chapter, 9th verse.

Then, to lapse into plain English, bake in a moderate oven and serve with caramel sauce. Check this up with your Bible.

Alice White confesses that while she might be stumped if she had to prepare an elaborate meal, she just adores to make mayonnaise.

"And believe me," she says, "it is always good. My secret is to have everything at the freezing point and keep it that way. My mayonnaise bowl fits into another which is filled with cracked ice, so the dressing never gets oily. You should do the same for whipped cream, for that matter.

Dorothy Sebastian is a good amateur dress-maker. So she has invented a tie-around kitchen apron of silk-lined rubber and ornamented with bright-colored designs. She also wears it at the studio to protect her costumes when she is putting on her make-up or having her hair dressed.

"I hate regular aprons," she explained. "They are always getting soiled. When my rubber apron is dirty, all I have to do is to sponge it off and it always looks bright and new. The usual kitchen apron doesn't cover you all over and I, for one, am always dropping something on the part of me that isn't covered. My invention covers my dress even more completely than a smock."

Marceline Day's pet kitchen hint comes from England.

"I had a friend from England visiting me," she explained. "She was surprised to find that we furnished no protection for the hands of our servants. In her country they use lemons to cut the grease and keep the hands white, and oatmeal and rosewater to soften the skin. So I hunted up two tobacco jars and a fish bowl, painted little flowers on them and labelled them. The converted fish bowl is filled with quarters of lemons and the oatmeal and rosewater are kept in the tobacco jars. These little aids to beauty are kept handy in the kitchen. And I find that I mess around the kitchen much oftener myself since I know my hands will be protected."

Doris Kenyon always keeps flowers in her kitchen because she finds that the servants like them. This is entirely practical in California where flowers are cheap. In the East, where cut flowers in winter are a luxury, the housewife may put a hardy, compact-growing plant in her sunny kitchen window. Miss Kenyon, too, found that her cook book was always getting messy so she bought a standard to uphold it while it is in use.

Clara Bow says that she doesn't spend much time in her kitchen. In fact she never gave it a thought until she had to wait for ten minutes, one busy morning, while the cook squeezed her orange juice. She went into the kitchen and found that the cook was using a small, hurt-your-hand squeezer. So on the way back from the studio that evening, Clara dashed in a store and bought a modern orange squeezer—a contraption that makes squeezing oranges positively fun.

"The last time I went into the kitchen," Madge Bellamy said, "I burnt my hands. I grabbed a hot skillet with my apron. I didn't know where the cook kept the holders. So I bought her a holder container, so that the holders are always hanging plainly on hooks."

Lois Moran has discovered that the way to keep servants is to give them all the modern kitchen conveniences. You can't expect efficiency in the kitchen, if the cook is struggling with out-of-date equipment.

Lois is particularly proud of her kitchen sink. It is one of the new divided sinks. You wash the dishes on one side and rinse them on the other. And so you can throw away the greasy dish-pan.

Mary Brian decided that she wanted to make her kitchen as colorful and attractive as the rest of the house, so one day, in a burst of ambition, she dipped the handles of all the pans in enamel. The experiment was not entirely successful, so she is going to buy some of the new colored pans that have been introduced recently.
The Wets

A Collection for the beach before

When Patricia Avery, the Christie mermaid, goes into deep water she wears the jersey suit at the upper left. The sandals are made of rubber and won't hold the sand. The bag on her arm is the suit-holder. At the immediate left is Patricia making a dive for publicity. The hat and parasol are woven of raffia. The rest of the outfit explains itself.

At your left Vera Reynolds is wearing a suit that may be launched in any ocean. It's a white Bradley with red polka dots here and there. Belt, cap and moccasins are also red and white. It's a suit made for the most strenuous swimming.

Anita Page (right) dons another Bradley model and dares the surf to do its worst. The suit has gray and light blue checks and is worn with a white fabric belt. Anita prefers a silk handkerchief, tied pirate style, to a rubber cap.
and the Drys

of Bathing Suits—Some and others for swimming the camera

At the upper right is Alice White all dressed up for a First National bathing beauty parade. If it rains, she's out of luck. The suit is beach broadcloth with a design of autumn leaves. The bag is a combination suit carrier and pillow. To your immediate right is Alice as she really looks in close proximity to the ocean.

The geese on Lilyan Tashman's bathing suit (right) are ornamental, not symbolic. Lilyan doesn't make a goose of herself when she wears this outfit, designed by Howard Greer, to the beach. The suit is knitted jersey and the coat and hat are handblocked linen.

When Miss Page wants to swim in the rotogravure sections of the newspapers for M-G-M, she wears the suit at the left. It is cobweb black lace over flesh-colored georgette and — hold everything — ornamented with imitation pearl four-leaf clovers.
When Baclanova came to this country with the Moscow Art Theater, she left her husband, Valdemar Zoppi, back in Russia. But Olga, although separated, never thought of divorce until she went to Hollywood and became a movie star. Now, in order to establish her social position, she has started proceedings in Moscow against Mr. Zoppi. A Soviet divorce is even easier than a Mexican decree. And why is Nicholas Soussanin's picture on this page? Mr. Soussanin is also a Russian and one of the neatest Menjou-ish villains on the screen. For four years Mr. Soussanin has been very lonely 'way there in Hollywood. Then along came Baclanova—Happy villain! Happy vamp! But not so happy Mr. Zoppi.
NOW in Newport; tomorrow in Paris—yesterday Nice, Madrid, the Riviera... Society today is international. Its members, fascinating, lovely, born to the purple of a dozen different lands, are at home wherever life is chic and colorful.

They have set a new standard of beauty and chic for the world—one not English, American, French or Spanish, but completely cosmopolitan, blending the most distinguished characteristics of half a dozen nations.

There is no more distinguished or beautiful member of this important group than our own Mrs. Ogden H. Hammond. Highly endowed by nature and background—she shares her husband's high diplomatic post with a graciousness and tact that have won her the affectionate title, "Ambassador to Spain."

With fair hair, bright as though dipped in sunlight, deep blue eyes, and skin as delicate as a pink lotus blossom—she is a perfect example of the true golden blonde. And of all the qualities that contribute to this perfection—she prizes most her lovely skin.

"A smooth, perfectly cared-for skin," she declares, "is one of the requisites which chic uncompromisingly demands."

"And I believe tremendously in Pond's Creams," she continues. "More than superficially restorative—they are soothing, and refreshing. The Skin Freshener is delicious! Its stimulating quality just right. And the Tissues are exactly what one needs to remove the cream—soft, yet firm—perfect in texture."

Use the four Pond's preparations daily this way: First apply Pond's Cold Cream generously. Its purifying oils cleanse to the very depths of your pores. Then with Pond's Cleansing Tissues—firm, caressing, absorbent, wipe away all dirt and oil.

Next a dash of the exhilarating Skin Freshener—to tone, firm and invigorate. Last—the merest breath of Pond's Vanishing Cream for a pearly luster and finish.

What was the Best Picture of 1927?

Vote for the Picture You Think Should Win!

Have you cast your ballot for the best motion picture of 1927? Voting for Photoplay's eighth annual gold medal award has been under way for some months and will terminate on October 1st. Your ballot will not count if received after the closing date.

Back in 1921 Photoplay announced that a gold medal would be awarded each year for the picture which, in the opinion of its readers, would come the nearest to the ideal in story, direction, continuity, acting and photography. And, of course, revealing the highest and finest spirit behind its production.

This gold medal award is the only prize going to motion picture makers direct from the film fans of America. It presents not the minority opinion of critics or self-appointed authorities, but is the decision of the great mass of movie lovers of this country.

Thus you are urged to vote again this year. In no other way can you definitely and directly do your bit to improve pictures. The prize you take part in awarding goes to the producer. It means that you appreciate his efforts to put the best on the screens of America and it will encourage him, as well as his fellow producers, to make greater endeavors.

In Paris, too,
It's now Palmolive

Today in France, home of cosmetics, Palmolive is one of the two largest selling toilet soaps, having supplanted French soaps by the score. French women, the most sophisticated of all women in beauty culture, by the thousands have discarded French soaps and adopted safe and gentle Palmolive.

Beauty Wins—Beauty Keeps

The secret of keeping beauty lies in keeping that schoolgirl complexion, as millions know who follow this simple daily rule:

Beauty is not mere regularity of features, or a shade of hair. It is an ensemble in which a good complexion plays a vital part.

Many otherwise unattractive girls have “lovely eyes,” or “a good nose.” And many girls are called beautiful whose greatest claim to beauty is a lovely skin.

To be really pretty one must keep her natural charm. For even though you use powder and rouge, naturalness is your aim. And no beauty can seem natural that has not the base of a naturally lovely skin.

Those authorities who know the most of dermatology—of skin culture—will tell you “washing the face for beauty” is Nature’s surest rule.

Wash with lather of these famed beauty oils—daily

The soothing, cleansing oils of olive and palm, as embodied in the famous beauty soap, Palmolive, are recommended, if natural beauty is what you seek.

These gentle cleansers soothingly penetrate the pores, remove accumulations which, if left, would form into blackheads, or, becoming infected, would cause unsightly blemishes.

They bring the charm of natural loveliness because they keep the skin cleansed Nature’s way. To keep that schoolgirl complexion through the years, do this at least once daily.

Do this for one week, then note results

Wash your face gently with soothing Palmolive Soap, massaging its balmy lather softly into the skin with your two hands. Rinse thoroughly, first with warm water, then with cold. Dry by patting with a soft towel—never rub the gentle skin fabric.

If your skin is inclined to be dry, apply a touch of good cold cream—that is all. Do this regularly, and particularly in the evening. Use powder and rouge if you wish. But never leave them on over night.

And Palmolive costs but 10c the cake! So little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain a cake today, then note the amazing difference one week makes. The Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, Ill.

Palmolive Radio Hour—Broadcast every Friday night—from 10 to 11 p.m., eastern time; 9 to 10 p.m., central time—over station WEAF and 32 stations associated with The National Broadcasting Company.

LEO'S QUESTION CONTEST

Leo, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Lion, is staging a question contest of his own. He offers two $50 prizes—one to the cleverest man, one to the cleverest woman, for the best answers to his questions. And furthermore Leo will present autographed photographs of himself for the fifty next best sets of answers.

LEO'S QUESTIONS

1. Name three famous animals in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures and Hal Roach comedies.
2. What popular song bears the same name as a current M-G-M picture?
3. Which M-G-M featured player, not yet starred, do you consider most worthy of stardom? Tell why in not more than 75 words.
4. Name three famous M-G-M "teams" of actors.
5. What are five of Bill Haines' picture successes?

Write your answers on one side of a single sheet of paper and mail to 3rd Floor, 1540 Broadway, New York. All answers must be received by September 15th. Winners' names will be published in a later issue of this magazine.

Note: If you do not attend the pictures yourself you may question your friends or consult motion picture magazines. In event of ties, each tying contestant will be awarded a prize identical in character with that tied for.

METRO-GOLDFN.-MAYER
"More Stars than there are in Heaven"
MOVETONE FAN, BROOKLYN, N. Y.—George Bernard Shaw is married. He has blue eyes and white hair. Those whiskers are real.

ANNIE C., ROCHESTER, N. Y.—What Pidgeon is Walter Pidgeon’s real name? Isn’t it a bird? Walter is a free-lance, which means that he works hither and yon as opportunity arises. He is six feet two, 150 pounds and weighs 190 pounds. And a widower.

“SPIRIT OF SCRANTON.”—The “G” in Venus is long, while the “G” in Venice is short. So you are right in the argument. Betty Bronson is five feet, three and a half inches tall and weighs 100 pounds. Mary Astor is neither blonde nor brunette; she has auburn hair.

R. E. P., LOULELEN, KY.—Victor Varconi is thirty-two years old and was born in Hungary. Jack Hudden is twenty-six. If you want a picture of Mr. Varconi write to the Pathe-De Mille Studios, Culver City, Calif.

V. S., HOBART, OLA—Nils Asther’s first picture was “Topsy and Eva.” He is twenty-six years old and his address is the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio, Culver City, Calif. Billie Love made her screen debut in “Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford.” Roland Drew is twenty-seven years old and his next picture will be “Lady Raffles.”

I. H., JEFFERSON, WIS.—We have no record of Mary Carr’s age. But Junior Coghlan does not mind letting you know that he was born March 15th, 1916. Gilbert Roland’s real name is Louis Antonio Damaso de Alonso. Laugh that off! Lionel Barrymore is forty-five years old.

M. MCK.—Vilma Banky is twenty-five years old. She has blond hair and gray eyes; five feet, six inches tall and weighs 120 pounds. And, by way of contrast, Dolores Del Rio has black hair and brown eyes. She is one and a half inches shorter than Vilma, but they are the same weight.

J. N., ALICE, TEX.—Small towns are no surprise to me. I am a small town boy myself. The adorable Mr. Dix was thirty-three years old in July. He has dark brown hair and dark brown eyes. Born in St. Paul, Minn., and an American. Esther Ralston is twenty-five years old. Both Mr. Dix and Miss Ralston received their training at the Paramount-Famous Studio, Hollywood, Calif. Your hand-writing tells me that you are impetuous.

E. D. M., FORT WORTH, TEX.—One of your questions is barred because it’s a clue to the cut-puzzle contest. However, I can tell you that Neil Hamilton was born in Lynn, Mass., Sept. 9, 1899. Esther Ralston is another New Englander; she is a native of Bar Harbor, Me. And Vera Reynolds was born in Richmond, Va., and weighs 90 pounds.

LUCILE P., OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—So far as I know Charles Farrell doesn’t make phonograph records. It must be another Charlie. Ralph Forbes is an Englishman and twenty-six years old.

THELMA, SPRINGDALE, ARK.—Alice Joyce is Mrs. James Reagan in private life; she has two daughters. Her latest picture is “The Noose.” It is pronounced Rod La Rock. And Ramon is Rayman. In Novarro, the accent is on the middle syllable. Ramon’s newest is “Gold Braid.”

HERE are the answers to the seven most persistent questions of the month.

Mary Pickford was the Divine Vision in “The Gaucho,” although her name did not appear on the screen or in the program casts.

Clive Brook is thirty-seven years old and married.

Lon Chaney is forty-five years old. And he, too, is married.

Clara Bow was twenty-three years old on July 29th.

James Hall has blue green eyes and brown hair. His address is the Paramount-Famous-Lasky Studios, Hollywood, Calif.

Billie Dove’s real name is Lilian Bohny. She has brown hair and brown eyes. Married to Irving Willat, the director.

Charles Farrell is twenty-six years old. He was born at Onset Bay, Mass. Write to him at the Fox Studios, 1401 Western Avenue, Hollywood, Calif.

In writing to the stars for photographs, PHOTOPLAY advises you to enclose twenty-five cents to cover the cost of the picture and postage. The stars receive thousands of such requests and cannot afford to comply with them, unless you do your share.

BUBBLES, ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Joan Crawford had pink hair for a while, but I hear she grew tired of it and is going to let it go back to its natural brown. Dorothy Mackaill is married to Lothar Mendez. May McAvoy is single. Write to Sue Carol at the Pathe-De Mille Studios, Culver City, Calif. Letters to Alice White should be sent to the First National Studios, Burbank, Calif.

I. V., MONTE VISTA, CALIF.—Richard Barthelmess’ first wife was Mary Hay. They were divorced and he is now married to Mrs. Jessica Sargent. Dick is an only child. And his next picture is “Out of the Ruins.” Now for the Novarro family: Ramon has five brothers and five sisters. He was born in Durango, Mexico, of Spanish parentage. And not engaged to marry anymore. The idea he is marrying—Miss Helen Mulligan played with Dorothy Mackaill in “The Crystal Cup,” and Jason Robards appeared with Dolores Costello in “The Heart of Maryland. Sure you are inquisitive. But what would I do for a living if all girls should lose their curiosity?”

J. W., GREENSBORO, GA.—Lina Basquette’s first name is pronounced Lee-na. And the Clive in Clive Brook is Cl-i-eye-ve. Richard Dix is a bachelor and so is William Haines. And that is Haines’ real name. May McAvoy is a brunette by nature but she is sometimes a blonde in films. And the famous Pickford curls are now tucked away in Mary’s bureau drawer.

G. P., AURORA, ILL.—Mary Philbin was born in Chicago, June 14, 1903. Donald Reel played opposite Colleen Moore in “Naughty but Nice.”

NINA R., HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—Leslie Fenton played the part of the officer who shouted “What Price Glory?” in the trench scene of the picture. Malcolm McGregor is married to a professional. His next film is “The Girl on the Barge.”

PEGGY OF WASHINGTON.—Thanks for the flattering salutation. Here’s the information about your college friends. Eddie Phillips was born in Philadelphia in 1900. Dorothy Gulliver was born Sept. 6, 1908. She has three brothers and three sisters. George Lewis has a mother and father and two brothers. Lots of interest in the families of the stars this month.

MRS BILLIE, DORCHESTER, MASS.—Alma Rubens and Edmund Lowe played the leading roles in “East Wind.” “I.T.O. and the Lion-Hearted,” John Bowers played Sir Kenneth and Marguerite de la Motte was Lady Edith. Write to Greta Garbo at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. Maybe you will have better luck if you send your letter to the studio.

Fates willed that it should end at the casting director's door, in one of the greatest studios of Hollywood!

THEY were casting, that day, for the peasant bit in the war picture. And it happened—as it so often happens—that most of the extra men who trooped forward to the barred window of the casting office were smug, well fed young fellows. Sleek of hair, sleek of eye—owing dress suits. Able, if necessary, to do a trifle of the tango—able to hold a cocktail glass as a young man about town is expected to hold one. The casting director, nervously scanning their faces, tried to visualize them in peasant blouses and in sabotots.

Tried to imagine them facing a firing squad. And failed.

"My God," he said frantically to his assistant, "they belong in a dance hall! Not in the mud of Flanders. There isn't one face that is built for tragedy. Not one face among them. If only—" he paused suddenly, and his eyes brightened. For he had seen Pasquale. Pasquale! He was not one of the crowd besieging the casting office. He was merely a passer-by. He was not looking for employment—he still had a few dollars in his shabby pocket. True, he had gone without food, he had slept under hedges, to keep those few last dollars intact. He was soul weary and hungry and tired and unshaved. But he was not seeking employment. He was merely trying to keep in the background of things—to avoid notice whenever possible. He had been sidling around the edge of the crowd when the eyes of the casting director caught his hunted gaze. At the director's shout in a language that he did not understand, he started, suddenly, to run.

"If they catch you, no matter how far you travel . . . " So his liberators had said.

He started, suddenly, to run. But the director's shout had called attention to him. "Hey, you!" the director was calling— "come back here! Hey! Don't run off. I need you. Say, somebody—" he was appealing to the waiting youths—the ones of the sleek eyes, the sleek hair—"hold that little dark feller. I need him!"

Hands darted out. Young bodies blocked his path. Pasquale, frightened, apprehensive, almost nauseated with dread, tried to duck—to creep under a raised arm. But they were wary of his movements. Two husky boys, glad of the chance to gain attention, propelled him forward. Shoved him into the casting director's wee office.

Perhaps the casting director tried to make his voice gentle.

But dealing all day long, all week long, all year long, with types, does not tend to make the tone exactly cooing.

"Why'd you try to run off?" asked the casting director—and one can understand the question—"Why'd you try to get away? Most men'd give their shirts for the chance I'm going to give you. Why, I'll pay you double what I'm going to pay the rest. Just because you're a homely little guy that looks foreign—"

Pasquale stared into the big, harassed face of the director, and saw a man stiff, unemotional, determined. He glanced down at the casting director's desk. And saw, lying there, a heap of bayonets—bayonets that were, in time, to be meted out to the extras. He looked furtively over his shoulder, and saw the barred window of the casting director's office—and barred windows are discovering to men who have lately been in prison. Just as bayonets are suggestive to would-be patriots who have been engaged in smuggling firearms into small Central American countries.

The whole, horrible meaning of the thing—it came over Pasquale in a flash. This man—he was a government agent. This office—it was a government office. Somewhere, somehow, that last fatal shipment of guns (for a shipment of guns had been Pasquale's undoing) had been intercepted.

He—he was caught! Miles from his own land—he was. But he was not safe.

He was caught. Else why had a crowd, a hungry, wolish crowd, turned upon him? Why had he been haled into this jail-like room? He broke, suddenly, into excited, tremulous Spanish.

THE casting director, listening, turned to the assistant who lounged near the window. The assistant was a reedy chap who smoked slim cigarettes which he held in slim, stained fingers.

The casting director laughed. He did not

Always busy—this lovable, sometimes troublesome family of yours . . . And one important matter that they'll usually neglect is—their hair. For men are careless about their hair until it begins to thin, and children never think about their hair at all.

So usually, it is mother who must see to it that they care for this precious possession now, in time to start health habits that will keep the scalp healthy.

'And there is no finer, or simpler, way to keep the family's hair (and your own) healthy, strong, attractive, than to provide a Packer soap for regular use: Packer's Tar Soap, or Packer's Pine Tar Shampoo, or Packer's Olive Oil Shampoo.

We make each of these soaps for just one purpose—to foster the health of the scalp. And we believe we know a great deal about making soaps for the hair. We should—we have been studying the hair and its care for 55 years. In these Packer soaps we use pure, sweet glycerine, imported olive oil and pine tar from the pine woods where the very air crackles with health. Each is the very finest and costliest of its kind. So these soaps insure for your hair and scalp gentle and effective aid in maintaining healthy conditions. They leave your hair lustrous and alive.

Try any one of these Packer soaps! Lather! Mountains of lather! The quickest, snowiest lather you ever massaged into a welcoming scalp. Now rinse! Did lather ever whisk itself away so instantly? Now doesn't your scalp feel clean and vital—all aglow with health? Read the offer below and start your own and your family's hair off to healthier, better hair-habits now!

Send for sample, Send 10c for a sample of any one of these Packer soaps and "The Care of the Hair," our new 88-page book on hair health, the care of dry hair, oily hair, dandruff, etc. Specify which soap you prefer. Address: The Packer Mfg. Company, Inc., Dept. 16-I, P. O. Box 85, New York, N. Y.

Packer's Olive Oil Shampoo
A golden liquid of imported olive oil, bland coconut oil, soothing glycerine. It lathers in an instant, rinses in a twinkling. Faintly perfumed.

Packer's Pine Tar Shampoo
A liquid soap containing the soothing benefits of olive and coconut oils and—in addition—healthful pine tar. Quick to lather—quick to rinse.

Packer's Tar Soap
Doctors long ago learned that one of nature's most effective remedies is pure pine tar. So skin specialists prescribe Packer's Tar Soap as the most effective pleasant way to give your scalp the benefits of pine tar. Each cake now in an individual metal box.

"Oh, I got to soft pedal that," he answered. "The publicity is interfering with her other romances."

WHILE Janet Gaynor was in New York, the long distance wires were kept busy by Charlie Farrell. Yet he took Virginia Valli to the Hollywood opening of "Prince Fazil." Friends continue to watch this duplex romance and wonder.

We are told that Jackie Coogan plans to place his military academy uniform in the seclusion of mothballs during the summer vacation while he goes forth to tour one of the big picture-house circuits (Balaban and Katz). We understand he is to take his dad along to give the act sex appeal and that they expect to start from Detroit July 21st, covering the North. The main idea of the tour is to remind the customers that Jackie is still alive; also to pick up a little family pin money.

It is reported the stipend will be $6000 a week—just the price of another school uniform for Jackie!

A newspaper reporter telephoned the United Artist publicity department for the birthplace of John Barrymore. It was not listed.

He telephoned the actor directly, "A friend of mine who is a magazine editor wants to know where you were born, Mr. Barrymore."

"Yes? What is it for?"

"An article he is writing."

"Yes? What is the article about?"

"Why, about you, Mr. Barrymore."

"Flatter your Hands"
says BILLIE BURKE

This famous stage beauty . . . New York's smartest set . . . all these gay, clever women use this New Cutex Liquid Polish

HOW do they keep their busy, capable hands exquisite and pretty when they use them for so much interesting active work?

Women who combine a career and a brilliant social life tell us the answer is quite simple. Just the New Cutex Liquid Polish which protects the nails so they cannot look grubby no matter what you do.

Applied once a week it gives new personality to the hands. Its lovely brilliance lasts day after day in spite of wear or water. Stains and dirt that usually discolor and roughen the nails disappear when you wash your hands. Your fingertips remain shining — exquisitely chic — for a whole week!

Billie Burke keeps her hands lovely with the New Cutex Liquid Polish

At a Palm Beach fancy dress ball or at her stately country home, she is just the golden haired merry young woman who married Florenz Ziegfeld, whose plays assemble the most beautiful women in America.

"I love the stage," says Billie Burke, "but I also love simple country things—gardens, woods, tramps—dogs. What terrible things it does to my hands!

"Chez Ninon" advises this polish

Mrs. Nona McAdoo Cowles, New York and Washington society woman, presides over the smart little Madison Avenue shop "Chez Ninon."

"Of course, I use Cutex Liquid Polish," she says. "It's so thoroughly becoming—makes the whole hand look prettier and better groomed — gives a clever touch of sparkle."

"Riding-togs Require Impeccable Nails" says New York horsewoman

"To keep my nails in condition," says Miss Ivy Maddison, well-known New York horsewoman and winner at many smart Horse Shows, "I always use a liquid polish—the New Cutex kind—which withstands perspiration and washing. It's very natural-looking, perfectly sporting, and, in my opinion, the nicest possible finish for any sportswoman's hands."

Billie Burke's expressive hands

"I find the new Cutex Liquid Polish protects the nails from stains and dirt and is so flattering. In fact, I adore all the Cutex preparations—the Cuticle Cream—and the Remover. My friends say, 'What lovely half-moons you have!'

Give your hands personality with this new Polish. With Polish Remover 50c; without Remover, 35c. Northam Warren, New York, London, Paris

With a rattle of shots and a series of wild yells, Buster Keaton, pursued by 200 Chinese extras, burst into the Casino at Monte Carlo the other day.

Director Robert Z. Leonard, filming a scene for Marion Davies' "Her Cardboard Lover," with 400 extras on the set, stared in amazement as his unexpected visitors raced before his camera. Keaton raced around between the extras and ended by diving for shelter between Leonard's legs.

"Can you speak Chinese, Bob?" he croaked hoarsely.

"For gawd's sake then tell these Chinks the scene is over. They can't distinguish one set from another and the whole gang's been chasing me all over the studio," Keaton had been filming a shot for "The Cameraman" on the other side of the M.G.M. lot.

Taking moving close-ups with a specially constructed camera that travels on a track for "War in the Dark," Greta Garbo stands at the head of the table and Fred Niblo, the director, is at the extreme right, back of the cameraman.

Maybe a person can be a social success without the help of soap and water, but he is working against heavy odds.

Wise people do not rely entirely on interesting talk and pleasing manners. They also enlist soap and water—with clean linen as a matter of course.

They want to look right and feel right. They want to know they're clean, clean through.

RAUL W*ALSH* needed an impressive looking judge for his picture "Me, Gangster."
He called on Wilson Mizner, the New York wit and Hollywood scenario writer.
"You've stood before the bar so many times, Bill, and been dismissed for lack of sufficient evidence that you must know how a judge does it. Now show us!"
For once Mizner was without an answer. He played it.

ANNA O. N*ILSSON* stayed out of pictures for nearly six months waiting for the right type of dramatic part to be offered. She was determined not to take anything for which she did not think herself fitted.
Word reached her at a camp, high in the Sierra Nevadas, that she had been chosen to play in "Craig's Wife" at DeMille's, to star in two productions at FBO and to have the lead in "Ned McCobb's Daughter"—all roles she had desired. The next morning, the last day of her vacation, she went horseback riding. A rabbit scuttled across the path. The horse reared. Anna glanced down the three thousand foot embankment to one side then tumbled deliberately to the other.
Four days she lay in a mountain shack without doctors or nurses or even telephone communication. Then, for nine hours, she rode in an automobile which crawled down the rut-pitted road, without uttering more than a slight groan.
At the Santa Monica hospital it took three doctors to keep her from walking from the car to the inspection room.
The newspapers said that her ankle was fractured.
The other day we visited Anna. Strong ropes attached to a framework above her bed held her in position. Her hip had been broken.
Yet the only thing she would talk about was the fact that the producers were holding up her two starring pictures and "Ned McCobb's Daughter" until she would be able to play them!

AFRIEND visiting Donald Reed at First National asked what rôle he was playing in Billie Dove's new picture, "His Wife's Affair."
"Oh," explained Donald, "I'm the affair!"

"We've enjoyed the evening so much"

But what did they say on their way home? Even the most sympathetic of your friends have a way of comparing notes afterwards. The clothes you wore, the furnishings of the room, the food you served—each comes in for its share of the inevitable post-party conversation.

There is a way of keeping informed in those little things that catalogue your degree of smartness. It is through reading the advertisements, those messengers that bring news of the precise purchase to make. Advertisements lay before you the latest notes in dress. They illustrate the newest decorative treatments for the home. They furnish you with unique and tempting recipes for the table.

They advise you what to buy, how much it will cost, and where you can get it. They point out the pathway to saving pennies. They indicate the correct surroundings of a modern home.

Read the advertisements—they are a valuable guide to current usage.

This "Party-Going Age" and Sal Hepatica

Our late evening hours and our high tension days, our rich foods and our disregard for the simplest rules of health often cause us to wake up in the mornings with a headache or a coated tongue, an unpleasant taste in the mouth or an upset digestion.

If ever should be your lot to experience these unfortunate conditions you can very promptly help yourself—by taking Sal Hepatica.

For there's nothing like Sal Hepatica to set you up. Sal Hepatica cleanses the intestines promptly—usually within 30 minutes. It sweeps away accumulated wastes and the poisons they breed.

Sal Hepatica is very similar to the famous health waters of Europe. It contains the same saline as these wonderful waters and it acts in the same way—giving the system a thorough washing out and refreshing you, mind and body.

Like these beneficial continental waters, Sal Hepatica quickly dispatches all the disagreeable effects of our unwise habits of living. And even colds, auto-intoxication, biliousness and rheumatism are greatly relieved by this simple and effective measure.

When you pour Sal Hepatica into a glass of water, it bubbles up into a pleasing, effervescent drink. It has none of the wry, bitter taste of "sals." But it has a lot of snap and a bracing tang that will please you.

It's remarkable what Sal Hepatica can do for you when you feel dragged down and listless. When you have dined not wisely but too well—let your awakening thought be of Sal Hepatica. Stir the day physically reviving in good spirits—take Sal Hepatica when you need it.

A certain publication carried the news that a telegram had notified them that Cecil De Mille was heading toward Honolulu on his yacht "The Seaward" with a copy of "The Goddess Girl" which he would preview for the natives.

Another paper stated that the boat had been seen in the Panama Canal and rumored that it was headed for New York where "C. B." would go into a battle with producers about supposed-to-be-plans for an amalgamation or at least working-together arrangements.

In truth, Cecil B. is having his first vacation in years. He is on his yacht. But he's at the Tuna Club in Catalina. These reports were telephoned him each night by his secretary in Culver City.

It is rumored in Hollywood that Carl Laemmle is going to do a Universal special called, "All the Nephews Were Valiant."

Nick Grinde, newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director who is shortly to direct Tim McCoy in "Morgan's Last Raid," is so popular with assistant directors at the studios that there is always a scramble to see which one will work with him on a picture.

The reason is that Nick was an assistant for ten years before he was promoted to direction about a year ago, and, knowing all the troubles of an assistant, never "kicks" when accidents occur.

"I got roasted by directors too many times myself to roast an assistant for anything now," he asserts. Assistants are all paying bets as to how long this will last if Nick keeps on directing.

Two hundred extras stood on the set of "Heart to Heart" at First National, waiting for Mary Astor to finish a scene.

Director William Beaudine took up his megaphone and called, "I want an expert motorman capable of piloting a car through a traffic jam."

Five men stepped forward. Beaudine chose the one who offered cards proving he was a motorman, a locomotive engineer and an elevator operator.

Just one more proof that you can pick out an experienced man for every job from these I-want-to-be-movie-actors.

Charlie Farrell is known to be wild about any kind of animal.

The other day he was playing with a coyote on the set of "The Backwash," his next picture.

Suddenly, Mr. Coyote up and bit a good hunk out of Charlie's right cheek. He was rushed to the Beverly Hills hospital.

It will be several weeks before they can shoot anything but long shots with Charlie.
Donald Reed and Paul Lukas, two ardent First Nationalists who play the principal roles opposite Billie Dove in "His Wife's Affair," have invented a game of chance all their own.

The two players confront each other, adopt a grave and expressionless mien and, as a signal, each thrusts out his right hand. The game is to guess whether one's opponent will thrust out his hand with the fingers opened or closed, and anticipate him.

If you are the one attempting to match the other's movement, you must, in order to win, duplicate his actions.

However foolish the game may sound on paper, the two inventors of it have been trading dimes back and forth ever since production on the picture started.

They both expect to have enough money to buy a "Quickie" by the time the production is over.

Bob Armstrong is jubilant over the fact that there does come a time of retaliation even in stage-boxing. During 1500 performances of "Is Zat So," Bob took a knock-out from Jack Perry.

During the filming of "Celebrity," Bob was entitled to floor the same Perry. He did it so realistically that Perry came up calling for three aspirins. Bob explained the force was to make the scene realistic. But Perry tells another story.

It seems that Indians do not shave. They pluck their whiskers, same as the Chinese. And the sensation is similar to that which one achieves by hitting himself in the head with a hammer; you like to do it because it feels so good when you stop. Imagine the surprise of 500 Navajo Indians, moved by Fred Thomson to his Arizona location, when they discovered 500 motion picture soldiers of the Kit Carson era pulling their long beards out by the handful at nightfall when the day's shooting was done. The Indians didn't know of course, that the beards were made of crepe hair.

They merely thought that the white man is heap much braver than the red man, and that maybe the pen is mightier than the sword!

Colleen Moore has been lunching at a restaurant in Burbank, and the proprietress has formed the habit of seating her at a table next to the front window. It didn't take long for the citizens of Burbank to discover this, and crowds began to collect on the sidewalk outside the window every day.

"Now I know just how the animals in the zoo feel at feeding time," remarked Colleen. "And I have had all the sensations of a lady demonstrator in a downtown show window."

Mary Brian was describing a scene in a war picture.

"Then those big things came along—You know, those—those—they blow down fences and trees and people. Oh, what do you call them?"

"Thanks!" James Hall interceded.

"You're welcome," answered Mary with an innocent but bewildered expression.

Elsie Janis has purchased a home two doors from Lilyan Tashman and Edmund Lowe in Beverly Hills. Which makes an even dozen movie-folk who live within two blocks on Linden Drive of that Hollywood suburb.

The others are Lon Chaney, Alice Ace, Percy, Benjamin Glazer, Eddie Street, Lili Barrymore, Mary Aitken Carewe, Director George Archainbaud and Producer E. M. Asher.

Make This Convincing Beauty Bath Test On Your Hands Now

INSTANTLY YOUR SKIN FEELS SOFT AND SMOOTH AS A ROSE PETAL

Here is a remarkable test. It will prove to you in less than a minute that your skin can feel smooth as a baby's.

Simply swish a handful of Linit in a basin of warm water; then wash your hands, using a little soap. Immediately after drying you are aware of a soothing softness—your skin feels smooth as the down of a rose petal.

The exquisite softness of your skin is due to a thin layer of Linit that is left on the skin after your bath. This invisibly thin "coating" of Linit harmlessly absorbs perspiration, eliminates shine from the skin and in cases of irritation is most soothing.

Starch from Corn is the main ingredient of Linit. Being a vegetable product, Linit is free from any mineral properties that might injure the skin and cause irritation. In fact, the purity and soothing quality of Starch from Corn are regarded so highly by doctors and dermatologists, that they generally recommend it for the tender and sensitive skin of young babies.

Linit is so economical that at least you should give it a trial. Let results speak for themselves.

THE height of something or other is when a well-known title writer from the Fox studios stands up and eulogizes for thirty minutes Uncle Carl Laemmle of Universal. Yet the other boys at the Wampas meeting insist that not another fellow present had been imbibing.

A MAGAZINE writer was chatting with Lilyan Tashman. "I want to tell you about a girl I interviewed the other day. If you guess who she is—don't say anything. She didn't have a thought in her head—"

"Oh, I couldn't guess, now!" Lilyan interrupted. "There's too many of exactly the same type in this city."

And we all know that Lilyan is one who speaks the truth as she sees it.

Film players continue to live up to the old stage law: "The show must go on." Raquel Torres, one of the new contract players at M.G.M., has just revealed how truly she has lived up to the idea.

Six months ago, Miss Torres was engaged to play the leading feminine role in "White Shadows of the South Seas." As her mother died when she was a year old, her father came to the studio and made the arrangements.

And just the other day, W. S. Van Dyke, who directed the picture, happened to speak to Miss Torres about her father.

Photoplay has received one of the finest tributes ever paid to a motion picture star. It is a letter from the Hope Cottage Association, of Dallas, Texas, and it throws a new and beautiful light on the character of Barbara La Marr. Here is the letter:

"I have been reading quite a bit of interest the recent articles in Photoplay Magazine about Barbara La Marr and her 'Sonny Boy,' the six months old baby she saw for the first time and fell in love with at Hope Cottage, a temporary home for dependent babies, in 1923."

"It was a wonderful thing for her to do. This beautiful young woman with an admiring world at her feet, was not satisfied with the ever-changing spotlight of fame. Her woman's heart yearned for the greatest blessing that can come into the life of a normal woman—that of motherhood. She planned big and noble things for her new little son. Her ambition for him was as high as the blue sky, never dreaming that she would leave him so soon to be reared by friends of her choosing who will follow out her plan for his future welfare. His adoption by Mrs. Tom Gallery (Zasu Pitts) has the unanimous approval of Hope Cottage Association."

"I feel, in justice to the memory of Barbara La Marr, that a brief statement of facts concerning the baby's parentage will come in nicely at this time and will clear up a lot of wrong impressions. Little Marvin, as he was called at Hope Cottage, was born at one of our local hospitals, July 28th, 1922. He was sent to Hope Cottage when only a few hours old— the young mother passed out of his life at that time. His birth is on record in the Vital Statistics Office, this city. His parents were residents of Dallas."
"My father is dead," she said simply. "He died the night before I left for Tahiti."

Although her father was her only relative aside from her sister, the actress made the entire trip and never mentioned his death to Van Dyke or anyone else. Because, she said, "Mr. Van Dyke was worried about the picture. Why should I bring my grief to him also?"

Now we learn that Sam Goldwyn has opened negotiations with two foreign composers to come to Hollywood to make Movietone scores for "The Rescue" and "The Awakening," maintaining that "talkies" are to bring the best musical talent of the world to the film city.

Naturally, we expect Sam to go to Europe for his musicians!

The Goldwyn sets are already a modern tower of Babel. We found fifteen nationalities gabbling at one another!

First, we noticed a cunning youngster of eleven years worshipping at the shrine of Miss Banky. His father told us that he is none other than Raphael Mundstock, the "Jackie Coogan" of German movies. He has been in this country four weeks. Daddy brought him over for an introduction to Mr. Goldwyn. It was a successful introduction.

Next we encountered six officers of six different armies who had fought either with or at each other during the world fricas. A Finnish captain, a Swedish artillery captain, a German aviation captain, an American artillery captain, a Turkish infantry lieutenant and General Wiatralsavsky, of the personal bodyguard of the late Czar of Russia.

Then, of course, there was the Hungarian Vilma Banky, the Parisienne Lily Damita, the English Colman and Byron; the Spanish assistant director, and the Polish producer, Sam Goldwyn, in person.

And sandwiched in between, Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian swimmer; Sojin, the Japanese character actor, and a full-blooded Bulgarian make-up artist.

Perhaps the man with the most troubles at a motion picture studio is the purchasing agent. He has to be ready at a moment's notice to buy any conceivable article—know exactly where to get it quickest and cheapest, and therefore be a sort of walking trade catalogue.

Sol Clark, purchasing agent at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, in one day had to locate and buy an old musical score of "La Tosca" printed in Italian for "War in the Dark!" twenty Civil War saddles for "Morgan's Last Raid," a gyroscope compass and sonic sounder for "Gold Braid," and six ounces of gold dust for "The Tide of Empire." On the side, he had to purchase 100,000 feet of hurricane, a ton of assorted iron castings, and the boiler-head of a locomotive for a set showing the interior of an engine cab.

Fred Niblo tells of a conversation between two extra girls that he heard while directing Banky and Colman.

The first actress said: "My Scotch boy friend sent me his picture."

The other inquired, "How does it look?"

"I don't know. I haven't had it developed yet."

Walter Byron, the English importation for Vilma Banky, doesn't understand why Hollywood is so excited about the threat that Movietone will draw the center of the motion picture industry back to New York City. He says he has been told it's because there are better voices to be found in New York City.

"But I never heard so many raspy voices as in New York City. They must come from riding on those elevated trains, don't you think?" The soft California climate does not suit it much more for one's vocal instruments! I

This will relieve it

When your skin gets hot and sun-scorched—smooth in Hinds Honey & Almond Cream. It will quickly relieve, "take out the heat," make your skin soft and fresh again. Hinds Cream has always done that.

But here's good news—Hinds Cream also prevents sun-scorch. The trick is to put on Hinds Cream and powder before going out into the sun. Then your skin won't sun-scorch. It can't. Because Hinds Cream, with powder over it, protects the skin from severe sunburn, from redness and blister—from all weathering, in fact. Keeps it smooth and young and lovely.

Try Hinds Cream these two ways. You'll like it. The coupon below will bring you a sample bottle. Just fill in and mail today.

A woman tells why MEN lose their Hair

Must a man lose his hair before fifty? Is there no hope? Read what a famous beauty expert says: "Men abuse their hair. They wear tight hats. They do not brush and massage their hair enough every day—worst of all—they try every 'cure-all' that comes along.

My advice to men is this:
1. Brush your hair thoroughly several times a day. Loosen the scalp by daily massage with the finger tips.
2. Slick to one good crude oil shampoo like Taroleum—and to one good reputable hair tonic like Wildroot.

Follow these two rules and you'll keep your hair ten years longer at least."

Use Wildroot Hair Tonic instead of water to wet your hair every morning—and you’ll never have dandruff. Ask your barber for Wildroot Taroleum Shampoo and Wildroot Hair Tonic. He has them. At all drug stores too.

Authors have no heart. When Tristram Tupper wrote "The River," he included a crow as one of his characters. So Frank Borzage, who is filming the novel, had to find a trained crow and, oddly enough, no one seemed to have one around the house. So he hired an animal expert to find an intelligent crow and train it. The lucky crow's name is Oscar, and you see him here perched on Mary Duncan's arm while Charles Farrell swaps gossip with him.

Think this will be the right place to make talksies?

THIRTY years ago . . .
Their names in big red letters on the old New York Academy of Music billboards: "Uncle Tom's Cabin," played with an all-star cast.
He was the leading man and she was the leading lady.
"I will never forget you!" he sobbed in one of the big moments of the drama.
"Nor I you!" she replied, brushing away a tear.
The other day . . .
On the "War in the Dark" set at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, two old players met—an old station attendant and a lady selling flowers.
"Lillian Yeamen Titus, I've never forgotten you!" he said tenderly.
"Nor I you, Mortimer Snow!" she replied.

In front of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios stands a set of scales, so that players may weigh themselves and see what the diet and exercise situation is.
In the rear of the establishment is a similar set of scales.
Lew Cody tells this:
"A pretty extra-girl stepped up to the scales in front of the place and carefully weighed herself.
"She pondered a bit, then went back to the other scales and carefully weighed there as well.
"'I don't know what to do about this,' she remarked, 'I weigh 123 in the front and 125 in the back!'"

AND now the term "supervisor" is in such disrepute that only the assistant produces of dog pictures are called supervisors.
Even the dogs have been heard to growl.

WE haven't told you about Harold Lloyd's dogs, because they are such aristocrats—yet their names are difficult to spell, but he has the finest Danes to be found in any one kennel in the world! Recently when he added another famous Dane, Iblo von der Rhone, a German-bred dog qualified to whip anything of its class in the United States, we simply had to go out to the new estate to look him over. What do you think we saw? Sixty-five massive canines! No wonder he calls them his "thundering herd!"

LILY DAMITA, Sam Goldwyn's new woman for Ronald Colman, sat on the edge of a table at a tea in her honor, surrounded by hordes of men. Hollywood men just naturally gravitate toward this young lady.
"I speak five or six languages," she boasted.
"Do you speak Yiddish?" a Jewish boy pressed anxiously forward.
"Non! But I had come to a good place to learn it," was the frank answer.

SNAPPY come-back gleaned from the estimable Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer playground. Johnny Mack Brown on seeing Dorothy Sebastian: "Hello, Dodo!"
Dorothy, with twinkling glance: "Do I look as extinct as that?"

THE gal-friends certainly do bother James Hall. First it was Joan Crawford and then—and yet—Merna Kennedy. Recently Margaret Breen arrived in Los Angeles to play the lead in a stage play. She seemed to think that she was still engaged to Jimmy. Until she met Merna Kennedy.
And now Jimmy is worrying for fear that all this publicity about women may hurt his fan following.
Well, James, it didn't hurt Rudolph Valentino. for Louis B. Mayer, say of Fox, regarding me, "They don't know what they've got."

Before long, the stimulating influence of all this reassurance inspired me with a confidence which I had long thought dead.

Then one night I met young Thalberg and over many glasses, discussed future and profits. A great company was about to be formed, Metro and Goldwyn and Mayer were to unite forces and make pictures under one banner. It would be a great chance for a growing boy. I went home with goose-flesh all over me and cold chills running up and down my spine. Perhaps?—No! Why not? No!—No use. Don't be a fool! All right I won't! But look at your face!

Well, what of it? Perhaps my physical deficiencies would be overcome by my capacity for feeling. Let's try! I will!

WHEN Fox offered me a new two year contract I refused to sign it. When they informed me that they purchased "The Man Who Came Back" and "The Man Without a Country," I still refused to sign. When I was told that if I did not sign, the aforementioned stories would be given to someone else, I still shook my head.

A few weeks later after consistent begging I was released from my contract. The next day I signed for five years with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A couple of days after that—a Sunday—Irving Thalberg took me to the Ambassador

I am eighteen years old and I have been motherless for the last four years.
It's pretty hard to grow up and go straight with no mother to help you over the hard spots. So when I am lonesome and blue, I go to the movies. I can't tell you how much I appreciate them.

I've worked hard and I am getting ahead. I've also helped bring up my little brothers and sisters. The problems that come to every growing girl are presented before me in the movies.

I try to learn something worth while from every picture I see.
I see pictures of good girls and profit by them and I avoid the mistakes the bad girls make. I study the dresses and copy them, because I have no mother to help me choose my clothes. I watch the pictures of homes and of the interiors of rooms to help me when I have a home of my own.
I was born in Germany and when I see pictures of people's lives in foreign countries, I thank my lucky stars that I am in America. Over there the people cannot better themselves by working and saving.
Here there are opportunities for everyone.

Does Your Mirror say “Powder” or “Beauty”?

If only powder didn’t SHOW! If you could use it to achieve JUST BEAUTY! Marvellous if possible. To have again the unblemished, winsome, skin of childhood loveliness... to have your mirror say “beauty” and not “powder.”

Well, then, Princess Pat does give just beauty every time — without the slightest hint of “powder appearance”... and your intelligence will recognize the reason. Then you will want to try—

As you ordinarily powder—and peer into your mirror you now observe a chalky, powdery appearance. Try as you will, you cannot altogether banish it. Your mirror still says powder. And it always will—until you use powder without the usual ingredients that give the customary chalky appearance.

These ingredients are banished in Princess Pat. Precious Almond replaces usual starch. Instead of harshness, there is softness. The very feel of Princess Pat is a caress to the skin. Watch as you apply this utterly different powder. Subtly, magically, it transforms the skin. It mutes, blends, becomes as the very skin itself made perfect. Rub it on well, for persistence.

Now then! After you have powdered, what happens? Oil comes upon the skin, gradually, yet surely. Usual powders become “patchy” and unlovely. You have to use more powder—with not the happiest results.

On the contrary, the Almond in Princess Pat has an affinity for oils from the skin flakes—usually called pores. As oils appear—and they do on every skin—they are absorbed by Almond. Thus the distressing shine is prevented—even on the nose. Powder is no longer disdosed, nor beauty marred. Wonderful! Yes, of course.

And think! This same characteristic of Princess Pat, gives you additional protection. Almond, believing you a fine textured, healthy skin. The oil glands are not sensitized—never inflamed. Consequently they do not become distended. If already distended, Princess Pat Powder gives every assistance in maintaining normality in the glands. But it is beauty without powder appearance that is the first thought of every woman. That is why women who know choose Princess Pat to begin with... for make-up beauty that always passes for imperishable loveliness.

Indeed your mirror never says “powder.”

Of course, though, the added virtue of balanced skin texture is equally well loved as time passes... as pores become supernaturally fine, as the skin becomes delightfully soft and pliant, as blisters vanish...

And now, if you have read carefully, learned the unusual advantages of Princess Pat you will surely want to try it. Your favorite toilette goods counter can supply Princess Pat Almond Base Powder—in two weights. These are regular weight, in the oblong box, and a tantalizingly slighter weight powder in round box. Both weights are made with the famous Almond Base.

Hotel to meet Elinor Glyn. When the introduction took place my mood was a complex one of both self-consciousness and scorn. I was not at all certain of what I would hear—or what I would say. Mrs. Glyn discussed a book of hers which Irving wanted to produce with me. The name of the story was “His Hour.”

I left Mrs. Glyn with the distinct impression that I had met a great lady and a charming person.

“His Hour” was produced King Vidor directed it. The picture was a success. I was amazed to discover that nice things were said about my work. Amazed—then gratified—and then fearful. It was just luck. I was sure of that.

Then I was cast to play in “He Who Gets Slapped.” When I read the script I was thunder-struck at discovering that my part consisted of about twenty scenes. Any one of fifty men could have played the part. What was the angle? What were they trying to do with me? Were they dissatisfied with my work? That was it. They were sorry they had signed me.

I rushed to Thalberg. My eyes were flooded with angry tears. “Look here,” I cried, “if you want to get rid of me you don’t have to give me rotten parts to do it. I’ll leave today and it won’t cost you a penny!”

My young friend sat back in his chair and gazed at me in astonishment. I went on with my harangue blunting out my independence of him and all that he represented. Irving answered my silence. “Are you stark staring mad?” he inquired.

From his sincerity of expression and tone I gathered that my conception of things might be wrong.

He went on. “This part, small as it is, will do you more good than anything you have ever done.”

The production was started and almost finished—when another milestone of my life was passed. Leatrice divorced me. The fault was ninety-nine and nine-tenths mine. I think nothing further need be said about that.

When the picture, “He Who Gets Slapped” was released, greater praise from critics was showered on me than had ever before been my good fortune to receive. A love scene played with Norma Shearer, who is now Mrs. Thalberg, was piece-de-resistance for the pen of all dramatic reviewers for weeks to follow. I decided somebody must be wrong and it might as well be me, but the decision was of short duration.

I was selected to play Jeff Dyer in “Wife of the Centaur¨. Cyril Hume had written a great story and all that remained for King Vidor and me to do was to interpret it in terms of human beings on celluloid. From my experience as a director, I had retained my own ideas as to how certain emotions should be expressed. King won out nine-tenths of the time, much against my will. When the picture was presented to the public more flattering phrases were written describing my performance.

Now, believe me or not, as you wish, but I speak the truth, I was completely astonished at the turn of events. I recognized, thank Heaven, that there were things under the sun of which I was ignorant. I determined to study, and I applied myself diligently to a course in the greatest medium of expression that the world has ever known, the motion picture.

THALBERG wanted me to play Donilo in “The Merry Widow.” Von Stroheim, the director, wanted Norman Kerry to play Donilo. Thalberg’s wish was law. Von Stroheim sent me one day and offered his hand. With guttural Austrian accent he formally explained, “Gilbert, I am forced to use you in my picture. I do not want you, but the decision was not in my hands.

“I assure you that I will do everything in my power to make you comfortable.”

If you have ever sensed humiliation, you may be able to understand my reaction to the foregoing speech. I guaranteed Stroheim that I would do my best to please him, and hated him in my heart.

Throughout the first week of the picture Von kept his promise. During the second week he became a tyrant. At the beginning of the third week, I walked out. A fifteen minute session on the set, had resulted in my Getting engaged for the camera is no easy job. Director John McCarthy is trying to get a close-up of the engagement ring that Lawrence Grey has just slipped on Eleanor Boardman’s finger. In order to get a diamond that would photograph expensively, Metro-Goldwyn had a stone especially cut to catch the light rays. You’ll see the ring in “Diamond Handcuffs” telling him where he could put "The Merry Widow" and what he could do with Dulcie.

I went to my dressing room and tore off my uniform. Von followed and apologized. Whereupon we had a drink. I apologized to Von and we had another drink. Then we had another drink and I returned to the set. That disagreement cemented a relationship which for my part will never end.

Von Stroheim is not only one of my dearest friends, and I have few friends, but he retains my admiration and respect for being the greatest director we have and the greatest expressionist in motion pictures.

The whole thing became too fantastic for me to comprehend. Acting, that very thing which I had been fighting and ridiculing for seven years had brought me success, riches, and renown. I was a great motion picture star. Well, I'll be damned!

Before his untimely death I was with Rudolph Valentino on many parties and soirees. In the midst of my fame, I have studied Rudy carefully, envying the ease with which he wore his crown. He possessed a quality which I nor any other star will ever attain. Valentino seemed born to the purple. Where so many of us become self-conscious before adulation, Rudy accepted it as his rightful, princely heritage, and justly so. He was a prince, of gallantry, and beyond all his many other attributes of artistry, comeliness and charm, a gift of royal bearing lent glamour to his being, which made him the hero lover of all time.

"Salute!"

"'The Big Parade!' A thrill when I wrote the words. "The Big Parade!" As a preface to my remarks pertaining to this great film, permit me to become maudlin. No love has ever enthralled me as did the making of this picture. No achievement will ever excite me so much. No reward will ever be so great as having been a part of "The Big Parade."

It was the high point of my career. All that has followed is balderdash.

Vidor did not want me to play Jim Apperson. He said I was too sophisticated, and that was hard to handle. Poor King. I had given him so much trouble during "The Wife of the Century" that he had reasonable cause for disliking me, but he did not know that I had been purged in the fires of wisdom and experience. Again Thalberg won out. A grand battle could have waged had I knocked the chip off my director's shoulder on the day he said, "Anything you have to say, say now, in Irving's presence, and keep your mouth shut after we start the picture."

My reply to King was, "In the two pictures—which we made together, everything which I said would be bad, was good; and those things which you declared would be good, were good. I will never question your judgment again."

And I never did.

The day came for starting the picture. It was to be my first starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. A little six-reel movie of the war, but something more behind it. Thalberg was the first to sense an underlying greatness in our story, which imbued Vidor and the rest of us with a knowledge of our responsibility. The camera was set up;Slim, Bull and I were fastened with mud, were to plunge into a water-filled shell hole to escape an enemy's fire. It was the first scene to be photographed. As I was adjusting my gas mask, King approached, his hand outstretched. "Through a grin, he uttered prophetic words, the ultimate aspiration for movie makers, "Grauman's Egyptian, baby."

Wrung his fingers, and wet eyes, gulped, "Grauman's Egyptian, baby."

Unfortunately, this delicate subject is seldom discussed. If it were, many women could avoid a social stigma that comes with woman's oldest hygienic problem.

EVEN among girls who are very frank with each other, there is a question of daintiness, of fastidious personal care that is unfortunately seldom mentioned. Yet many women are unconsciously guilty. At certain times they are seriously offensive to others. With realization comes constant worry. Today these fears are ended. Science has discovered a way to counteract this offense.

This huge machine is called the Go-Devil and was invented by F. W. Murnau for use in "The Four Devils." It is a big arm which swings in all directions and carries the director, cameras and camaron, enabling them to photograph scenes from every possible angle. The machine weighs twenty tons and is operated by a two hundred horse-power motor. It is capable of traveling at a speed of forty miles an hour.

We started "The Big Parade." Have any of you ever gone through an experience at school, or at college, or while in love, or while on a farm, or in the mountains, or exploring, or on a boat, or somewhere which has been so filled with happiness and work and harmony and well directed effort that you never hope or dream of such a thing re-occurring? If you have, you will understand just how I feel about "The Big Parade." It can never happen again. Sequence after sequence was good. We knew it. There was no doubt in our minds, nor any display of eg0. We simply knew we were photographing honest action.

The chewing gum episode—with little Renee Adoree. Only a suggestion was offered in the script and no one really knew what would happen. Cameras started and away we went. Minute after minute after minute: impromptu inspired; both Renee and me, guided by some unseen power, expressing beauty. And when the film was exhausted, old Pop Vidor, age thirty-four, murmuring, "I'll be damned if I ever saw a scene as good as that."

And so we thundered along, with interludes (misquoting Frank Vreeland) "of rosebuds growing all over everything." Moment after moment of just going in and doing it. The shell hole sequence with the German soldier boy. The only thing known about it being, "Jim offers him a cigarette," and when it was over, Pop's question, "Do you think you slapped him too many times?"

And my hysterial reply, "God, no, I felt it." And King, "If you felt it, it's right."

When a picture is finished there is usually a let-down of excitement, but no such thing occurred with the completion of "The Big Parade." Our enthusiasm became greater, and then we heard the electrifying news that Sid Grauman had booked the picture for his"Egyptian Theater!"

A war dance in my dressing room, performed by King and me followed this information.

On the great night of the opening, Vidor and Eleanor Boardman, Norma Shearer and myself made a foursome, and petrified with fear, yet consumed with hope, we sat and watched the unrolling of our greatest effort. Thalberg was home, confined to his bed with illness, but every few minutes one of us would speak to a telephone and let him know how the film was being received.

Need I remark that the picture was a success? I was drunk with the fulfillment of a dream. When Metro-Goldwyn leased the Astor Theater in New York, for the exhibition of our epic, I went east to be present at the opening, carrying "The Big Parade" with me in my compartment on the train. The film was encased in three heavy steel boxes which I guarded with an ever watchful eye and with such vigilance that Richard Dix who accompanied me, was moved to ridicule.

All I said was, "Wait till you see what's inside those boxes."

On the afternoon of the day the picture opened, I met Leatrice, who was vacationing in the east. In spite of our divorce we were still great friends, and I begged her to accompany me that night. She sensed the excitement which had prevented my eating or sleeping for three days and sweetly agreed to join me. Richard Dix and Lois Wilson completed our party and I rushed to my hotel to dress.

When we drove up to the theater the crowds roared and cheered as they saw me assist Leatrice from the cab. I was trembling from head to foot. The theater was packed with the first night crowd of stars and critics. The orchestra burst forth, then died away. The house lights were dimmed and the picture flashed on the screen. Voices gradually became silent, and the most thrilling moment of my life began. I ceased to exist for this world. I grew numb, and riveting my eyes on the screen, sat as if dead for two hours. A title flashed before me: "The End." Amid cheers and applause and thunderous acclaim I remained rigid. It was over. Yet I could not get my limbs to move, nor my brain to function. Not until all the people had left the theater was I capable of rising from my seat. Even then I could hardly move. Torn pieces of linen were scattered all over my clothing. Leatrice told me I had ripped two handkerchiefs to shreds.
We rushed into the cafe and found our table. Marcus, bless him, saw my pitiful exhaustion, and produced a flask. Congratulations were showered upon me.

How I longed for King and Irving to be present to share in this triumph. I suggested to Leatrice that we sneak away and be alone. She was willing, so we made our excuses, and slipped off to a tiny night club, where we danced and talked till dawn. Then I took her home. When I returned to my hotel, I sent for the morning newspapers, and got drunk all over again, reading the reviews of the picture. No such adjectives had ever been used to describe a movie. I sat for hours crying and thrilling to the printed phrases. Then I staggered to bed and slept around the clock.

I had sounded the depths and reached the peak of emotional excitement. I never expect such an experience to occur to me again. And so I say, and please understand, that I have concluded my career in pictures. Other efforts followed, but the thrill that accompanied the creation of my great character makes all subsequent achievement appear dull and earthy in comparison.

"La Boheme." Artistic and delicate, but never believable.

"Bardey's, The Magnificent." Applesauce. With one, John Gilbert, contributing most of the sauce.

"Flesh and the Devil." Mildly exciting because of its brazen display of sex lure, but only important for me because of my meeting with a glorious person named Garbo.

"The Show." Nothing whatever to be proud of. I wanted to do "Lilium," but was denied the privilege of making that fine story. "The Show" was its illegitimate spew. I was rotten in it.

"Twelve Miles Out." A story of bootlegging, with lovable Ernest Torrence to lift it with humor and conflict.

"Love." A cheap interpretation of Tolstoi's story, which, though containing some memora-ble moments, is at best a slob sister's love tale. A Russian "East Lynne."

"Man, Woman and Sin." My God, what a title! It could have been great, but it wasn't. I have my own private reasons for its failure, which I am not permitted at this time to disclose.

And so it goes on. And so I go on.

For all that has happened, the result of thirteen years of straining, I am deeply grateful, and still, slightly dazed.

The other day I was walking down Hill Street in Los Angeles, when I was accosted by a policeman. I beam as I recognized Bob Stewart, from "bushwa" days at Incivey. We charted a while, then Bob asked me what I was doing. I informed him that I had just finished a picture. He was astonished. "My God, still in that game?" I acknowledged my stupidity at still bucking the movies for a living. "You're a fool for punishment," he sympathized. "Better get out before they lick you," and patting my shoulder, he swung along on his beat. Such is fame. I gazed after him, envious of his oblivion to everything except his job, his home, and the central station.

Occasionally I take a long afternoon drive up the beach beyond Santa Monica. Where the buildings and stages and western streets of Incivey used to be, are now the red flags and orange placards of a new subdivision, called Castellamare. My stomach sickens as I turn my eyes seaward and hurriedly pass this hideous destruction of what was once my glorious playground. One piece of movie statuary

THE winners of the July Nutty Biographies and Tangeloo contest were as follows: Mrs. John D. Leek, 214 East 51st Street, New York, and Mabel Millspaugh, 120 West 4th Street, Anderson, Indiana.

The winners of the ten $10 prizes were: Miss Irene Tate, 420 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Ethel G. Warwick, 909 W. Jefferson, Sandusky, Ohio; Myrtle Gage, 2749 Green Ave., Jacksonville, Fla.; Lucille Young, Judson Park, Minn.; Mrs. H. A. Philbin, 1908 Evelyn Ave., Memphis, Tenn.; Miss Willfreda Zartman, 644 North Detroit St., Xenia, Ohio; Frank White, 2924 Magnolia Ave., Beaumont, Texas; Frank Harrod, 100 Washington St., Evanston, Ill.; Leone M. Fouk, 10 Pleasant, S. W., Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. H. A. Luttmer, Cornelius Apts., Seattle, Wash.

Here are some selections for the Nutty Biographies for July. The picture captured Greta Garbo was the comedy face of Polly Moran, and Greta was not discovered in Budapest by Samuel Goldwyn. That was Vilma Banky. Miss Garbo comes from Stockholm and was signed for American movies by Louis B. Mayer.

The landlady's son told Aunt Hezekiah a fine collection of films. Miss Garbo works at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studio in Culver City, not at Universal. She did play in "The Flesh and the Devil" and she is fascinating, but she is Swedish not Hungarian. And she is still Swedish because she is not married to D. W. Griffith, or any other American. Some of the scenes of Griffith's "Hearts of the World" were filmed in France, with Lillian and Dorothy Gish, but Greta was in Sweden at the time. She was too young to be a star and anyway, Sweden was a neutral country. And the Hungarians fought with the Austrians and Germans against the Allied forces.

The winner of the lucky Tangeloo Beauty Set was all six items and the "Art of Make-Up" address card. The George W. Lott Co., 417 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Greta Garbo made two pictures in Europe under the direction of Josef Stinch and Griffith had nothing to say about her career. He didn't even know her. So naturally he wasn't surprised when she became a movie star. Her first American film was "The Torrent" but she was—and still is—under contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Off the screen, Greta is not only lovely but she likes to be alone and avoids parties. John Gilbert, 1925 South 17th Street, Omaha, Neb. won the third prize of $30.

The two prizes of $25 were won by Mrs. John J. Heisel, 214 East 51st Street, New York, and Mabel Millspaugh, 120 West 4th Street, Anderson, Indiana.

Tangee makes every woman a better artist of nature make-up. It changes color to your artistic needs as you apply it. Changes from orange to blush-rose, the "shyred" and most delicate color in Nature, and the exact shade of blush-rose you require. It is sold in more than 5000 drug stores. Tangee Rouge Compact has the same great change in quality as Tangee Lipstick. Ask for them.

THE POWER of Twenty Cents

Twenty cents brings you the miniature Tangee Rouge Set—all six items and the "Art of Make-Up" address card. The George W. Lott Co., 417 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Mrs. Colman was born in Richmond, Surrey, England, and was playing on the New York stage when he was signed to play opposite Lilian Gish in "The White Sister." But again, it was Ramon Novarro who had the title role of "Ben-Hur." "Ben-Hur" is a study of Rome and Jerusalem during the life of Christ; "Romola" is the Italian story. Ronald hasn't bright red hair; he has black hair, brown eyes and is five feet, eleven inches tall. He is not married to Vilma Banky, who is the wife of Rod La Rocque, but separated from Thelma Raye. Mr. Colman and Miss Banky were co-stars but now they make pictures independently. It was impossible to find stories suitable for both of them. Miss Banky was born in Hungary, not San Antonio, Texas. She is not a singer and has never been married. She is at the Garbo House and neither Ronald nor Vilma has musical ambitions.

Mr. Colman uses his real name on the screen and is by no means 'the nightingale of Beverly Hills.' His address is the De Mille Studios, Culver City, Calif., in care of Samuel Goldwyn.

We all moved back to Hollywood again and from there I was transferred to London to take charge of production in the Famous Players studio. During this time, my good friend, Charlie Chaplin, came to visit in England. I met him when the boat docked at Southampton and rode with him, by train and automobile, on his triumphal return to his native London. Several times during this highly exciting and nerve-racking entry, I was puzzled when Charlie, apropos of nothing at all, confided to me: “I have a test of a girl I want you to see.” Naturally, at first, I was polite but as Charlie kept repeating about the test, I frankly told him I wasn’t interested.

I STOPPED that night with him in his suite at the Ritz, and the very first thing in the morning he asked his valet to dig out a reel of film from his luggage. This he handed to me and said:

Again I told him I wasn’t interested in a test of anyone in America, as it was simply ridiculous and silly to think about even considering anyone so far away.

I had lunch and dinner with him and we walked late in the night over the streets of London as he pointed out many places familiar and dear to him.

Returning to the hotel, he again handed me the can of film and said: “You must take that along.”

I pretended to take it, and after bidding him goodnight, purposely left the can on a table in the parlor.

The next day, I had lunch with him again and he reminded me that I had forgotten the film. A dozen times during the day, he cautioned me about taking it along and had the valet put it with my overcoat and hat.

I left the film again.

But the next morning, shortly after I arrived at the studio, a Rolls-Royce drove up and a chauffeur got out, carrying the can of film into the studio to me.

I was becoming annoyed now, and an assistant asked me what I wanted done with it. I told him I didn’t care.

Later that afternoon, I was looking at some of our daily “rushes” in the studio projecting room. When I had finished, the operator called through the opening and said that there was another reel there... but I want to see that? I told him sure I did... not knowing that it was the one Chaplin was trying to foist upon me.

The lights went out and the film was projected upon the screen. The first few feet were of a beautiful castle. Then, in the background, the lone figure of a girl came walking out and down to foreground... and then jumped to a close up.

It was Carmelita!

She was smiling and she spoke directly to me, saying (as a title popped out on the screen): “Hello, Papa!”

She looked at me and smiled... threw me a kiss... and started to walk away... then stopped, and, turning around again, said: “I hope you’re not mad at me for being in this picture.”

The next instant, Doug Fairbanks came popping out alongside of Carmelita, and, pointing his finger towards me, said:

“Say, we all think Carmelita ought to be in pictures... what’s the matter with you?”

Then Mary Pickford walked out... put Your bath is ready in this container

Even when you are too hurried to have a bath you can be sure that no odor of perspiration will embarrass you! Dust on Deodo—in a few seconds! It's safest to use it every single day, bath or not!

For this delicately-scented powder deodorant instantly neutralizes and absorbs all perspiration and body odors!

Dust it over your body like talc. Rub it under your arms. Shake some in your shoes or over your feet—especially before dancing.

Use all you want—Deodo is soothing and healing to the skin. Won't seal pores. Won't injure clothing. Especially good on sanitary napkins.

At leading drug and department stores—large size container for only 50 cents.

Here was the companion situation to the old Irish wheeze:

"Is O'Toole good for a drink?"
"Did he have it?"
"He did!"
"He's!"
And so it was with Carmelita. . . . Could be go in the movies? She was!
I am not so keen about the average movie carrier of son or mother . . . but Carmelita has certainly been a good movie mother to me.
And my only contribution as a "movie father" has been in the rôle of a "consulting engineer."
Having seen many stars come into prominence, and not a few fade out, my general advice included:
First of all, keep physically fit.
(For this good counsel I had to pay bills for horseback riding, tennis, golf, massage, dancing, swimming, and plaster of the ceiling following violent calisthenics.)
Keep mentally alert through good books and interesting companions.
(The overhead on this advice also cost a pretty penny.)
Keep good hours, consistently, and be sensible about diet.
(I must confess I saved a little money here.)

Dress well and cultivate an easy poise, if possible.
(Here we go "in the red" again.)
See every motion picture possible . . .
study all the best actresses on both the screen and stage.
(This is very stimulating, but also runs into heavy dough)

Going Polonius one better, I have seriously preached all my life that the greatest virtue is tolerance . . . to be tolerant of everybody and everything.
It brings a big return in life . . . a happy disposition, many loyal friends, a good stomach and liver, a cheerful philosophy and continued youth.

Dirty political influences are at work in pictures. Look at this, cultures abroad, although he had trouble in Italy in getting 35-millimeter film in short lengths suitable for the Eyemo.

Frequently he had to utilize makeshift dark rooms to thread in such odd pieces as he could purchase.

SOME interesting new amateur accessories are now on the market, available to home movie makers. For instance, there is a new audible footage meter, now adaptable to the Filmo and the Victor and shortly usable with the Cine-Kodak. Heretofore, amateurs have had to guess at the length of shots, since the footage dial is out of sight when the machine is in operation. The new audible footage meter clicks off the footage and the amateur is exact in his shots. The meter is easily adjustable.

"Sets of vignetting masks are now supplied for the Filmo. With these you can shoot heart-shaped pictures, pictures apparently made through key holes and via binoculars, etc.

There are clover-leaf masks for country shots and so on. This opens up a new way the amateur can copy professional cinematography.

You now can buy specially built cabinets to house your camera, your projector, your splicer and the rest of your equipment. And, of course, your loose reels. These come in desk and console models.

Pictures or Football?

Are you counting little things like cracked ribs?

Did you ever have your dress catch fire in the middle of a game?

"Dress, Bebe? What do you think football is, a masquerade ball?"

"Some of the games I’ve seen look like one. Anyway, when I was doing ‘Monsieur Beaumarchais’ I wore a crinoline dress it took me twenty minutes to hook myself into. Folds and folds of it. Hoops.

"A page boy in the picture was following me with a flaming torch until he got his feet signals mixed and fell against me with that torch.

"The whole dress caught on fire.

"About two weeks before that Martha Mansfield had been burned to death in just such an accident.

"I started to run for the hose and as I did so I heard the director say, ‘My God! Martha Mansfield’!

"I stopped running and rolled on the floor trying to put out those darn flames. Poor Martha had kept on running and fanned the flames beyond control. They finally smothered the fire with coats and things but believe me, Dick, you have never spent moments like that on a gridiron!"

"No? Ever wait to catch a punt when you knew two ends were going to hit you in the tummy the moment you did?

"And did you ever play for over an hour in the cold and wet when you felt so brittle you were sure you were going to crack apart like a pretzel when some one tackled you hard?"

"I can imagine it," she said. "It must be something like the feeling you get when you play a scene for over an hour in ice water up to your neck and you know if you don’t look at the scene you’ll never win the game!"

"But do you ever get a hankering for a warm bath and a quiet room in a hotel at night?"

"Always.

"And do you ever get a hankering to have a real feast after a football game?"

"Always.

"And do you ever get a hankering to get a good drink after a football game?"

"Often.

"And do you get a hankering to get a good night’s sleep after a football game?"

"Never.

"And do you ever get a hankering to get out of a football game after a football game?"

"Always!"

No wonder the amazing comfort of Modess is appreciated

In the eminently respectable year of 1905, the well-dressed woman wore, by actual measurement, thirty-nine and seven-eighths yards of material. Today, she wears three and one-eighth yards. Old-fashioned substitutes for the modern sanitary napkin simply won’t do.

You will marvel at the almost unbelievable comfort of Modess. The specially woven gauze is softened by a process known only to Johnson & Johnson. If you examine the absorbent filler center, you will understand why Modess is so yielding—why there is positively no irritation or clumsiness. This remarkable filler is an entirely new substance invented and made by Johnson & Johnson. It is as gentle and fluffy as the softest cotton, yet amazingly absorbent and instantly disposable.

Other exclusive refinements make a surprising difference. The gauze is cushioned with a film of cotton and the sides are smoothly shaped. Best of all, a way has been found to make the soft back moisture-resisting, assuring protection to daintiest gown.

If you will buy one box of Modess, its superiority will be so convincing—its soft comfort so gratifying—that you will never willingly return to a less modern way. Its price is no more than you usually pay.

Helena Rubinstein's Late-Summer Beauty Guide

If your beauty is sun-marred, freckled, deeply tanned, perhaps lined about the eyes, now is your opportunity to test out the world-famous creations of HELENA RUBINSTEIN, foremost modern beauty scientist—to compare them with the imitations which have failed to fulfill their promise.

For Freckles—Tan—
"Weathered" Skin
Cleanse with Valaze Bleaching Cream (1.00). When you wash, use Valaze Beauty Creams instead of soap. Thus extraordinary preparation gently peels away the discolored outer skin, and with it go blackheads, whiteheads and other impurities (1.00). Bleach with Valaze Freckle Cream (1.50).
To prevent further tanning and freckling, apply Valaze Sunproof Cream, before going outdoors (1.00, 2.00).

Youthify Dry, Lined Skin
To restore dewiness to sun-parched skin, to erase the "aging" lines about the eyes, pat Valaze Grecian Anti-Wrinkle Cream (Anthoseros) into the skin, letting this rare rebuilding cream remain on as long as convenient, preferably overnight (1.75).

Your Daily Beauty Treatment
Cleanse with the refreshing, revitalizing Valaze Pasteurized Face Cream, "the basis of beauty"—it soothes, cools, protects (1.00). (For quick cleaning and very dry skin, use Valaze Cleansing and Massage Cream, 75, 1.25.) Clear the skin, remove light tan and freckles with Valaze Beautifying Skinfood, Helena Rubinstein's skin-clearing masterpiece (1.00). Tighten the pores, brace tissues with Valaze Skintoning Lotion (1.25). (For very dry skin, use Skin-toning Lotion Special, 1.25.)

These three preparations represent the most remarkable home beauty treatment value in the world at 3.25.

happy and warm picture will be a flop and you'll lose your job."
"My only answer to that one was that feeling don't count many anyway."
"No," the screen's girl athlete answered, "but three weeks in a hospital do."
"I was lucky on that last one it was only three weeks."
A whole set built on a truck was swept off the truck by an oak tree branch as the truck was driven under the tree. I went through two panes of glass, flapped nine feet to the pavement from a truck going twenty miles an hour, and landed under a mess of two by fours and sun arc lamps.
"One five-hundred pound lamp lit close enough to me to scrape the hat off my head."
"Score torn back muscles, misplaced vertebrae, and a nice little case of auto-intoxication from shock.
"Couldn't eat for a week."

BEBE," I asked, "can I count three broken ankles, innumerable sprains, two broken wrists, eight broken fingers, torn muscles galore, and one nose broken four times, besides a mouthful of teeth loosened up by cheated shoes?"
"You can if you want me to score a lot of little two bit things like them I'll have to rack my memory to remember. I didn't intend to count little ones."
And the Judges, Bebe's mother, Adela Rogers St. Johns, and Charles Faribnan, the pirate of Santa Monica Bay, called it a draw until after lunch.
What say you?
The Shadow Stage

FLEETWING—Fox

A ROMANTIC story of Araby. There is much ado about the capture of a famous wild horse, Fleetwing. The hero captures the horse and a beautiful slave girl from a rival tribe. He falls in love with the girl and is forced to fight his own tribesmen to keep her. Barry Norton is not our idea of a desert sheik, but the story is entertaining and there are some truly beautiful photographic shots of the sand hills.

A SHIP COMES IN—Pathe-De Mille

A LESSON in Americanism. It is the simple story of humble immigrants whose patriotism and love for their adopted country endure through sorrow and injustice. It is too bad this theme has been done so repeatedly, as it grows stale with re-telling. Nevertheless, if you enjoy good acting, you’ll like it. Rudolph Schildkraut, as the lovable immigrant, gives an excellent portrayal, and Louise Dresser, who plays opposite him, does some fine work.

NO OTHER WOMAN—Fox

WE’D like to know why they had to dig this one up. It is one of Dolores Del Rio’s first pictures, made and shelved about two years ago. Dolores hadn’t learned much about the art of acting then, nor, apparently, had the rest of the cast. Lou Tellegen’s amateurish efforts at direction are largely responsible for the results, but the story itself is a absurdity. Too bad it was not left in the vault.

PAINTED POST—Fox

If you are a real Tom Mix fan nothing but the sight of your hero and Tony matters. Then this is for you, for, once again, stay home and cultivate your garden. Being Tom’s last picture for Fox, the studio gave him the old rubber stamp plot—kidnapping, love triangle, chase, spectacular rescue. There’s one thrilling moment when Tom and Tony tip over a windmill to gain entrance into the bandits’ quarters—that’s all. Natalie Kingston is wasted on the heroine’s role.

Fangs of Fate—Pathe

RIX-TIN-TIN doesn’t need to worry about Klondike, a rival canine star, entering his box office. Klondike is a beautiful dog but not an actor as yet, and this present story gives him small opportunities. It’s a dull affair about an attempt to steal an oil invention; Klondike finds the missing plans and exposes the villain. Old stuff, with a romance between Arnold Gray and Kathleen Collins which doesn’t help it any.

Heart Trouble—First National

If this is shown in an open-air-night theater near some midnight mission where you pay fifteen cents for the privilege of slumber—buy a ticket. It won’t keep you awake a moment. But if you wish to enjoy a ‘movie,’ stay away. Just a lot of silly gags, no story and enough inane situations to spell the exit of Harry Langdon. It was his cue to give us a good picture. He didn’t.

Greased Lightning—Universal

A DULL horse opera with the standardized formula. A cowboy hero, a wide-eyed blonde who dumbly lets herself be kidnapped along with the hero’s horse, by the diabolical villain. Our hero starts out to recapture, single-handed, his livestock, including said

I Lost a Pound a Day

Thousands of women have gratefully reduced their weight and even greater reduction has been experienced by women who have followed these instructions.

Reduce those bulges—waist and bust more slender, and legs and arms more shapely. Don’t carry around extra pounds which destroy beauty and health, but may be eliminated by following this easy plan in the privacy of your home, without the use of dangerous drugs or starvation diets.

Wallace of reducing fame now offers you the means, in his NEW WALLACE COURSE, the result of years of experience in bringing back youthful figure to young women and those of middle age and older. FAT MUST YIELD, for nature’s own forces are used to produce the always pleasing shape and size.

This system is complete—a NEW course of eight lessons for the purpose of concentrating the magic of remodeling on any part of the body. Large bulges are transformed into alluring slender lines of beauty; bodies may be reduced to round, slender loveliness. Stocky ankles and calves vanish into attractive curves.

Many have lost twenty, thirty, and even fifty pounds or more, while others desire to lose but a pound or two. Either way this new system is effective.

Easy to Reduce

In preparing these lessons, Mr. Wallace has considered first rapid reduction, and secondly the comfort of the user. The lessons are easy but more effective as weight reductions than anything he has heretofore offered. A lifetime as a reducing expert has taught him how to accomplish the greatest reduction in the easiest possible way.

These eight lessons which Wallace himself has perfected, are the result of careful and prolonged study, and may be tested without risk. If you lose all the pounds you want to lose, or feel no change in your body, you have paid for every thing offered.

Each lesson is made of the heavy fine paper suited for reducing and contains full directions for each lesson, and guides the减者 through the system with ease. A new lesson is given daily for eight days, and a reduced weight may be expected daily. The $5.00 is for everything you get in return, and is refunded without question to the purchaser if you think you have not lost more than what your pound of loss represents.

Wallace Institute,
582 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., Dept. 658.
I will try Wallace’s newest method of losing weight and I hear that it can be done at home. I will send you $5.00 for the course and enclose a check made out to “Wallace Institute” and postmarked postpaid.

JOHN STAHL managed to get Walter Hagen off the course long enough to star him in a picture, but the story is impossible. It's bound to be when the world professional golf champion defaults in a match to a young chap whose college career depends on the tournament purse. Nice sentiment, but it just isn't done. Hagen makes the sporting gesture for Gertrude Olmstead and Johnnie Harron, undergraduate sweethearts. Swell stuff for the golf-goofy.

THE COWBOY KID—Fox

Do you remember the first movies? How a brave, handsome lad rescued the fair damsel from a dozen bad bandits, single-handed? How he performed more miracles in ten minutes than the Knights of King Arthur's Round Table were allowed in a lifetime? Well, Rex Bell, Fox's much-heralded new Western hero, is that legend reincarnated and this is his second picture. If you do not wish to develop the children's imagination, let them see it.

THE LITTLE WILD GIRL—Hercules

It's rather a jolt to see the demure Lila Lee cast as a small town's wild girl. And Cullen Landis is amazingly tailored for a tall timelurker hero, but is otherwise adequate. There are all the usual frontier props and atmosphere, but the plot is terribly dumb. Some Canadian backwoods yokels, who aren't frightfully broadminded, try to run a nice but stage-struck girl out of town for visiting the city. Can such things be?

TOP SERGEANT MULLIGAN—Anchor

Even an all-star cast won't keep you from recognizing this as a direct off-spring of "Behind the Front." The only thing that saves it is the mild kick injected by Wesley Barry and Waite Boteler. The two bobs dougibboys. They fall for a coy Veridian damsel who turns out to be a man spy. Gareth Hughes does a fine job of stealing Julian Eltinge's stuff. What a mean pair of eyes that baby turns loose!

DUGAN OF THE DUGOUTS—Anchor

Another war comedy, Danny O'Shea gives a sparkling characterization of a hot-headed dance hall heel whose life ambition is to join the dance contest. When the war starts, his sweetheart (Pauline Garon) quits him cold and joins the Red Cross. To Danny, the row in France is just a conspiracy to keep him from his sweetheart, so he joins the army to find her. A small production, but good gags and hot titles make you howl.

THE GATE CRASHER—Universal

One of those in-between comedies with a few hilarious moments to relieve the gags which make you wonder who ever thought they might seem funny! Too bad, for Glen Tryon is a good funster and deserves consistent stories. Patsy Ruth Miller gives able support. The story wiggles-waggles about a Dick detective who discovers a jewel thief without use of either rhyme or reason. A good excuse to stay home for an evening.

PROWERS OF THE SEA—Tiffany-Stahl

Should an officer neglect his duty for a woman? When the woman is Carmel Meyers, garbed in Cuban mantilla and filmy lace, there is only one answer to this question. Ricardo Cortez makes it and gets into all of the difficulties which come to an enamored, neglectful commander. George Fawcett, the beguiled general, chances to have a tender heart for the young lover, however. An exceptionally well acted, interesting and above-the-average program picture.

GANG WAR—FBO

OLIVE BORDEN and Jack Pickford (now in the hospital) are teamed for romance in this likeable crook melodrama. This is Olive's first appearance with bobbed hair, which may account for her new complexion and better acting. Eddie Gribbon, erstwhile comedian, turns dramatic and gives us thrills instead of laughs as he plays one of the hobo holiday thugs. He and Jack are cast as rivals, but what chance has a fighter against a "sobbing saxophone singer"? Good entertainment.

THREE RING MARRIAGE—First National

MARSHALL NEILAN brings to the films another romantic drama of circus life that will delight all ages. The circus atmosphere is not real to but actual, for the picture is made with Barnes' Circus. Lloyd Hughes has a circus cowboy role and Mary Astor the feminine replica, but the romantic complications originate prior to this, when the college girl deserts wealth to pursue the man of her choice. Heart interest and Neilan comedy assured. What better?

STOP THAT MAN—Universal

NOW here is a comedy! No wonder Arthur Lake got the coveted Harold Teen role. Warner Richard and Eddie Gribbon are stern policemen, afflicted with a kid brother (Arthur) who would rather be a cowboy. He plays a uniform and makes a fatal public appearance. He meets Barbara Kent and falls hard. From then on, he gets absolutely convivial trying to bluff the girl and at the same time duck his brothers. A riot of fun.

SKIRTS—M.-G.-M.

THE next time Sid Chaplin makes a picture, he'll better stay on American soil until it's finished. This alleged comedy, with its mother-in-law plot dripping moth-balls, has all the earmarks of an English sense of humor, than which there is nothing worse. Sid has admirably lived down his native British influences by his famous super-comedies, but there's bound to be a throw-back sometime, and this is it. Good titles, but you can read at home.

POLLY OF THE MOVIES—First Division

THIS is a "quickie" made with little money and little time. It is amusing, lighthearted entertainment. A slim story about an ugly girl who has a passion for the movies which only Hollywood can conquer. In a small town boy friend lends a helping hand to the movie city. The treatment is novel and the work of Jason Robards makes you wonder why we don't see more of him in the movies. Worth neighborhood-theater prices.

HOT NEWS—Paramount

FOR sure-fire entertainment, see Bebe Daniels and Neil Hamilton in this picture, playing hide and seek around the spinc bonnet of the general of Liberty. So far, the story is best, making the impossible seem easy of accomplishment. It's another story of the motion picture news reel. It sets a fast pace at the start and keeps it up until the end. Maybe not an authentic portrayal, but with such laughs and thrills, we should worry!

BABY CYCLONE—M.-G.-M.

THE stage play by this name was a bright comedy, but the picture cannot be called a mirth-provoker. Splendid material is wasted when it is cast in the trite role of a riffle, Lew Cody, Robert Armstrong and Gwen Lee support Cyclone, the Peckish, through five reels—even if he is a marvelous dog. It's like watching the antics of your friend's boy, when you want the friend to talk with you. Cody and Armstrong do have an excellent intoxicated sequence, but the picture is mediocre.

OBEY YOUR HUSBAND—Anchor

DOROTHY DWAN and Gaston Glass are attractive in the romantic roles of this production, and a fair program picture is the result. Following a midnight elopement, the young husband finds he must work every night. So his pleasure-loving wife, who must be entertained every minute, starts raising hauntedly-handsome, at a gambling joint. From then on, everything happens but a flood and an earthquake, but none of it means a thing.

THE SPEED CHAMPION—Rayart

SMALL town stuff in all its kick glory. The grocery boy knocks out a visiting pupil and gets an offer of overnight success from a by-standing fight-promoter. Without any difficulty, the kid blacks one chimp's eye after another and, oddly enough, goes back to the stick for his biggest fight. There he finds his girl, does a little face lifting on his arrival, and pays the mortgage on pop's grocery. Isn't that just too original?

UNDRESSED—Sterling

NOT an amorous expose, as the title would lead you to believe. It's nothing in the world but a harangue of protagonists who misunderstand their children and treat them like morons. A young lady pays off a bridge debt by posing for a cad artist. When she refuses to go on acting, he attempts to europeize her portrait into a nude. Not exactly good enough for players like Virginia Brown Faire, Hedda Hopper and David Torrence.

Girls' Problems [continued from page 18]

Listen intelligently. A sense of the fitness of things—an adaptability and a poise. They also have their place. It is not necessary to be the life of the party—as so many girls think. Not any more than it is necessary to wear the best clothes or be the most dazzling beauty. But just as it is necessary to make the most of yourself in the matter of hair and complexion and clothes, it is necessary to make the most of your brain and, above all, of your personality! LEONA M.: Do not worry too much about the young man's apparent lack of interest. He is probably staying away from you to make you interested! He is being clever. Be equally clever, yourself.
Hollywood Finds Its Voice

My waitress had one of those incredible bee-stung lips such as only Russian girls have. That gave me an idea for a song: Oh To Be A Bee In Russia. I asked her if she was the escaped Grand Duchess Tatiana.

"No," said she, "I am the one who is not Tatiana."

And, subtly smiling, she went for my borscht. On her return I remarked that there was a lot of Russian royalty in Hollywood.

"Yes," she said, "more than there was in Russia.

America produces everything on a larger scale, I remarked with pardonable pride.

Her name is Olga, Jim, if you ever happen out there. She's not a duchess but a lady. "All the waitresses are ladies," General Lodijensky remarked.

The duchesses only go into pictures.

A NOTHER good reason for leaving Hollywood is the invasion of the talking picture. Everyone is frantically studying English. I don't mean just the foreign stars either. Heretofore the elite of us never studied anything but French. We didn't know there was such a thing as an irregular verb in English, if indeed a verb at all. A pretty lie we are all in maintaining, n'est ce pas?

Then too there is the matter of enunciation and of articulation. Everyone who hopes to be anyone is talking about reciting Marc Lajus's Funeral Oration or Portia's Speech of Mercy just as we did for practice in High School oratory.

And one must cultivate a pleasing voice, or at least one that matches one's pictorial personality, like the perfume or the cigarette. Old Golds can't do the work alone. Indeed if cigarettes worked the wonders claimed for them we'd all have voices like the Japanese sweet-singing crickets.

Some say it's gin that offsets the operatic effect of the cigarette, but this doublebass is propaganda put forth by the druggists. Bootleggers should advertise. It's the only way to get a square deal. Besides, I, for one, never can remember a telephone number.

One of my girl-friend stars asked hopefully if I didn't think talking pictures would put Garbo and Del Rio out of the running. "Au contraire, an accent is always an asset, Nadia was tutored to perfect English by Dick Barthelmess' mother but Alla always saved up a little accent for a rainy day, and a net profit it gives her. What's true for Alla is equally true for my pupil, Bull Montana, although Bull relieves a bit too heavily on his accent. However, as for voice, I can assure you that you will be able to hear Bull from any part of the house.

I MET one of the Warner boys at lunch in the Come-On-Inn. He urged me to visit their new Hollywood theater and hear and see "Glorious Betsy."

"The theater is beautiful, and the prologue is great," he said. "The picture is not much—we made that."

Young Buster Collier made a speech from the screen inviting us to see "The Lion and the Mouse" the next week. I know Buster. He has a sincerely fine personality. But I wasn't prepared for the booming voice he let forth. Either he has been reciting Marc's Funeral Oration too much or is smoking the wrong kind of cigarettes. Later on in the evening we were equally rocked by Conrad Nagel's detonations.

But this will all be remedied. The talking picture is in the pioneer novelty stage just where the movie was when we marveled at the white linoleum of the balcony.

Screen Story Success through PALMER TRAINING

If you have the urge, the desire to see your own stories on the screen or in print, the Palmer Institute can help you. Palmer Courses are personal, inspirational and of insteaminual help to both the beginner and to the experienced writer.

Charles Kenyon, author of the Iron Horse, says about the Palmer courses and training: 'The Palmer Institute is better equipped to teach the screen story than any institution outside of a motion picture studio. The fact that studios are too busy making pictures to teach people how to make them leaves the Palmer Institute alone in its field... The Palmer Photoplay course would have saved me at least a year in arriving at my present position and income'.

Last three pictures. Directors had to be offered large sums of money to work with them. Cutters despairs of ever pleasing them. Camera men jumped up and down on their hats. Publicity men trembled for fear of story of their making would "break" in the papers and magazines. And now they were engaged to be married! The studio shrugged its shoulders. Actors were a strange bunch.

Andy read the papers in bed, over his morning coffee, and he could marmor nothing but "Well, I'll be damned!" to his negro valet, who busied himself with his bath in the movie. If F. B. O. had been negotiating with him to do the story of his life.

Maybe I can sign up Calles while in Mexico. He'll soon be through with his presidential job and in view of the way all his people are going over on the screen he ought to be out next big thing. Maybe. I'll go ahead and take a shot. Makes a man either rush up and confess his sins or start committing more.

Mystery is playing the title role in "The Four Devils."

Speaking of talking picture hits, my old pal Mussolini (Let bygones be bygones, Benito) proved such a bonfire front of his story. The man had been negotiating with him to do the story of his life.

He was stopped as he crossed the lawn by a prop boy who insisted upon shaking hands with him and beaming upon him. The publicist was at his shop to tell him that he wished him happiness. Congratulations echoed and reverberated over the lot like a director saying "no" to a supervisor. What a silly situation was happening! He just couldn't go through with it any longer.

他的 set was buzzing with it. When he came on the various groups that had been contracted he jumped aside and pretended to be busy about something important. The director walked toward him with the stride of a screen star's mother and held out both hands.

"Well, old man," he said in a hearty voice, "you two are great actors. Here I thought all along you were sore with each other and now you're not. I was mistaken." "Can I read the story in the paper this morning?"

"But I..."

And Felicite arrived, cool, a trifle gay, and just as insincere as ever. She actually floated to him and laid a possessive hand on his shoulder.

"Have you a good morning kiss for me?" she purred, and there was nothing for him to do but to kiss the silly cat.

He tried to see her alone for a minute and explain to her that although he had to be a gentleman and acknowledge an engagement that she had announced, she must give him the thing up, and she, herself, could say what she thought best. Make him out of any sort of a fool, if she chose, but release him and keep him a gentleman. That she must do. However, Felicite was not to be seen alone, that was certain. Not even for a moment.

Reporters came out. They had their pictures taken together and every time he tried to whisper to her she pretended to be deaf and surrounded herself with people.

Andrew Wheaton had spent unpleasant days. The day that Julie left him was one, but never having anything to do with Felicite.

He was just in the midst of a scene with Felicite. He had to kiss her, while everyone looked smug and self satisfied, when suddenly he heard a commotion. He looked over his set. A familiar voice rang out, "I guess I will see her. I guess I'll come in if I like."

He looked up and saw Julie, a very hot and bothered Julie, making her way toward him. He jumped from the couch (he and Felicite seemed to be constantly doing things on couches WOMEN with complications that seemed permanently clouded, too sensitive, or coarse-textured, have found a way to attain a clear, soft skin.

Women with a continual succession of blackheads and blemishes, have found that this simple daily treatment would often clear away even serious skin disorders, in a reasonable time.

Yet there is no mystery about it. It is simply a method of keeping the skin functioning normally.

To reach below the skin surface

Deep down in the under layers of your skin is where the trouble starts. Tiny glands secreting moisture, pores throwing off poisons, capillaries rushing fresh blood in and carrying off infection—here is a delicate balance of forces. With healthy vigor and activity comes a clear, fresh complexion. Too much or too little stimulation, and there starts that long succession of blisters and faults that women are so constantly seeking to avoid.

To cleanse the pores, to carry off infection, and then to stop new infection before it starts—thousands of women have learned the daily use of Resinol Soap. Cleansing, soothing, mildly stimulating, Resinol sinks deep into the pores and starts the skin again acting normally.

Also as a general toilet soap—for baby’s tender skin, for shampooing, for the bath! Note its clean, tonic odor.

For the more serious affections

RESINOL OINTMENT has for years been successful in relieving even stubborn skin affections. Rashes and eczema—often itching, unpleasant and embarrassing—will in many cases vanish promptly. Thousands have wondered at the QUICKNESS of its action. And it is absolutely harmless.

Pretty eyes in a moment

ow, both the anatomist and the artist look at women through sexless eyes. Yet, paradoxical though it may seem, those sexless eyes are seeking in women the very things that are sought by the eyes of the male in quest of his mate. This sexless beauty-search of science and art is paralleled by the yearning for beauty that Nature gives men, as part of her tremendous machine of sex and love.

—and there I've epitomized the story of my own romance!

It was a few years ago that I was one of the judges in a beauty contest in a New York city hotel. Harrison Fisher was another; Lowell

Sherman, the actor, was the third. Before us three, there paraded a line of girls who sought the crown that yearly awarded the night

"Queen of Beauty." Over at a nearby table, I could hear a merry party urging one of their number—a truly beautiful blonde girl—to go into the contest.

She did, finally. And she stood out so dazzingly from those others that we unanimously awarded her the prize. Her name was Helen Cunningham and she was featured by Florence Ziegfeld in several of his productions.

When I returned to the table with Fisher and Sherman, after placing the crown on this girl's head, I was in a daze. These two began to "kill me."

"What's the matter, Henry?" asked Harrison.

"I thought you were used to beautiful girls."

"But I've never seen such a magnificent blonde, I murmured."

"Well, don't you marry the girl?" Sherman flung at me, jestingly.

"Now that you bring the matter up," I answered while they laughed, "I WILL!!"—

—and four weeks later, I did.

W hoever first cried that "beauty is only skin-deep" was just making epig-ograms instead of express—The truth is that beauty is one of the most inclusive terms there is. It goes much deeper than skin.

The beauty that is only skin-deep is only a skin game, and no woman, or man either, can get away with any skin game for long.

Beauty means not only superficial beauty, not only the beauty that is evident on first glance at face and form, but also beauty of mind, beauty of voice, beauty of character.

It means beauty in carriage, bearing, poise.

If a woman isn't beautiful in everything, she simply isn't beautiful, is she? She is either beautiful or not beautiful; if there is a flaw, there's no beauty. And that flaw may lie in any of a number of places.

An illustration:

Some time ago, the Los Angeles newspapers reported my arrival there in quest of a blonde beauty who was to be titled "The Golden Girl" and featured by Florence Ziegfeld in one of his revues.

Of course, an immediate avalanche of blonde檀eurs descended. There were featured film players and extras, waitresses and stenographers, home-girls and business girls. The telephone and mail brought countless suggestions that I was a dead丢失.

And they came to me in person by the scores.

One after the other, I rejected them. Some of them were utterly hopeless at first glance, although they couldn't see it themselves.

Others appeared beautiful at first—but soon the flaws stood out. And one of these was the magnificent-looking tiger-haired creature that I met at a gathering of film players one eve-nine.

When I laid eyes on her, I thought my search was over. "Here," said I, "is the Golden Girl.

Ziegfeld will rave over her."

I asked my host to introduce me. He did. I feasted my jaded eyes while I murmured some suitable compliments and acknowledged the introduction. And then she opened her mouth and spoke—

"Have you ever experienced the disillusion of hearing a peacock utter its cry? Harry's always wondered how it was possible that so beautiful a creature could make such an ugly sound? Well, that's how it was with this girl—she had a voice that would have better fitted a scullery slattern! Superficially beautiful she was, but can you imagine a voice like that in a Ziegfeld revue?"

"But it wasn't her fault, was it?" you protest. I have a hunch, though, that it was.

There isn't a voice that can't be modulated and bettered. And liquor won't do any voice—the usual peacock voice of a young woman—much good, either.

Now don't get me wrong. I'm not moralistic.

Those that know me will testify to that. Any woman, of a certain type, may—may—have a cocktail or a highball, provided I'm stocked. But moderation, that's the watchword! Old John Q. Moderation is one of the very best friends that Lady Beauty ever had!

And so, in the final analysis, physical beauty is more in my line. I paint the tangible things. The other things may be offensive to the various senses, but when a woman's figure finds itself at rest on canvas, she is very beautiful. Not. Once again I'll restrict my field of discussion to these things—lines and colors . . .

Too many of these modern girls have too little of one and too much of the other—too few lines and too many colors.

Very, very often they have a "fine" but no lines—no more lines than a telegraph pole or a beanpole, and who ever saw a beautiful beanpole? These girls who try to look like bean-poles ought to remember that beanpoles were devised for utility and not for beauty. I don't think any girl possesses the "比我 mileage of" to "beauty" when it is applied to herself.

It's a funny thing, isn't it?—so many of these girls will go to the beaches and laugh together, these figures on the market, they in in bathing suits.

And yet what do they do, these girls?—they go right ahead and try to get exactly that kind of

know.

It doesn't make sense, does it? Seems that women's minds function in paradoxes. Like this: They wish to be admired by men. Well, ever since time dawned, men have admired the curves of the female figure. Logic would be for women, then, to retain a usually not in all their beauty. But do they? They do NOT!—

they try to make their figure as un-female as possible—flat-chested, hipless, as straight-up-and-down as a fourteen-year-old boy!'

A STRAIGHT line is the shortest distance between two points. But when a man looks at a woman and does not regard her as hurry. He doesn't mind a detour or two—in the right places. In fact, he rather expects them and looks for them.

So be cautious against misunderstanding.

Remember what I said about moderation—and so don't go to the other extreme. Even more distasteful to the eyes of the artist than the now-attracted "boyish form" is that ancient

Beauty Is More Than Skin Deep

volutuousness that used to grace the burlesque stage, for instance.

Remember those funny pictures of Frankie Bailey, say? Or Fay Templeton?—curves that would make a pretzel jealous!! Too many curves are just as bad on a woman as on a highway that's trying to get some place. But that works the other way, too—a highway without curves is awfully uninteresting, and so's a woman.

I don't want a woman to billow violently here and there—but I, like any other man, want her to have her curves where they belong. And in beautiful moderation.

You've probably noticed that the hipless-curves figure is quite passe, anyway, nowadays. Theater managers, film producers have all realized that their audiences demand women with feminine appeal. Look at Ziegfeld's chorus girls now—he's picking them for beauty instead of speed. They're built like women instead of the pictures in fashion magazines.

Incidentally, there's the crux of the trouble about women's figures—the fashion arbiters! These Parisian couturiers and modistes and what-nots have been building clothes that look good on clothes-racks but not on natural-shaped women. And so women, instead of telling the couturiers to go jump in a lake, have made clothes-racks of themselves instead.

What man wants to marry a clothes-rack?

But there's one item—or rather two—that women can't camouflage. That's their legs. A few years ago, they could hide them. But those days have gone forever. Today there's no more secret about a woman's legs than there is about a postcard in a country post-office!

And bingo!—here comes the paradox again: For now that legs are thoroughly in evidence, women are blithely going ahead losing whatever shapeliness Nature put there!

Why, only a few weeks ago, Dr. Charles Mayo, the world-famous surgeon, corroborated from the scientific viewpoint what I and other painters have known for a long time from the artistic viewpoint—that high heels are completely unshaping women's calves.

"The wearing of high heels constantly," said the good doctor, "gives the calf muscles no exercise, and consequently they are gradually but certainly becoming comparatively atrophied. As a result, women's legs are becoming straight and skinny and shapeless."

Of course, women look better wearing high heels than otherwise. That's all right, too. What's the remedy, then, you ask?—it's simple:

Let women wear high heels when they are "dressed up"—but wear medium heels or heelless slippers the rest of the time. Give the calf muscles exercise, so they'll develop naturally. And the result will be shapely legs, which occasional "dress-up" wearing of high heels won't hurt at all.

Of course, once again there's the other extreme—"piano legs!" They're worse than the skinny ones. A fatted calf is fine on a barbecue, but on a good-looking girl, it's terrible! Too much athletics is often to blame. There's John Q. Moderation raising his voice again.

And now this long-or-short hair business...

Personally, I don't give a hang whether they bob or not. A pretty bob is just as beautiful as a lot of piled-up hair. But a man's haircut on a woman is NOT!

A bob is not un feminine; a mannish cut is. By affecting the mannish cut, women are just destroying another of the female characteristics that are beautiful. Why, why in the name of reason, should any woman want to make herself look like a man?

And why, also, will brunettes try to be blondes?

As I said, I went to California looking for "The Golden Girl"—the ideal blonde. I honestly believe I've seen 25,000 more-or-less blondes since I reached there. And you'll all be surprised to know how many of them

The Secret of Lovely Hair is Combing

The glory of one's own lovely hair—its rare color—depends upon careful combing to preserve the style. Ace Combs meet the needs for special care perfectly. They are hard rubber, highly polished and smooth, with a silky action which actually benefits the texture of the most delicate hair. A large (9 inch) Ace Comb gently untangles and refreshes the scalp, first thing in the morning; the Ace Pocket or Bobbed Hair Comb assures neatness and lustre during the day, while the greatest boon of all is the Ace Dry Shampoo Comb which, used nightly, keeps the hair free from dust, and insures a healthy scalp.

How to have Lovely, Lustrous Hair—always!

Arthur V. Plainville, Conn.—You are right and your friend is mistaken. Harold Lloyd was considerably over 3 feet above the ground in 1926. “Safety Last!” Naturally he was protected by a net or a shelf or some sort of contraption, but the scene actually was made in the air.

B. M. Holden, W. Va.—Malcolm McGregor's newest is "The Girl on the Barge." He's married. He was a film at the Universal Studios, Universal City, Calif. Rudolph Valentino and Natacha Rambova were married in Mexico. That's why you were confused.

B. J. Oakland, Calif.—"The Plastic Age" was released several years ago. Clara Bow, Gilbert Roland and Donald Keith headed the cast. Janet Gaynor hasn't made up her mind whom she is going to marry. Have patience, maybe you'll get that picture yet.

Be, San Francisco, Calif.—Be what? Be yourself. Elinor Fair was born in Richmond, Va., Dec. 21, 1904. She has played in "The Volga Boatman," "Gallatin," "Tillie's Punctual Lover," "Sin City." Write to her at the Pathe-De Mille Studios, Culver City, Calif.

F. M., Indianapolis, Ind.—Ronald Colman is thirty-six. He is married, but separated from his wife. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will be eighteen in December.

M. R. M., St. Louis, Mo.—You don't want much, do you? You don't care how hard you make the old man work. "Chocolate," the singer, I will plunge right in. Corinne Griffith has blue eyes and light brown hair. She is thirty-two years old, five feet, three inches tall and weighs 120 pounds. Greta Garbo also has light brown hair and blue eyes. Mary Astor is five feet, five inches tall and weighs 120 pounds, same as Corinne. She has green eyes and brown hair. May McAvoy is one inch under five feet tall and only weighs 94 pounds. She has dark hair and blue eyes and is twenty-seven years old.

Billie D., Montreal, Canada.—Your last name suits you perfectly. Yes. Richard Dix was very ill but fortunately he has recovered. Richard was born in St. Paul, Minn., thirty-two years ago. He has dark brown hair with dark brown eyes. Write to Larry Kent at the Universal, 1401 Western Avenue, Hollywood, Calif. And come around again as often as you like.

S. H. S., Mount Vernon, N. Y.—William Powell was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., July 29, 892. That's why he is given to dark deeds. He is six feet tall, weighs 160 pounds and has brown hair and brown eyes. He is a mammal American. Married to Eileen Wilson, a stage actress. No, Irene Rich didn't play in the revival of "Fashion." So far as I know, Irene never has been on the stage.

which turns upon you and destroys you if any unpleasantness comes up in your personal affairs.

"The only reputation which means anything is that which rests upon good performances.

"SCREEN actors have been ruined ere now by some unpleasantness in their private lives. But the recent unhappy circumstances which arose in Chaplin's life did him no damage, professionally.

"People like Chaplin's pictures. They enjoy his performances. And they are going to see him in the theater, regardless of any accusations which may be made against him. He is an artist. And his fame rests on that fact alone.

"What we do at home—what we eat or wear—the things we have in our houses—our domestic relations—have nothing to do with the pictures we make.

"I am going to keep the two things separated. "Two people cannot live in the public eye constantly, every move watched and noted, and keep their perspective on life. It destroys their chance of happiness."

Which brings us to his third prediction. If he succeeds in making the second come true—then the third will follow along of its own accord.

He mentioned Lindbergh in connection with this.

"Please do not think for a moment," he said, "that I am comparing the accomplishments of that remarkable boy to those of any actor in the world. I mention him because he is the object of more adulation, the subject of more newspaper copy than anyone has ever been before."

"The penalty he has had to pay for fame and real accomplishment has been terrific. None of this fame is false. None of it has been built up, as motion picture fame is sometimes built, for practical reasons."

"It is the actual result of things he has done and the amazing personality he possesses—the simplicity of the man."

"But—he cannot eat or move, he can hardly sleep, without the whole world looking on and making comments."

"It has obviously galled and punished him to an indescribable degree.

"MOTION picture actors suffer all this in a lesser degree throughout their careers. And it is no admiration which prompts it. It is curiosity."

"Please don't think I am a sore-head. Please don't quote me as saying about the penalties of fame and all that sort of rot. I am simply trying to protect my happiness and secure the privacy to which every man is entitled."

"I hope that I shall not always have to act."

"I hope that some day I may direct and produce, or something."

"I should hate to live without working in pictures somehow."

"But I should like a quieter job!"

I realize and I feel sure that Dick realizes, too, that few people are going to spend much pity on a good looking youth who has enjoyed as much success as he has, while still young. The majority of people doubtless feel that they could even enjoy the limelight.

But the disillusionment in his eyes is real. The grim attempt he is making to protect his happiness is the result of bitter experience. Dick Barthelmess, actor, has not been a very happy man and now that happiness beckons again, it is not surprising that he fears the forces which destroyed it for him in the past.

He will make those predictions come true if it is humanly possible.
The Story of a Dancing Girl

The chorus. My little feet, sometimes bare—sometimes in sandals, would unconsciously at first imitate the steps of the girls who were dancing. It was here that I learned not only my first steps but learned that in dancing I could find an outlet for my baby pent-up emotions. As I danced I forgot everything but the exhilaration of moving body. An exhilaration which has never left me.

Back of our house was a large, old-fashioned barn with a peaked roof. It was here that I had my first experience in dressing up. My brother was just two years younger than I. We would trace each other’s steps, and the steps I had learned in the wings, concocting new ones to the music the boys whistled.

I have promised to write this story from my feelings! In these days when so many stories I cannot remember many casual happenings, I recall the one thing that my mother and brother would not allow me to do. How foolish it is for mothers to say to their children, “No! You can not do it!” without any adequate explanation. If they had told me why—but they didn’t. So I used to run away and play with the boys anyway.

I remember how my mother loved my brother best, felt she had no right to let him boss me. Although I was stubborn by nature, this imagined preference of my mother for my brother made me even more stubborn. I remember one day mother sent me to my room as a punishment. When she came to me an hour later, I was standing in the corner stamping my feet and scuffing. “I didn’t do it—I didn’t!” Whether I had done it or not, I do not remember. But that was my story and I was going to stick to it!

My comfort came from my daddy, my dancing and my doll babies. Isn’t it strange that little girls who are not happy always turn to dolls with that instinctive longing to play mother so that they can make their children happy? Much has been written about my doll room. It is all true. I have one entire room in my house in Hollywood filled with little girls’ dolls. Boy babies, boy animals, even to this day, when I am unhappy, I go to this room, sit on the floor, and talk to my babies. Even to this day when life is all topsy-turvy I go out and dance until I am exhausted. To this day, I long for my Daddy Cassin and wish I could climb on his lap and pour out my troubles as I did when I was a baby.

My next memory is a mere shadow. But a shadow like most of those baby-shadows, by disobeying my mother. A bunch of boys came whoopieing down our alley in their Indian suits calling for me to come and play with them. I must have been seven. In my hurry to get out before my mother or brother could stop me, I stepped out on a lode has. It cut through my shoe, dug deep into my heel. Among those operations. That bottle explains why I have never been a toe-dancer. To this day that foot bothers me. I was that in the house for weeks. I would hobble about with my doll, poke my nose into this, into that. One afternoon I found a funny bargain in the cellar under the cover of one of those old-fashioned receptacles. I pulled it out and worked for what was probably an hour to get it open. When I did, a great heap of bright, shiny, gold flat things rolled onto my cold, dirt floor. I screeched with joy as I played with them. Mother heard, came down, grabbed the bag from me. Then she sat down and cried and cried and cried. I couldn’t hear what she was saying. They told me to comfort my mother. She wouldn’t let me.

Shortly after that I was sent with my brother to visit my grandmother in Phoenix, but I remember stuff. The train was and that I was crying because I did not want to leave my daddy. Suddenly, my brother opened his suitcase and pulled out a picture of a stick of black hair. Even now, I remember how curly his hair looked in that faded old picture.

"That’s your real father, kid," my brother told me. "Cassini is not your father. Your name, sis, is Le Sueur, not Cassini."

And that was the way I was introduced to my first father! I have never seen him. They told me he was dead but I know he was alive a year ago because I tracked him. That is one reason I decided to write this story. I thought maybe he might read it and come to me.

When we returned home something terrible happened. I must have been about seven. I cried and cried and cried and cried. I saw it and my mother has never told me. But the bright things I had found in the bag proved to be money. Daddy Cassin had been taken to prison. But he didn’t steal them. He had hidden them for another who had taken them. I knew my daddy was innocent.

Soon after that we moved to Kansas City. I felt that something was wrong between my mother and daddy but I never knew anything definite about it. They put me in a convent—St. James Academy.

I suppose all this sounds very strange coming from Joan Crawford, the gay dancing girl of today, as you have seen and read about her. That is the reason I was afraid to tell it to you. You have one idea of Joan Crawford. Now you are going to form another. For I have never been a really happy person. Why even now, two women are suing their husbands for divorce, naming me as correspondent. One of them is a musician who plays for my pictures. How can be happy when things like that are always happening to me? There should be a law in this country forbidding people to name correspondents unless they have solid proof against them! I am innocent!

I suppose I should have been happy in the convent. But I was so sensitive. If I thought the girls didn’t like me, I would go and hide rather than ask them to play with me.

I was there about a year when mother came for me. There was no money; she and daddy had separated.

But I didn’t want to go home with mother if daddy wasn’t there. I begged so hard to stay that they let me wait on tables to pay for my tuition. I finished grammar school in that manner.

I do not need to tell you that it wasn’t easy. There were no cruel as small children. At least I had been their equal. Now I was just their waitress!

Mother was running a cheap little hotel. There was no way I had to go home to it. As I’d leave the school Saturday and start for home, I’d walk up and down every street looking for my daddy. I didn’t know what to tell the people at the hospital. I was afraid I might miss him! I’d look at their shoes. You can see so many more shoes than faces. Daddy always wore the same kind of shoes. I knew he’d recognize me if I had taken them off every evening and brought his slippers for him.

One day I saw them. "Daddy!" How I screamed it. We went into a drug store and he bought me an ice cream soda. That was one of the happiest memories of my childhood—sitting on a drug store stool eating a ten cent ice cream soda with daddy Cassin! Mother couldn't keep the hotel; she didn't have enough money. Just about the time I finished grammar school she took a laundry agency. It was in one of the poorest districts of Kansas City, how I hated it! Bad men; terrible women. I couldn't cross the street without men trying to speak to me and looking at me strangely.

Mother couldn't keep me there. She had to find a place for me. She put me in a fourteen room combination boarding and day school that catered to the wealthy children in the residential district. I was to take care of the small kiddies, wash them and dress them in the morning, put them to bed in the evening, clean the house and get the family dinner in the evening. For this I was to get my high school education.

HOW often have I wondered if the wealthy talk who sent their children to that school would have continued had they known the way I was treated. I must be careful what I say for the woman who ran the school may still be living. But she deserves every bad word I could write about her. There was scarcely a day that I did not receive a beating. One time it was the beaten work. Another girl offered to help me. She got the dust pan for me. This woman saw her! She dragged me down two flights of stairs by the hair, then not only beat me but kicked me. The kiddies were my only comfort. After I got them to bed I would read them stories and wonder why their mothers left them in a school like this when they had enough money to keep them at home and take care of them. I thought I couldn't stand it. I ran away. I walked the streets of Kansas City one entire day. I was too ashamed to go to mother in those dingy little three rooms at the back of that laundry. It began to grow dark. I had to go somewhere—a police station stopped me. I returned to the school, took off my shoes and tried to sneak in. I can see myself now in my little blue skirt and blue sweater. That was the only dress I had, two skirts and one sweater. She heard me! And she dragged me into the kitchen, threw me on the floor and kicked me and kicked me!

How I longed to go home and tell mother about it. Every Saturday I would start for home with that feeling, "Now, I am going to tell mother." And every Saturday as soon as I'd get within town I'd call and tell me to wash the laundry. Then she'd go out with somebody. As I grew older, things were a little better.

The wealthy boys who came to the school liked me. That woman used to let me go out and dance with them so they'd keep coming to the school! It was then that it began to dawn on me that men might be useful to a woman.

There wasn't any particular boy at this time. I went out with them all. Always Danny Cross, how I hated that! I began to wonder if I couldn't make money from my dancing. One night I won a dancing contest at the Jack O'Lantern Cafe in Kansas City. You can imagine what that meant to me. It strengthened my idea that I might make money at something besides sweeping floors and washing dishes.

At the end of three years they said my high school education was finished. Mother took me to Stevens College at Columbia, near the State University. I waited on tables. But tables or no tables I never missed a fraternity dance at the University. The thought that I could become a professional dancer was growing stronger and stronger. I was tired of waiting on table. I didn't see what good college would do me.

I ran away. Daddy Woods, the Dean, caught me at the railroad station. He took me back and had a long talk with me. I will never forget it. "Billy, if you are not happy, we do not want you to stay. But leave in an honorable manner. I am giving you an honorable dismissal. I went home to the laundry. What else could I do? But mother said if I couldn't stay in school, I couldn't go out dancing. What! Take my dancing from me?

ON top of that I found mother was to be married. This time it was to a man named Hough. My third father! Just one more man to help boss me. I couldn't stand it. One day while they were out hunting an apartment, I packed up my clothes and few belongings. I left Hough, I was free. I could dance! Nothing—mother, fathers, schools, men—there wasn't anything in this world big enough to keep me from being a famous dancer. I was going to Broadway. I didn't know how I would get there. I didn't have any money. But that didn't matter. I was started now and Broadway was going to recognize Lucille La Sueur and make something of her!

And so Joan Crawford, nee Lucille La Sueur, starts out for Broadway—and sets as far as Springfield, Mo. In the October issue of Photoplay, Miss Crawford will tell of her experiences in the road companies and cabarets of the middle west. And she writes, too, of her first love affair. Watch for the next installment of her colorful and vivid story.

HART THROBS

Scranton, Pa.

I am not married myself but most of my girl friends are. One girl in particular that I know has cause to thank the movie for the happiness of her little home. A. loved her husband dearly but it just seemed as if he couldn't keep a steady job. Things went from bad to worse. Finally A. decided she was going to take the baby and move home.

She came and told me about the situation. What could I say or do? I suggested that we go to a movie. We saw "The Crowd." A. watched James Murray's wonderful charaterization of the husband who was a dreamer. But he didn't keep his job either. She saw Eleanor Boardman act all of her own disappointment and joy and hope. She realized that the love of husband and wife is strong enough to overcome all troubles and obstacles. She came out of the theater with a changed view of life and went back to her husband and keep their home together.

Is it any wonder it makes us angry when some people say that the movies are ruining people's lives? A. H.
Why Athletes Fail in Pictures

unknown and the next had leaped to fortune and to fame. The price was too great; the sacrifice too much.

Gertrude Ederle could make much more money in other fields for which she was better equipped.

On the proud summit of San Simon, where the waves of the Atlantic Caliifornia's golden shore, Trudie and I talked it all over—this business of a picture career. And we decided that unless we made ourselves "indispensable" to the project, it was other work which afforded greater opportunities.

FOR my own experience in pictures had been almost identical with Gertrude Ederle's.

Back in the Spring of 1926 I had been down in San Diego when a wire came to me from Joseph Jackson, a well-known writer in Hollywood, asking me if I would be interested in playing a part in "The Campus Flirt," a starring picture for Bebe Daniels. I was interested. For years I had enjoyed something more than a speaking acquaintance with the City of the Cinema. Many of my closest friends had made the trip from New York and the idea had been swirling about my own head for some time. So, little Jack Horner, all I had to do was "stick in my thumb and pull out a plum."

And I discovered that it was not so very difficult to get my finger in the pudding. But to find anything that even remotely resembled a plum was quite another matter.

In a period of a year and a half I appeared in five pictures, "The Campus Flirt," "Breaking Records," "The College Hero," "The High School Hero," and "The Olympic Hero." At the end of that time I did not have either a fortune or a picture reputation. In two pictures I had been starred—"Breaking Records" and "The Olympic Hero." On my reputation as an amateur athlete without professionalizing myself, while the parts I had portrayed in the other three were not big enough to set any part of the world a-live, even including my own home town.

In short, my histrionic efforts had shown that a tendency to connect me in fast time as a sprinter did not help me in the least to reach the top in motion pictures. As an actor I had proved to be a fairly efficient athlete.

For my own peace of mind, I had to look about me and see that I was not alone. For instance, there was Duke Paoa Kahanamoku, whose name is still a household word both here and abroad, who also had tried his hand at the galloping pictures.

He came to the screen as the fastest swimmer in the world, with all the color of a picturesque Hawaiian.

He had won the Olympic 100 meters in 1912 in Stockholm and in 1920 at Antwerp. He held the world's record for the distance, for 100 yards and for many other races.

He was the official greeter of the Islands, appointed by the king of Hawaii. He was almost worshipped by his countrymen because of his striking resemblance to the great King Kamehameha, called the Napoleon of the Pacific. He was the most skillful surf-board rider who ever lived and could handle an out-rigger canoe with dazzling facility. Moreover, a notorious joker, having the audacity to spil the Prince of Wales from an out-rigger when the latter visited Hawaii, a joke which the Prince received in such splendid spirit that the two became staunch friends.

Kahanamoku was, moreover, a descendent of one of the few remaining pure-blooded Hawaiian families and was closely connected to the royal family, his father being commander of the Imperial Police in the days of the Monarch.

Duke Paoa Kahanamoku, most perfect specimen of his race, well over six feet in height, well over 200 pounds in weight, with a picturesque and splendid face and the carriage of an athlete, came to the screen as a star. He had achieved fame. He found that his name meant nothing. He had to start all over again. He had to build up with the extras. He was conscious that he had been Hawaiian and surprise. And his labors were unrewarded. Now and then his name would be given screen credit. But in such fashion that few associated Duke Kahanamoku, the greatest swimmer, with Duke Kahanamoku, the petty chieftain of a native group, or Kahanamoku the pirate, or Kahanamoku the soldier, or Kahanamoku the body guard of the hero. And his salary was commenurable with the roles that he played. It is doubtful if Duke ever got more than $100.00 a week and certainly there were plenty of weeks when he got less, and many others when he was idle.

JOHNNY WEISMULLER, who followed Kahanamoku as champion, also turned his eyes toward pictures. But he saw no beckoning fingers and he refused to make the sacrifices that Duke had done, with no goal in sight.

His team-mate, Stubby Kruger, almost as famous as himself, a handsome fellow with a flair for comedy, did try pictures. He played with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate."

But it was extra work and it was not possible to pick him out from the other swimmers who were merely the production. The golden chance did not come his way so Stubby checked out of Hollywood at last.

As Stubby was leaving, Fay Lanchester, Miss California, the winner of the National Beauty contest at Atlantic City, was on her way to Hollywood. She had been promised a role in pictures. She understood that she was soon to be starred. The production she was to play in was entitled "The American Venus." She thought, of course, she was to be the name star. She thought she would attract the starring honors went to a newcomer named Esther Ralston, while another unknown, Louise Brooks. "look the picture."

Miss Ralston is now a great star and Miss Brooks has become one of the most popular leading women in Hollywood, but Fay Lanchester, better known at that time than a dozen Esthers and Jokers, has been forgotten. She was not indispensable.

THEN there is Bill Tilden, once the greatest tennis player in the world. Tilden starred in a play on Broadway. It was thought that the acting experience he gained in this manner, together with his fame, which was world-wide, would make him a picture star. Everybody seemed to think so—except the picture producers. They only gave him small parts and paid him as they paid their other small-part people. So Tilden made a picture of his own, with outside backing. But that did not stifle the industry either. And he finds himself today in relatively the beginning again, with the task of starting all over and building up with no guarantee that he will ever ‘arrive.’ His name was not big enough to gain him a golden share of ‘Movie Money.”

Four athletic names which have attracted more interest than any others in the last few years are those: Bob Mathias, the undis-

Each of these has at one time or another gone into motion pictures with varying degrees of luck, similar in one respect, in that it was all bad.

Benny Leonard was one of the first athletes to tackle the industry. He had tackled almost everything else with success and Benny decided that the cinema should also yield big dividends. He had a great deal of trouble getting anybody to undertake the task of promoting him.

This was something hard for him to understand, inasmuch as he was the reigning fighter of his time and the most popular man his division had ever produced.

Vaudeville was always willing to pay him well and he could not appreciate the indifference of screen producers.

However, he at last rounded an independent producer named Frank Hall, who had proved himself a gluton for punishment in the past and who thought that, through Universal, it might be possible to turn Leonard's athletic prestige into dollars and cents. Benny was promised a per cent of the net returns and he was given a drawing account for his expenses and incidentals, during the filming of the epic. It was a serial with a number of installments and it cost about $150,000 to make and it took about six months. If Benny was a good hand at padding his expense account he may have made something. But his returns, via the percentage route, would have made one of his slimmest purses look like opulence, according to some of those who helped to handle the distribution.

Because in the undignified parlance of the picture industry his epic was a " flop."

Babe Ruth, Sultan of Swat, had a more lucrative experience. Fortunately for the Babe, he possesses a shrewd manager in Christy Walsh, who happens to have been raised in Los Angeles and has a close acquaintance with many of the boys who are the men behind the men in Hollywood. Christy was wise to percentages.

He knew that independent pictures or even pictures distributed through recognized distributing corporations, take a long, long time to return the original investment.

For there are prints to be made, almost as fast as the picture is sold; advertising paper and selling costs and road-showing expenses, all besides the initial production budget.

Walsh had been informed that First National was to make a baseball film. He figured that Babe's name should be worth money to any picture of the diamond. It is said that he even had the title in the back of his head, "Babe Comes Home." And he sold First National the idea; sold it on a cash and carry basis.

It is claimed that the Babe got $10,000 a week for three weeks and this is probably very close to the actual amount. Out of that Babe's manager had doubt got a cut, and there were training expenses and incidentals to be paid, so that the final reckoning did not exceed by a great deal the money Ruth could have made during a similar period in vaudeville or on an exhibition tour.

But it was gravy and perhaps the best deal that any athlete has ever gotten out of a screen venture.

The executives at First National were not happy over the outcome. The picture, even with the dazzling Anna Q. Nilsson as the leading lady, was not a success.

It is said that the final split between First National and their popular Swedish player grew out of her dissatisfaction in being forced to play such roles as the one she had in "Babe Comes Home."

So that it is expected the next time First National makes a baseball classic, Babe Ruth will not be invited to participate therein. He should worry. He once held them "back to back" which is more than many another celebrity can say in regard to his picture experiences.

Jack Dempsey was leaving the new offices of Tiffany-Stahl productions the other day. His hat was pulled down over his eyes and he did not look particularly cheerful. Word had

Not the entrance to the Bronx Express. On the contrary, Jane Winton is down to call on the early Christians. With a monk acting as her guide, Miss Winton is about to explore the Catacombs of Rome. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful complexion.

Be sure to ask for double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove your freckles.

THE pictures were not money-makers and no one knows how much Dempsey ever collected, earning on seeing Christopher Columbus was another one of those complications which formed a part of the Dempsey-Kearns arrangement. It did not terminate successfully enough for Dempsey to care for a repetition of the dose.

Repetition is sometimes dangerous. Red Grange found it so. In the same year that Charlie Pyle shot a 96 to make the red-headed ice-man into the greatest paying football player of all time, one of his admirers persuaded the new-formed combination to try its hand at the screen. The result was talk at the time of a million dollar contract for Grange. Tests were taken in New York and he was said to be a "splendid picture type."

But the New York producers, though gaining a great deal of publicity out of Grange, did not actually sign him, and Red came out to Hollywood, still "free-lancing."

It was then that one of his backers is said to have obtained a release for a football picture through Film Booking Offices of America when he put up his contract. This "angel" was either clever himself or had shrewd advice, for he had Grange surrounded,洽谈, and directed by Sam Wood, at one time considered one of the best in Hollywood. Wood was said to be financially interested in the film himself. For he needed money to carry on and he said in producing a good picture for Grange that opportunity.

The whole production was filmed for about $75,000.

RED GRANGE was widely heralded as having "the day." His career in the cinema was said to be assured. His picture was chosen as one of the best of the season. It undoubtedly was. FBO sold it at a tremendous price to exhibitors throughout the country. Grange was one celebrity, Hollywood admitted, who had made good.

People liked him on the screen and they liked his first starring vehicle, "One Minute to Play."

If the story could have ended there, a pleasant memory would have lingered on. But Charlie Pyle and those around him were enthusiastic and they allowed his optimism to color their cinematic transactions. They made arrangements to make another picture to be released through and directed by John Ralston, a leading lady for Harold Lloyd in a number of his successes, and Walter Hiers, a well known comedian. They got Director Sam Wood back again and they decided to make an auto race story, similar to the kind popularized by the late Wally Reid. This time it is claimed that they were so confident of success that they backed their own venture with their own money and spent a great deal more than the first picture had cost. Indeed, there are those that say that virtually all of the profits of the first enterprise were put in the second production.

That, according to Hollywood tradition, was the mistake. They were making a year before making the sequel to "One Minute to Play." The third and perhaps most illustrious was the selection of a subject that they dared to do with only a slender chance of success. They had cropped up the old, old story of a celebrity thinking that he could achieve success in another field of endeavor without going through all the world of sacrifice that such success always demands.

So "The Motor Maniac" was made. It was handed over to FBO for release. Suddenly that organization discovered a great deal that they had never even suspected before. "One Minute to Play" had not been such a success after all. People had liked the picture on the first day. Throughout the country big crowds, football followers, had gone to see Red Grange, the celebrity, play football. But the result was a disappointment, the dye-in-the-wool film fan, who knew little or nothing of Grange, did not attend the show. They were more interested in a chase of Chaplin, Monroe, or Fairbanks or Lloyd. Grange had not yet proved himself to them. The exhibitor, when he paid a big price for the Grange picture, had hoped for the film fans to attend. The football ball enthusiasts were not large enough in number to compensate him for the cost of the film.

In the picture houses, both large and small, suffered from "One Minute to Play" though FBO and those who had backed the first venture had made money.

Not even a fool exhibitor once, but you can't catch him twice with the same bait. He was wise by now. He refused to consider "The Motor Maniac" at any price. Pyle and Grange were fable-hardy. They decided to keep road-show the picture. So they changed the name of it to "The Racin' Romeo" and prepared to send Grange and Walter Hiers around to some of the leading theaters of the country with it.

But there was no crying demand for their personal appearance. So that idea was also abandoned.

The production was sent out to do what it could on a small release basis, and though it failed to sell small houses in big cities and some of the big houses, endurance of the Grange film has a long, long road to travel before the cost will be returned.

THREE adventurers had started out; Grange, Pyle and Wood. Two were dependent upon athletic fame to see them through, even though they may not have admitted it. The third was a master of direction who just happened to lie down for the moment when Grange and Pyle came along. He would have gone up again and again, but their price was the biggest he had brought him back and today he stands among the leaders of his class again, while Grange and Pyle have found that there was more money in producing "Union diamond" type pictures for the country than in punching a time-clock in a Hollywood studio.

Salaries in motion pictures are as elusive as "yards of the duffer's golf score." Only a very few contract artists get big money, together with those who produce their own pictures. But the "doubled" salary of three or four thousand dollars a week is a good one. Each high-salaried star has earned his place by hard work and patient, persevering apprenticeship. A celebrity may sometimes be counted on in pictures an equivalent salary to what this restricted class receives, but the celebrity who gets it will have earned it, by years of work in his new field, and not by the glamour of the name he has brought to the films.

That is his handicap; not his aid!
The Stars That Never Were

mean that his laugh should have a sardonic ring—it was Pasquale's own fear that gave that laugh its timbre of bitterness.

"No wonder he looked so foreign," the casting director told the man's voice was loud.

He doesn't know any American at all, from the sound of things. Do you—" he was shouting—"Why do we always assume that those who do not understand (us are deaf)?"

"Do you know what I'm saying? You wept?" Pasquale did not know. Not one word of the director's question held meaning to him. Only Pasquale knew that the man's voice was loud. So loud that it had drowned out his own feeble efforts to make himself heard. How could he know that the director was not rejecting his plan for daredevil woodsmen of future allegiance to his small, vivid flag? How could he know that, to the director, his country was only a small pink spot upon an uninteresting map?

How could he know that to the director he was only the answer to a problem in casting—an answer almost providential!

And so they led him away. A little dark man who—since entering the casting director's office—had seemed to shrink in size; a little man who protested no longer—who walked, between the director's assistant and a chap from the wardrobe room, with a dragging tread. Through a great room, full of ropes and strange apparatus and glaring lights they walked. And Pasquale, brought up on the grim history of a certain insurrection, felt his blood boil.

This, no doubt, was some sort of a torture chamber! Through a roomful of cannon and rifles and sabres they went next. The man told himself of many an unsuccessful revolution—of many a lost cause. He spoke no longer, in his own tongue. Either these people did not understand—or they would not.

Really, it mattered very little. For he was at the end of things. There was no going on now—not from here. After his troubled, careful journey—despite the miles between him and that first prison cell—he had been captured. And the fruit of capture was death.

So they had told him. So he had known, without being told. . .

He did not think he did not even speak when they took his clothing from him and gave him a smock of some rough linen fabric. He did not protest when his dirty shoes were drawn from his feet, and his wooden shoes were substituted for them. He was limp, resistless tallow in their hands. One of the boys who worked in the wardrobe room was moved to be peculiar about it.

"I wonder if that guy has a valet when he's home?" he questioned. "Maybe he's a dock in disguise! I never seen a grown man so helpless."

They dressed him carefully. After all, he was the piece de resistance of a scene that might as well as a gash from the blase public. They put the clothing of a Belgian peasant upon his shaking figure with painstaking care. And—

Anybody could think, one of them said to Pasquale, "the boys being killed instead of being given a job to?"

But when it came to making up his face—to giving him the sense of pain and hollows of sorrow—the one who were preparing Pasquale for his great chance were powerless. For there was nothing that their art could do to improve upon the real Pasquale. He had made up art—had already done. One can not gild the lily. Neither can one paint the simulation of terror where terror really lives. . .

As they marched him from the room in which they had dressed him, Pasquale saw that there were other men, dressed as he was dressed, in the outer corridor. Perhaps a dozen of them.

An old chappie, with a white, tobacco stained beard who laughed, as he talked to the younger man who stood beside him.

"The ancient brave one!" Pasquale, in his heart, paid tribute. Again, when he heard another of the group—a young boy, this time—humming a song, he doffed his military helmet to shear gallantry. He wished that he were as brave as the young lad—brave enough to laugh. That he could be as gallant as the boy. Gallant—"that he might sing here, on the brink of eternity! But he could not—he was too tired of loo—too utterly weary of soul. Too shaken of spirit. It was all he could do to walk, as the others walked, without stumbling. He followed down a corridor through the room with the guns—the other, larger room of the ropes and the machines. And, at last, out of the room's fardoor—thank God there would be no torture!

And farther out into a great sunlit space surrounded by buildings.

All about, people were shouting excited directions. On a platform, at one end of the lot, a lovely lady, in a black frock and a black mantilla, was dancing. In another corner another man—in rough leather trousers and a flannel shirt—steadied a plunging horse. There was, somewhere, far off, the sound of a sobbing violin.

But Pasquale scarcely noticed. His gaze was riveted upon the line of men in grey green uniforms. Men who stood opposite a rough plaster wall. Men who held, in their steady hands, gleaming steel rifles.

So. That thing called destiny had again formed a circle. The rescue—the privation, the loss of citizenship, they meant nothing! It was to be the firing squad, after all. Just as it had been planned. Pasquale, walking stiffly forward, was quite unconscious of the grinding of cameras.

Was quite deaf to the calling voice of the man who directed the scene. He took his place, against the wall, in a way that was utterly mechanical.

Remember—the peasant who was the second from the left? The gaunt, dark little man? Who stared so desperately at the other armed men, the men in uniform?

The old fellow with the long beard shifted his tobacco from one cheek to the other. The boy stepped humming. The violin—a distance away—struck a high, quavering note. And the director shouted an order.

And it was then that Pasquale made his great dramatic appeal.

It was then, the critics later said—he had his moment. For his face changed, stiffened, grew tense.

And one hand, involuntarily, creep up to his heart. And his lips breathed something—something that even the critics did not recognize as a prayer in an alien tongue.

And then the guns, leveled in the hands of the pseudo firing squad, spoke. And the one by one, like mowed down poppies in a wheat field, the imitation peasants fell against their wall.

Some of them fell very badly, indeed—your extra man doesn't relish stone bruises! But Pasquale's fall was a perfect thing. He just stood forward with his hands gripping ahead of him. Just fell forward limply, into the dust.

Only when the others rose, laughing, and began to brush off their smocks, Pasquale did not rise.

The studio doctor, summoned hastily, called it heart failure.

old-fashioned as leg o' mutton sleeves, Mrs.
Pickford had helped her to find a new field for her artistry, all would have been well.

Instead of failing, as she did in "Rostita" and "Dorothy Vernon" because of lack of courage, they would have increased her opportunities.
But Mary's mother couldn't bear to cut Mary's curls.

Nor can anyone blame her.
Her love was not a selfish, cramping, smothering thing.

She dominated Mary's entire life, professionally and personally until Mary's marriage to Douglas Fairbanks. And after her marriage, Mrs. Pickford's influence did not diminish. For Douglas, like everyone else who knew her, saw the charm in her. Her ability, enjoyed her company because she was one of the wisest and most delightful of women, and loved her for Mary's sake as well as her own.

But if Mrs. Pickford dominated her daughter's life for many years, it was a loving and miraculously successful domination.

Without her, there's little Pickford would never have achieved her great place—the greatest place any woman ever has or ever will occupy in the motion picture art.

Their relation to each other was more than that of a loving mother and daughter. It was that of a sculptor and his masterpiece, of business associates, of great adventurers bound for the same goal.

Charlotte Smith, who kept a boarding house in Toronto, and was left a widow with three very young children and no money at all, was a great woman—one of the greatest figures ever produced by the motion picture business.

Early days of privation and trial, of starvation and despair, all for the greater lucky food and clothing and shelter for her little brood, did two great things for Charlotte Pickford.

They developed her own strength and determination and they won her the deathless love and respect of her daughter.

Mary never forgot. She never forgot her mother's courage and cheerfulness. Her fighting heart, her unflagging faith, her devotion to her children. For those early days were days of real poverty which scar the soul and bring it forth withered and embittered, or strong and determined.

Mrs. Pickford was, I think, one of the most charming women I have ever known.
Impossible to resist her sweetness, her amibiliity, her tolerance, her merry eye and her Irish tongue. Her sympathy was as wide as the ocean. Impossible not to respect her air of authority, her keen, concise knowledge, her way of handling people.

It was only where she loved too much that her wisdom failed her.

And she loved Mary's curls.

Why not?
They were, in a way, her own creation.
You may remember that when Mary first went into those little curls, she did not into her Mary's curls. She wore her hair as other girls did, in a knot at the back of her head. The long, beautifully arranged curls were Mrs. Pickford's idea.
She saw what could be done with them, how they could be made into a symbol. She tended them, played them up in pictures and publicity.

At last they became a tradition—and Mary's mother never was able to overcome that tradition.

As Mary's fame grew and the love of the world for the little girl grew, Mrs. Pickford saw her masterpiece complete. There stood her darling, his beloved child, known to and loved by more people than any other single woman in history.

And into her mother love, which was the strongest thing in her nature to begin with, came a sort of idolatry. There was no flaw in her in the mother.

Why change it?
During the years of Mary's greatest popularly, her mother stood beside her as a great prime minister and might stand beside a queen.
When Mary made "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and "Daddy Longlegs," and "Stella Maris," her mother was the chief factor in every step of every decision. And her decisions were always wise. She steered the ship steadily onward, watched the box office, watched the budget, managed the finances and the studio, took from Mary's shoulders all the details, fought all the battles.

In those days, Mary was almost never seen in public without her mother. With her mother the curls with the solid, black-haired, black-eyed woman was a familiar picture.

It is necessary to understand all these things and to understand a little of the character of Charlotte Pickford to understand the things that followed.

For time matchedonorably. It did not stand still even for that spirit of eternal youth, Mary Pickford.

Mary grew up.

She grew up sweetly. As a woman she has infinitely more beauty and charm and artistic ability than she had as a girl.

But she became a woman. She was no longer a little girl. Thirty streets were the length of her womanhood. If there had been no Pickford tradition tied to her, if she had no long, golden curls, the Mary Pickford of thirty could have sworn the public to ecstasy just as the Mary Pickford of sixteen did.

Perhaps she could have done it anyway—perhaps she can still do it.

But she failed in her first attempts because they lacked conviction, they were half-measures, they didn't possess the flame of her complete new personality. The curls were a constant reminder and she was just little Mary Pickford trying to play grown-up parts.

When Mary herself longed for new fields, new stories, new roles, when Mary saw herself that she had stagnated and that times likewise had changed, her mother refused to recognize any of it.

Always her advice was to follow the old formula, to retain the curls and all that went with them.

It is a significant fact that during her last picture, "My Best Girl" every bit of atmosphere could be produced to correspond to the old days was produced. The same music was played during what were, practically, the same scenes that Mary had been making for fifteen years. The same personnel surrounded her. It was a complete throw-back.

And it was to be Charlotte Pickford's last picture.

I don't suppose anybody could have been happier than she was then. And nothing can take from Mary the joy of knowing that she ever did one thing that shadowed those last days—her mother.

The masterpiece was still intact. The tradition was unaltered. The curls were still there.

So Mary, the artist, for five years sacrificed herself to Mary, the daughter.

Mary, who through years of experience in pictures, and because she inherited her mother's keen mind along with her own genius, ever let her mother know, I don't suppose, that there was any sacrifice. Perhaps, because she was her mother so much, she was unconscious of none.

But I do not believe, and even Mary herself couldn't make me believe, that she gave up her art to find a bigger field for herself, that she kept those curls, because she was afraid of is the most beautiful woman on the screen today.

Now the curls are gone. Before her are new worlds to conquer. She is at a time in her life when most great stage actresses are just coming into their own. She is much younger than Duse was when she achieved world fame and acclaim, much younger than Bernhardt was when she conquered the world of the theater. Yet she has already completed the greatest chapter in the life of any screen star. The battle before her is, practically, an attempt to come back. And she cannot come back as the girl with the curls. She must come back as a woman. She is photographing as well now as she has ever photographed.

A group of very famous screen folk were talking of Mary and her great step the other night. There were present two of the screen's greatest comedionnes, a director whom other directors still call master, two well-known producers, the most famous dramatic screen star, two well-known critics and one or two authors.

The consensus of opinion was that Mary Pickford could today take a story written either for Clara Bow or for Gloria Swanson and play it better, more convincingly and with more appeal than either of those great stars.

But she will fail again as she failed before if she tries half-measures. She must cut off her past as she cut off her curls. There is a new generation of screen fans. There is a new thought in the world. She must cast aside all fear, all thought of what is expected of Mary Pickford, of what her public has always wanted, and start a new cycle.

Even now she is experimenting somewhat with the new talking picture. Her voice has great magnetism. The new era of the talking picture may help her to begin this new epoch. If she succeeds, and she will succeed if she has the courage of complete conviction, she will be something more than a great star, a deathless personality, a tradition.

She will be a truly great artist and her name may be added to those of Duse and Bernhardt upon the roster of fame.

And when somewhere she meets her mother again, her success will justify her defiance of that tradition and no one will rejoice more gloriously than that great and loving woman—Mary's mother.

The “No” Woman

physically possible for her to grant it. If ten men came seeking alms, nine of them roguish and one deserving, Madame would prefer to aid all ten rather than miss the one really needy one.

Madame Glyn is a great lover of beauty and harmony. I shall never forget the expression of almost physical pain which passed over her face when introduced to the beautiful magenta study, where I am privileged to work, wearing a brilliant red dress! I realized at once the color scheme I was presenting and apologized, but she laughingly passed it off saying:

“I shall have to get the painter to daub some blue and crimson lake on you to match the rest of our magneta!”

MADAME GLYN has a tremendously keen sense of humor which never fails to get a “kick” out of the “lady-type” who, upon being introduced to her, says “Oh, my dear Madame Glyn! I have been waiting all my life to tell you about the terrible time I had reading ‘Three Weeks.’” I used to have to hide it under the mattress.

I suppose that particular brilliancy has been remarked to her some ten thousand or more times — enough to have lost its sparkle.

I say, “Yes, I suppose that’s true.”

I imagine a dozen times each day when he heard that purring, pseudo-aristocratic voice which could belong to none other than a photograph artist’s solicitor that voice which so clearly drops it’s “Miss” from nine until late, and rolls them desperately after hours.

“Would I not like to drop in and have Signor Granado take photographs?” No obligations whatsoever. Signor would be so charmed to make my acquaintance, Miss Van-Something-or-other (she to whom the sweet potato vocal cords belong) assures and assures and assures.

They would be so delighted and enchanted to have the pleasure of “doing” me.

One hates to admit being so verdant, but there was one time when I fell for the photographic idea. First time, of course. You see I’d promised a likeness to one of my old college pros and was just about to look up a photographer, so I was ripe for plunging.

When I went to get my proofs, the Lady Receptionist asked me what day Madame Glyn was working. I said I’d never heard of her. This lady had not yet spoken to her about the matter, the Office Queen automatically shortened her a’s.

“I’m sorry then, but I can’t let you see your proofs. You know Signor is not in the social service game. Unless you wanta give us forty bucks.”

I DID not. In that event I would choose my own photographer. As the receptionist would say in six hours, I had “sailed” something.

One of the most thrilling experiences I had ever had took place in Hollywood. I had not lived in California long when I first became associated with Madame Glyn and everyone said, “What a gorgeous opportunity to get so acquainted! You’ll meet so many interesting people.”

Of course I did. But they all wanted something.

Then Madame was about casting a picture, I had to interview about two hundred people a day and sort out a few for her to see (mostly actors and actresses most of them looked through me) not at me.

One day a keen looking girl came into the office with a Miss K., a screen actress I knew. This girl, Helen Hall, we call her, was a beginner in pictures and anxious to get on, but she did not ask to meet Madame Glyn, nor did she appear to have any particular motive except to meet me. This went down like aromatic castor oil with me. Miss K. had told her what a charming secretary Madame Glyn had, and bla-bla-bla — which went down better still, this being only natural, as I over the telephone fairly fed up on being a motion picture adjutant. I was fearfully nice to the new girl and went out of my way to say I thought she really ought to meet Madame Glyn, and she assured me she would give her a good part. But Helen Hall said “Oh no, you have enough people hounding you already!” Really, I couldn’t impose myself on Madame Glyn, she is imposed upon enough already.

“But what I would like is to have you come over to my house some evening. We have lovely informal little parties and I’d so love to have you meet some of my friends.”

And a definite invitation led me to a charming house in the hills on the following Saturday evening.

I shall never forget that nightmare night. As soon as I arrived I sensed something queer in the atmosphere. The orchestra seemed to have had a commercial wrap.

FIRST I was introduced to a prosperously fat man who chose a Waltz during which to tell me in glumly tones what odds of money Madame Elinor Glyn could make if she’d just leave it to him to select some good old Los Angeles real estate for her. And don’t forget it, girlie, I’d stick the old post-up sour to take good care of you! If you’ll arrange for me to meet the lady, that’s all you need to do! ‘This daddy’s all that you’re independent in a year from now!’

There was no air of the usual vaudeville shouting and dazed as Helen brought up quite an interesting-looking man who soon was launched on the merits of the automobile business.

He winked every few seconds as he talked.

“Madame Glyn has offered to have several of our cars,” he said with a significant look which had to miss a couple of hearts, to find its kind of a place was I anyway? I wondered. My partner left me in no doubt as to his intentions.

If I could maneuver to “land the Glyn business” between the two of us, it would be a lesser roadster of my own providing, also, that I would be willing to be a “nice little pal”—whatever that may entail.

HE was lonely—his wife was incompatible— I thought it took two for that—but he was it may, I mentally resolved, now that I was in this mess, I might as well get all the information I could. I ventured to ask him how he could afford so generous an offer. He rolled his eyes all around the room and back to me and they seemed to get rounder with the rolling. Then he cleared his throat impressively and started on that old familiar round which any girl who’s ever been out on her own will recognize. I refer to the ditty which begins, “You know I feel as though I’d known you always:”—and which ends with something with flourishing on.

His wife was a typical home woman—and he well, he was a gay old dog. He had made a new creature of him when I walked into the room that night and who knows what might be something — well — or something more than mere business partners.

I was at the point of chucking and I was glad to be rescued, though it was only a moment until I was again being “approached.”

During the remainder of the evening I suffered through three more lucrative propositions peppered in various degrees with the personal element. I still smile to myself now and then as I recall the flowery phrasing of the ocean club promoter—and the clumsy methods of the dentist.

The next morning Miss Hall brought me a printed list of the products represented by the guests at the party the night before. But then I was a wiser—and sadder—girl. I handed it back to her without comment and she shrugged her shoulders in contempt for my ways and remarked, "You're a fool!"

OTHER episodes have followed, many of them not too pleasing, but I have learned my hardest lesson from Miss Hall. I was never so green again, at least not the same vivid hue of grass green.

I will admit that I was once afterwards locked up in a florist's vault (and who would suspect a florist of being so desperate for distinguished clientele?)

But he was a shrimpy little coward so I wasn't the least frightened. I simply jumped at him and said "Boo!" and he tremblingly opened the door.

There was a hand cream demonstrator who bored me until I allowed him to leave a sample with me for Madame Glyn. I told her Madame never uses creams but she vowed that in every woman's life comes one day when the hands chap. She still calls me up persistently to see if Madame has tried the lotion. She even had the nerve to ask me if I couldn't manage to have Madame go out without gloves some raw day.

Can you feature woman's inhumanity to woman?

Some of my bribery experiences are not at all sordid and are even filled with human interest and often pathos. One happening in particular I shall always remember with sympathy. I answered the telephone one day and a tiny, frightened old voice asked, "Is that the secretary to Madame Elinor Glyn?" When I assured her of my identity she seemed scarcely to know what to say next. She kept repeating—"This is REALLY the secretary to Madame Glyn?"

After assuring her several more times, I grew impatient and insisted upon knowing what she desired.

"I wish to see you, Miss," she said in a terribly humble little voice.

"Me?" I said.

"YES, Miss, I'll meet you any time you say and any place, if I can see you for five minutes." Of course this was nothing new—I'd heard that same story a hundred times a day for months, but the difference lay in the frightened little voice and manner. I promised to meet her in the lobby at noon and she told me over and over that she would wear a big red rose so I'd be sure to recognize her.

When I found her I knew I never could have missed her—rose or no rose—she was so fragile and old and wee. She presented a

Do you realize it's extravagant to use towels for removing cold cream? Do you know old cloths are dangerous, because they rub dirt and germs back into the skin? As a matter of fact, towels—soo—usually rub the cream in, instead of off. They aren't absorbent enough.

Try Kleenex! It's the new way, the approved way to absorb cream, make-up, dirt from the surface of the skin. It comes in soft, snowy-white, tissue-thin sheets. You use it once, then discard it, with all the impurities that might mar the loveliness of your complexion.

Beautiful actresses consider it the last word in make-up assets. Beauty experts use it in their shops and recommend it to patrons. Send right now for a generous trial package and discover the delights of Kleenex.

Keep Your Skin Young

Remove all blemishes and discolorations by regularly using pure Mercized Wax. Get an ounce, and use as directed. Pure, almost invisible particles of aged skin peel off, until all defects, such as pimples, liver spots, tan, freckles and large pores have disappeared. Skin is beautifully clear, soft and velvety, and face looks years younger. Mercized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and age lines, use the face cream. comical picture, a tiny little old lady of some eighty wry years, wearing a big red copper rose, almost as large as her head. The old darling was in a positive tremor of joy when I introduced myself. She nervously thrust an envelope into my hand. It was addressed in precise lavender and old lace hand. "To the Secretary of My Adored Madame Elinor Glyn—the woman who is true to her own convictions.

I had difficulty in keeping the tears back when I read the message. It was as follows:

"Dear Miss:—Here is a fifty dollar bill. It's a lump sum to you and I'll do my best work for you. I've hard it for years and the good Lord might take me before I get to see her—"I just can't die without telling her how much she's done for me.

"Please, young woman, help me to meet her, and I'll be everlasting grateful. I ain't never had the gift of gab—so I've brought it all in writing. Bless you."

NEEDED to say, the little old dear got a hearing—and without a fee of course. What's more, she got a complete set of autographed photographs of Madame's books and made a lifelong friend.

So much for Hollywood. It was simple compared to New York. Here, the technique of getting bangles and bracelets and baits is de- veloped to a high degree.

Just lately I was approached by a furious man who wanted to sell Madame an ermine coat. He was not so crude as to offer her commis- sion for my services in steering Madame into his shop.

He offered me first a card containing my ad. to buy my dresses at a wholesale house; he next sent his friend who imports French chiffon stockings, to see me that I might buy my hose at an attractive discount. He inquired if I were married and, when I said no, asked: "Maybe you would like to see some men, yes? They take you out to dinner and treat you oh, so nice. Do you like him rich and old maybe, or just a plain home man?"

And of course he offered me a discount on a coat for myself.

FUNNIEST of all are the letters from laun- drys and private washwomen. I get eight or ten a day.

One of the private class offered to do Madame's lingerie free of charge just so she could see it and handle it and tell her friends that she washed for Madame Elisor Glyn.

The other fanciers promise of free permanent waves for my own naturally curly hair if I will help them to obtain Madame's custom.

People offer shoes, hats, gowns and hand- bags seek Madame as a customer not only for the sale itself, but to be able to say to other customers:

"This is a very smart thing! Madame Glyn bought it exactly like it from us the other day!"

Every day some new proposition comes to me—a jewelry, a furniture dealer, a picture dealer, a masseuse, all with the idea that if Madame Glyn would patronize them they would be as popular as "Three Weeks."

But to all such comers my refrain is "No, No, No! It's a great life—and you mustn't weaken.

SHOW PEOPLE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Metro's life-size, slightly xerographic portrait of the funny side of the good that would get into the movies. Recommended. (April.)

SILKLEG—Fox. —Midge Bellamy demonstrates how to sell silk stockings. Whipped cream. (March.)

SKINNER'S BIG IDEA—Fox.—After a long time-lapse, Bryant Washburn continues the adventure picture. (May.)

SKY-SCRAPER—Pathe De Mille.—Love among the riveters. The locations are thrilling, although the plot is hackneyed. With Sue Carol and William Boyd. (April.)

SMART SET, THE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—William Haines takes up polo. Always the same, fresh and Segment. Good. (June.)

SOME THINGS ALWAYS HAPPEN—Paramount.—Respectfully in a haunted house. Good comedy thrill and lots of action. With the excellent Hedy Lamarr, Ralph Forbes, (May.)

SO THIS IS LOVE—Columbia.—Slightly goody two-shoes of a dressmaker's assistant turned prize-fighter—all for love. With William Collier, Jr., and Shirley Mason. (July.)

SOUTH SEA LOVE—FBO.—Just like any other brand of love—all of inconsistencies. With Patsy Ruth Miller. (June.)

SPEEDY—Lloyd-Paramount.—Harold Lloyd captures the dash and excitement of Manhattan. An ingenious and high-powered comedy. For the whole family, of course. (May.)

SPORTING AGE—Columbia.—Good acting and fine direction lift this triangle story above the average. Special honors to Belle Bennett and Holmes Herbert. (June.)

SPORTING GOODS—Paramount.—Richard Dix plays an entertaining salesman in one of the very best currentaight comedies. (March.)

SQUARE CROOKS—Fox.—Original variations of the usual crook business lift this comedy above the ordinary. Jack Oakie, a three-year-old kid, runs away with the laughs. (April.)

STATE STREET SAIDIE—Warners.—Can you believe it? Another underworld story. And not an amusing one. (May.)

STOCKS AND BLONDES—FBO.—Romance among the chorus girls and brokers. Slightly bisty for the family trade. With Jacqueline Logan and "Skeets" Gallagher. (June.)

STORMY WATERS—Tiffany-Stahl.—Eve Sedgwick finds her story in the tropics, but the love in the tropics doesn't quite come off. (April.)

STRANGE CASE OF CAPTAIN RAMPER—Deutsch-First National.—German picture with original plot. Just a bit heavy. (April.)

STREET ANGEL—Fox.—Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell continue to remain in Seventh Heaven. A good acting story, admirably acted by all means seen. (April.)

STREET OF SIN, THE—Paramount.—Technically a fine picture, but a brutal tale of the London slums, is repellent. The least satisfactory of Edward Jannings' American productions. (July)

STREETS OF SHANGHAI—Tiffany-Stahl.—Dirty work in China and Japan—undeniably reminiscent of a lot of better ideas. Not so much. (May.)

STREIGNER WITH THE—Excellent.—Just one long layoff. (April.)

TELLING THE WORLD—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—That comic strip, Bill Hailey, goes to China, with more darned fun, in a show. Robert Young, who makes his debut in this one, is all to the good. (April.)

TEMPEST—United Artists.—Interesting story of the Russian Revolution. While John Barrymore is starred, it has Camilla Horn's picture. Here's a real find. (June.)

TEMATUTIONS OF A CHORUS GIRL—First Division.—Not naughty, just foolish. Betty Compson makes the most of a maidlin character. (June.)

TENDERLOIN—Warner.—This time the dirty clothes. The blonde, not so farcical, portrays the lady giving her an excuse to register a lot of anguish. (March.)

TENTH AVENUE—Pathe-De Mille.—Boarding house life on the wrong side of Manhattan. Heavy melodrama and vividly played by Phyllis Haver, Victor Varconi and Joseph Callela. (June)

THEIR HOUR—Tiffany-Stahl.—Wherein the demure girl outsmarts the fast stepper. With Dorothy Sebastian, Johnnie Harson and Jean Marlowe. Not for the children. (June.)

TIEF IN THE DARK, THE—Fox.—Supposed to give you to death. But it merely puts you to sleep. (May.)

THOROUGHBREDS—Universal.—Once again the innocent country lad falls in with a gang of wild women. Good direction and some track-and-field scenes help some. (April.)

THREE SINNERS—Paramount.—Pola Negri as a good girl gone wrong. Not so wonderful as the good girl, but oil, after she has gone wrong! Sophisticated. (April.)

TILLIE'S PUXTURED ROMANCE—Christie-Paramount.—Rare antique that has been rode for no good reason. Even with the hard work of Louise Fazenda, it is mostly just plain silly. (May.)

TRAGEDY OF YOUTH, THE—Tiffany-Stahl.—Patsy Ruth Miller and Buster Collier in an ultra-modern comedy showing the folly of youthful marriages. Smooth and sophisticated. (June.)

TRAIL OF '98, THE—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—A mighty parsimonious of the Klondike rush, told with power and breath-taking realism. Congratulations to Clarence Brown for making a really thrilling film. (May.)

TREE OF LIFE, THE—First National.—The story of the world's creation, no less! E. H. Hotchkiss, with the assistance of the University of California, prepared the scientific data. Educational and worth your while. (April.)

TRICK OF HEARTS, A—Universal.—Host Gibson in a simple-minded story. Rather puerile. (June.)

TURN BACK THE HOURS—Gotham.—All right, turn back the hours and what do you get? Just a quickie, with a lot of somewhat players filling in between more important pictures. (May.)

TWO FLAMING YOUTHS—Paramount.—Introducing a new writing team—W. C. Fields and Chester Conklin. Great fun for all but the chronic weepers. (March.)

TWO LOVERS—United Artists.—Some direction, next acting and fine setting cannot disguise the fact that this is the same old plot. But Ronald Colman and Vilma Banzy are simply swell. (May.)

UNDER THE BLACK FLAG—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Flashy, "the wonder dog," shows that the dogs did their share in fighting the war. (March.)

UNDER THE TINTO RIM—Paramount.—Mor gold rush. Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in a fairly exciting Zane Grey story. (April)

UNITED STATES SMITH—Gotham.—Eddie fan and Mickey Rooney in a roughneck but funny comedy. (April.)

UPLAND RIDER, THE—First National.—Ken Maynard rides the winning horse in this race that gives the old homestead a routine plot but a grand horse. (June.)

VAMPING VENUS—First National.—A "Connecticut Yankee" comedy designed to get back some of the movie spoils of "The Big Honeymoon." Cooked enough to be popular. Thelma Todd is droll and Charley Murray is funny. What else do you want? (June.)

VANISHING PIONEER, THE—Paramount.—The return of Jack Holt to the Paramount ranch, and the result is a Grade A Western. (April.)

WALKING BACK—Pathe-De Mille.—Trivial story of the younger generation made interesting by the presence of the charming Sue Carol. (June.)

WALLFLOWERS—FBO.—One of those stories that is motivated by a trick will. Light but adequate. (April.)

WARMING HER—Paramount.—Richard Dix in an original and really funny story of a bushwhacker pitcher. Family diversion. (June.)

WARNING, THE—Columbia.—Jack Holt's sense of humor saves this melodrama of the Hong Kong kong from being dull. (May.)

13 WASHINGTON SQUARE—Universal.—A mediocre mystery story with a bit of comedy and a good performance by ZeSu Pitts. Also with Alice Joyce and Jean Hersholt. Only fair. (March.)

"Let's Both Reduce"
It's so easy to lose fat

Excess fat is a serious blight, both to men and women. Not only to beauty, but to health and vitality. And multitudes, in late years have proved that it can be ended.

Look about you. Note the slender figures which once were fat. You will see that some new factor has changed the old conditions. Science, a few years ago, discovered a great cause of excess fat. It lies in a certain gland deficiency which greatly affects nutrition. Then a great medical laboratory developed the Marmola prescription. Now people have used it for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. The use has grown to enormous proportions by users telling others.

The good results are seen in every circle. Most of you have friends who know them.

WE AMERICANS—Universal.—A fine drama of our immigrant. The struggles, loyalty and problems of these new Americans will make you more tolerant and sympathetic. A fine study in patriotism, splendidly acted. (May.)

WHEEL OF CHANCE.—First National.—Richard Barthelmess does some good acting in a dual role. You forget the impossibly of the story in your interest in the star's acting and the dramatic situations. (August.)

WHEN THE LAW RIDES—FOX.—Something better than the conventional Western plot. With Tom Tyler and Frankie Darro. (August.)

WHIP WOMAN, THE.—First National.—A picture so badly made the audience bunched. Through bad judgment of a reviewer, we failed to warn you how bad it was. (May.)

WHITE SHADOWS OF THE SOUTH SEAS—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.—Mae Clarke and Lew Cody in a comedy of marriage that is naughty, sophisticated, but full of laughs. (June.)

WIFE RELATIONS, THE.—Columbia.—Naive romance of an heroine who finds a job and a husband in a department store. (August.)

WILD WEST ROMANCE—Fox.—Some thrill in the Western, but reviewer, will never fill the Stanton of Tom Mix. (August.)

WILLFUL YOUTH—Peers.—Heavy melodrama in the tall type with Kenneth Harlan and Edna Murphy. (June.)

WOMAN'S WAY, A.—Columbia.—This time the diamond necklace is lost in the Latin Quarter of Paris. (June.)

WOMEN WHO DARED—Excelsior.—Stunning party to the lower East Side, as the movies picture it. (August.)

YELLOW LILY, THE.—First National.—Concerning the lost diamond, and lilm of falling in love with ladies who live on the other side of the tracks. The story is not bad, and the reviewer found it interesting. (June.)

YOU CAN'T BEAT THE LAW—Rayart.—The title tells the story. Full of crooks and such-like. Cornelius Keefe is the handsome cop. (May.)

HEART THROBS

Seattle, Wash.
Bouquets for "Sorrell and Son."

Living next door to us is a young man whose wife recently deceased. For parts unknown with another man, leaving her husband with two darling little boys, four and seven years of age.

For some time the deserted husband, to feel very bitter, hated the sight of his boys, and kept his home totally uncared for.

One Sunday afternoon we asked him to leave the boys with our mother and go to the movies with us. He replied that he didn't care for movies, as they were nothing but "mush." However, he came along and we saw "Sorrell and Son." Our friend sat very still throughout the show and we didn't talk about the picture on our way home.

But inside of one week our neighbor had hired help to clean his house, re-seed his lawn and plant flowers and shrubbery in his garden. Best of all he wired East for his widowed mother to come and make a home for him and his little boys.

And inspiring pictures? Yes, give us more like it.

The Secret Is Out
What secret? The secret of woman's power over man. You'd better get on to this quick, before the girls beat you to it.

Adela Rogers St. Johns
One of the greatest living analysts of the emotions of women, has spent two years studying the lives of the sirens of history—how they won their men—and better yet—How they HELD them. She is telling the girls all about it in a series of articles in Smart Set called—

What Every Woman Wants to Know

The First Being What Cleopatra Knew About It

Was the love power of these old world women a secret that died with them? Or can a modern girl apply their technique today? Can a woman get a man if she thinks rather than feels?

Does sex, without charm, captivate but not hold? Does charm, without sex, last and triumph? Are feminine brains more important to love than feminine beauty?

Every young man thinking of marriage—every married man—owes it to himself to learn the secrets of women from these masters of men. But above all he should have his sweetheart or his wife read them—in

Keep your hands lovely by protecting them this way all day long...

A gesture may live longer in the memory than words...

Few hands these days can be kept in idle luxury for their beauty's sake. For all day home-keeping hands are doing things! How is one to protect them, then, to keep them charming—and young?

Has it occurred to you that work may not be as hard on your hands as the use of harsh, common soap? Crude soap robs the skin of its natural oils, parching it into tiny lines. That is why so many hands look older than they should.

To keep your hands young, why not use Ivory whenever your hands must touch soap? Ivory is so bland a toilet soap that doctors recommend its use for very sensitive complexions. Naturally, then, it will protect your hands, too.

Gentle as Ivory is, don't be afraid to put it to all sorts of tasks—from washing dishes to cleansing bathroom enamel. Launder your printed tub frocks and fine tinted linens with Ivory, to keep their colors like new. Clean your painted furniture and woodwork and expensive linoleum with Ivory, too, to protect their glossed surfaces.

But most important—Ivory guards your hands so that their every gesture may tell a story of youthful charm!

For your hands' sake, isn't it fortunate that Ivory is so reasonably priced?
